IF YOUR DEALER IS OCCASIONALLY OUT OF CAMELS

—it's because hundreds of millions of Camel cigarettes are now being sent to men in the service. In addition to the government's own purchases for our fighting men, veterans' organizations, fraternal orders, clubs, friends and relatives everywhere are sending them Camels. Yes, Camels! After all, Camels are the favorite cigarette with men in all the services—Army, Navy, Marine Corps, and Coast Guard.*

First in the Service
—AND THE SERVICE COMES FIRST!

WHILE we have pushed Camel's production to new peaks to meet this overwhelming demand from Uncle Sam's fighting men and from the folks at home, yet if your dealer does not always have Camels for you, he asks you to be patient while he is temporarily out of them, believing you will agree that the men in the service should come first.

* Based on actual sales records, the favorite cigarette with men in the Army, the Navy, the Coast Guard, and the Marines is Camel.

From where I sit...

by Joe Marsh

All this talk about people over 40 being too old for a new job! Well, you ought to meet Pop Graham, the new foreman at the iron works. Pop must be over seventy—yet soon as the war broke out he started out on a brand new career.

"I reckon Uncle Sam can use me now," he says—and pitches in with both hands, making armor plate.

Yes, there's a lesson for the young folks in Pop Graham's spirit. And when the hard day's work is over, you'll find Pop relaxing and having a cool refreshing glass of beer.

From where I sit that's still another lesson we can learn from older people—moderation. Moderation in enjoying good beer...tolerance for others who enjoy this friendly, wholesome beverage of moderation.

These Are The Facts - - - - This Is The Record

BE IT REMEMBERED:

It was the REPUBLICAN party which gave the State the notorious administration of "Flim Flam Flem" Sampson with its pardons, school textbooks and cement plants and its record of plunging Kentucky $6,000,000 deeper into debt.

It was the REPUBLICAN isolationist, John M. Robsion ,Kentucky's only GOP congressman, who voted against the Selective Service Act and for every isolationist measure that has come before Congress.

It was the REPUBLICAN Governor Edwin P. Morrow, who after declaring that the League of Nations was not an issue in his campaign for Governor, took the stump in 1920 to denounce and lead the campaign in the State against the League.

It was the REPUBLICAN party, state and national which fought President Wilson's peace program and the League of Nations and is today threatening President Roosevelt's program for world peace.

It was the REPUBLICAN party which gave the Nation the Tea Pot Dome Scandal during the Harding administration which shook the very faith of the Nation in the integrity of its government.

It is the REPUBLICAN party which now offers the State its hand-picked candidate, Judge S. Willis, who owes his nomination without opposition to his party henchmen, Sampson, Robinson, twice-repudiated by Kentucky's electorate King Swope and the political trickster Robert H. Lucas.

"BY THEIR DEEDS SHALL YE KNOW THEM."

LEST WE FORGET:

It was DEMOCRATIC administration which gave the State its present Old Age Assistance Law under which monthly pensions are now being paid to more than 53,000 old persons in Kentucky.

It was a DEMOCRATIC administration which paid the huge State debt, amounting to more than $29,000,000, and has given the State a cash surplus of $11,000,000.

It was a DEMOCRATIC administration which gave the State its present Unemployment Compensation Law under which weekly benefits are paid jobless Kentucky workers. Kentucky's jobless fund is the most solvent in the Nation.

It was a DEMOCRATIC administration which rehabilitated the long neglected State institutions and public buildings through expenditure of more than $4,500,000.

It was a DEMOCRATIC administration which gave the State its present Teachers Retirement Law and appropriated $650,000 a year to make it operate.

It was a DEMOCRATIC administration which sponsored the amendment and enacted the necessary legislation providing for an educational equalization fund for the benefit of the poorer counties.

It was a DEMOCRATIC administration which gave the State its present law for aid of the needy blind and dependent children.

It was a DEMOCRATIC administration which gave the State its rural electrification program which has meant so much to the farm folk of Kentucky.

It was a DEMOCRATIC administration which sponsored the TVA Enabling Act which makes available electric power produced by the TVA for use in Kentucky.

It was a DEMOCRATIC administration which sponsored the Soil Conservation Act.

It was a DEMOCRATIC administration which gave the State its present modern system of high-type roads, rural highways and ferry-repiacing bridges, many of which are now toll-free and others shortly to be so.

Wartime Lighting Suggestions

HOW TO GET MORE LIGHT FROM YOUR PRESENT EQUIPMENT

Eliminate Colored Bulbs

Amber-orange and flametint bulbs in round or flame shape give a mellow, amber lighting effect, but there is a considerable loss in light to obtain it. Replace them with inside-frosted lamps of the same wattage and you'll get a lot more light from the same amount of current. It's a good idea, too, to see that bulbs are equipped with shades to prevent glare and to direct light where it is needed. We'll gladly help you in any way we can to make the most of your lighting.

OTHER WAYS TO CONSERVE LIGHT

1. Remove and clean lamp bulbs and lamp bowls regularly. Dry thoroughly before using again.
2. Keep shade linings light. Clean or brush regularly. Repaint or reline dark-colored paper or parchment shades.
3. Sit close enough to the lamp to get all the help it can give your eyes.
4. Avoid direct glare from lamp bulbs by using shades deep enough and wide enough.
5. Arrange furniture so one lamp can serve two people. But be sure lamp is not too far away from either person.
6. Turn off lamps not in use. Lamp bulbs use critical materials. Make them last longer.

Hardest Wood Used for Shaft Bearings in Ships

Many of the ships being built today use wood as material for stern shaft bearings—the hardest wood in the world—usually called lignum-vitae. According to the dictionary, lignum-vitae is also known as the zygophyllaceous genus guaiacum—but this term, obviously isn't often used around shipyards.

The wood, in addition to being very hard, is also very heavy—it is so heavy that it will not float in water—so hard that shaping it is a most difficult procedure—yet each block is worked to a .004 inch exactness. In a six-foot stern shaft bearing, there are 128 separate blocks. Channels between the blocks permit the circulation of salt water, the only lubrication necessary.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Jap Forces Smashed in Sea and Air As Allies Pound Main Supply Bases; Germans Fall Back to Massico Ridge; Higher Dependency Allotments Fixed

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysis and not necessarily of this newspaper.)
Released by Western Newspaper Union.

U. S. army engineers clear path through ruins of a large town in southern Italy, where bitter fighting has raged along the road to Rome. Picture shows streets piled high with rubble, against a background of blackened and hollow buildings, stripped to skeletons by bombings.

ITALY: Tough Going

Rooted from their Volturno river line, the Nazis fell back on prepared positions along the Massico ridge, 2,500 feet high.

Following their usual tactics, the Germans were expected to hold out until the Allies take the time to concentrate superior numbers along the different points in the mountains to overpower the rugged outposts.

When driven from Massico ridge, the Nazis were expected to retire to the Garigliano river, some eight miles distant. Behind the Garigliano river, it was thought they might make a stand in the mountains, which dip almost into the sea in this sector.

Although the Nazis' action is of a delaying nature, it involves bitter fighting, since German artillery planted on the mountain sides can fire down on Allied forces fighting their way up, and Nazi machine gunners and mortar batteries can hide in the rugged country and spray U. S. and British soldiers crawling forward in the open.

SOUTHWEST PACIFIC: New Fight

Following Gen. Douglas MacArthur's grand strategy of crippling the position of the enemy in a certain area by knocking out the main base from which it operates, Allied aircraft pounded the big Jap supply center of Rabaul on New Britain island.

Once the feeder point for Jap troops in the central areas of the Solomons and New Guinea, Rabaul has lost much of its strategic importance with the enemy's surrender of these territories. But it still is being used to supply the Japs in the northern areas of the Solomons and New Guinea, and as a base for enemy shipping and aircraft, can endanger any Allied move northward.

Concentrating on Rabaul, Allied bombers sank more than 100 vessels lying in the harbor, and destroyed more than 200 aircraft.

Striking close to Japan's home waters, U. S. U-boats have sunk 98 more enemy merchant ships, to bring to 460 the total bagged.

DRAFT: Propose New Allotments

Wives of American servicemen would continue to receive $50 monthly from the government, but payments for support of children would be raised to $30 for the first child and $20 for all others, according to new dependency allotments established in congressional bills.

Under the present system, wives receive $50 monthly, but only $12 is paid for the first child and $10 for every other one. The new allotments also would boost payments in most cases to collateral dependents, such as parents, grandchildren, brothers or sisters. Payment to one parent for chief support, for instance, would be $50 monthly instead of the current rate of $37.

Under the new bills, regular dependency allowances would be paid to the husbands and children of the WACs or WAVES, if they relied on them for chief support. The government would make the whole of the first monthly payment, instead of waiting for the soldier's contribution of $22, and payments would be expanded to include the top three enlisted grades in addition to the present four lowest.

ALLIES MEET: Talk in Moscow

Swooping down over Moscow, two brown Liberator bombers finally came to rest on the Russian capital's chief airdrome. From the planes stepped American Secretary of State Cordell Hull and British Foreign Minister Anthony Eden. Waiting to greet them was Russian Foreign Commissar Vyacheslav Molotov.

Although the officials were expected to discuss the possibility of the U. S. and Britain opening a second front in France, it was anticipated that the chief consideration would revolve around re-establishment of European boundaries after the war, with emphasis on Russia's claim to the Baltic states and parts of Finland, Poland and Rumania.

Meanwhile a new lend-lease agreement signed in London, pledges the U. S., Britain and Canada to increase supplies to Russia this winter to help her avert famine and carry on the war against Germany.

Dnieper Battle Rages

The titanic struggle on the Dnieper river increased in violence as the Russians poured more troops across the broad waterway and the Nazis rushed reinforcements to bolster their sagging lines.

Although apparently successful in stabilizing their lines in the north, the Germans found the going rough in the central and southern sectors. The Russians were successful in shifting their attacks from one point to another and keeping the Nazis off balance.

These tactics were evident in the Kiev, Melitopol and Kremenchug regions. After being held near Kiev, the Reds switched their attack to Melitopol to the south. When the Germans rushed reinforcements to the area, the Russians then shifted to heavy attacks on Kremenchug to the north.

OL' MAN RIVER: Back in Business

America's inland waterway system—once a principal artery for transportation and freight—has come back into its own in World War II.

Addressing the 25th annual Mississippi Valley association convention in St. Louis, Mo., Defense Transportation Director Joseph Eastman declared America's inland waterways will carry 157 billion ton-miles of freight in 1943, a ton-mile being the movement of a ton one mile.

With 95 per cent of the freight on the Mississippi consisting of essential material, Eastman said the river's system embraces 5,000 barges from 100 to 3,000 tons in capacity, and 1,000 towboats from 200 to 2,500 horsepower. Last year, Eastman revealed, 16½ billion ton-miles of freight were carried over the system.

The waterway system has been moving record loads despite a decrease in facilities because of the transfer of many Great Lakes and inland carriers to ocean service.

HIGHLIGHTS . . . in the week's news

ARMS: The United States is supplying arms, equipment and food to 32 fronts, the senate naval committee reveals. Some, it was said, are as much as "17,000 miles from the point of origin."

SPAIN: Exiled Spanish Loyalists will form a "government in exile" possibly in Mexico, according to a statement by Diego Barrio, ex-president of the republic.

FIRE: Losses resulting from fires during September were the largest for any September since 1932, and 29 per cent higher than the same month last year, the National Board of Fire Underwriters announce. Losses amounted to $26,488,000.

WRITER: Paris newspapers report the death of Romain Rolland, 75, a French writer and winner of the Nobel peace award.

AXIS MORALE IS CRACKING

Military reports that have leaked out of Germany in the past two or three weeks indicate quite definitely that Nazi morale is cracking. These reports, through channels which cannot be revealed, were quite definite even before Propaganda Minister Goebbels delivered his give-away speech warning that saboteurs on the home front would be beheaded.

Reports also are definite that the German army no longer has the reserves, no longer has the fighting backbone for a long war. Resentment against Hitler boils beneath the surface in the German army. German soldiers will keep on fighting, and are toughly trained, desperately hitting adversaries. But their heart isn't in it anymore.

All these factors, plus powerful wallops by the Allies, have created an atmosphere in which anything might happen. It is an atmosphere not unlike that which existed in the autumn of 1918. There are those in high places who think the war in Europe might be over anytime this winter, depending entirely on Nazi morale.

But in Asia the war is moving at a snail's pace. In Burma, though the rains are already over, nothing has happened. Many observers think that nothing will happen until late this winter, and that the real drive through Burma toward South China will be reserved for a year from now—the fall of 1944.

WILL ROGERS IN LONDON

Congressman Will Rogers of California, son of the cowboy humorist, came back from London singing the praises of American-British co-operation in England.

American troops, which he described as the new "Army of Occupation," live off the fat of the land and are treated royally by the British. There is nothing too good for them. Only trouble is they occasionally take a girl away from a British Tommy.

Will's father was a frequent visitor in London, and everyone remembered him. So it was like old home week for the young congressman from California.

BRITISH IDLE OIL

Maine's eagle-eyed Senator Brewster met Gen. B. B. Somervell, chief of the army's service forces on the Pacific island of Fiji, immediately tackled him on the dynamite-laden, all-important question of why the U.S.A. was supplying nearly 70 per cent of all Allied oil, though we have only 25 per cent of the world's oil reserves.

"Right around the Persian Gulf," reminded Senator Brewster, "the British have oil refineries and limitless quantities of oil. Why don't we get more oil out of the Near East instead of hauling it all the way from Texas?"

"We are rushing refining equipment to Arabia as quickly as we can," replied General Somervell.

"Yes," countered the senator from Maine, "but why use precious shipping space carting refining equipment half way around the world when the British already have a refinery at the Gulf of Persia. The manager of the Anglo-Persian oil company told us that his refinery could produce 60 per cent more oil. Why not put it to work instead of exhausting our own oil reserves?

"Furthermore," Brewster continued, "the crude oil from Persian wells is so good that it can be pumped right into ships as bunker oil without refining. If we don't get busy and use it, we'll wake up after the war to find the United States with no oil left, and dependent on the British Empire."

CABOOSE SLEEPERS

Cornfed Senator Ed Johnson of Colorado got his start as a railroad telegrapher, still proudly carries a union card. So he was well qualified to preside over the War Mobilization committee when A. F. Whitney, president of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, testified on manpower and other railroad problems.

Whitney objected to the policy of some railroads in refusing to let train crews sleep in idle cabooses. Trainmen away from home frequently can't get hotel accommodations, but railroad officials argue that it is unsanitary and also dangerous for them to sleep in "cabs," which sometimes have to be switched.

"When I was a working trainman, we always lived in our cabooses," Whitney said, "not because rooms were not available at hotels but because it was more convenient."

"Many's the time I have slept in cabooses myself," reminisced Johnson.

MERRY-GO-ROUND

A American doughboys in Iran have found a good way to dodge U. S. military police and get out of camp at night. They take advantage of the Mohammedan custom of veiling their women, and slip on a full-length, cover-all veil which Iranian women wear from head to toe. Military police have been instructed to protect Iranian women and prevent all flirting, so they don't dare stop a veiled figure to ask her (or him) to lower the veil, and see whether an American doughboy is behind it.

Allies Ponder Possibilities Of Russ-Nazi Peace Treaty

Soviet Offensive May Mean Sudden End of War With Germany; Stalin Holds High Cards in Diplomatic Game.

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, Union Trust Building, Washington, D. C.

Washington watches the swift march of events across the Russian plains. The renewed offensive, more than half a month before even the Russian people dreamed it was possible, has quickened all nerves. For the Russians, it means the possibility of a sudden peace.

And while Moscow dreams of the end of the war just around the first snow-covered mound on the battlefield, the Allies are considering the possibility of what it means to them. For there is always that haunting memory of a remark of Stalin's in the back of their minds—the remark that the destruction of the Reichswehr was not a condition of German surrender as far as the Kremlin is concerned. In addition there is the realization of the presence of those German divisions still intact beyond the Alps, not to mention the others still nearer.

Not (we are assured) that Stalin will make a separate peace with Germany but if a peace treaty is written on the stalwart backs of a victorious Russian army, what terms can the Allies insist upon that Stalin need feel called upon to approve unless his own many possible desiderata are agreed to by Britain and the United States?

It does not make the task any easier for the gentlemen in London and Washington now carefully selecting what the well-dressed diplomat should wear in Moscow. One thing is very certain, no old fashioned regalia will be in style. There will be no opportunity for the polite game where one can risk a little bluff with fair assurance of drawing a wild joker to four of a kind or color if Russia holds all the cards.

What Russia Wants

The optimists say that Russia wants nothing that an honest world cannot afford to offer, and is willing to give in return all that an honest world need ask for. The pessimists say that even if Britain and America can be converted to full faith in such an attitude and intent on Russia's part, how are you going to convert communist Russia to an equal faith in the attitude and intentions of the capitalistic nations?

Unfortunately, Britain and the United States have a somewhat painful diplomatic record in dealing with Germany when Adolf Hitler held his aces—the strongest air force in the world and a sizable army. We all bowed down at Munich and, indeed, (though it has been forgotten) there was some rivalry for the credit in achieving a peace in our time that was no peace. However, with the help of Russia, the Allies were able to take Hitler's aces in the end.

And so in certain discreet circles it has been suggested that the Allied weakness in the diplomatic field as far as things to trade with Russia are concerned, might become a strength if the Allied joint general staff became the negotiators. These gentlemen might be able to offer what Russia wants most (which is what we all want)—security. And these gentlemen might likewise make demands which Russia would desire to consider, namely, co-operation with compromise, refusal of which could lead to nothing better than what Hitler got in the end.

And Hitler's own words, spoken when he addressed a meeting of his party chiefs and generals recently, are worthy of note. The fuehrer suggested for Germany what Britain and the United States might well contribute to negotiations with Russia in addition to their diplomats and their armies and navies.

The Fuehrer Says

"The (Nazi) party's struggle for power," said Hitler, "set an example for today's struggle of destiny of the German people . . . arms alone mean nothing if not backed by the will of men."

The Germans made a fatal mistake twice in one generation. They failed to count on the will of the American people. If that will is made clear today, if America's intention is written clearly that all may see, the intention which we profess—a decent peace, justice and security for all—and if that will and intent is backed by the force we have, nothing can resist it. That is really the thing which can win the peace, as it has made the winning of the war possible, whatever credit may justly go to others who have battled our common enemy.

Visitors to U. S.

The war has brought a great many Englishmen to the United States who otherwise might never have known any more of America than they learned from the movies. Many are highly trained specialists, others are broadly educated, like those in newspaper and radio work. I have met a number, especially of the latter group. And I am struck by one thing which they comment upon—the widespread education in America.

That is one thing which will make up one of England's No. 1 postwar reforms—a real public school system. We, in America, underestimate our own schools on the one hand and overestimate our literacy on the other.

At first, the army demanded that a man be able to read and write or he was deferred. This lost nearly a million men to the armed forces—four states have 36 per cent or more adult illiteracy.

According to latest information, 85,000 illiterates have already been reclaimed for army service which means that they have been taught to read and write and do simple arithmetic. It is said that there are facilities for giving the same basic instruction to 750,000 more.

But that is by no means the extent of army education. A statement from the Office of War Information the other day said, speaking of the serviceman: "Unless he comes from a well-to-do family, his educational opportunities are in fact rather better in than out of the services."

That is probably something that few parents thought of when they waved good-by at the station. They did not realize that the army and navy are operating the largest adult school in the world. One out of every ten adults in the country, 11 out of every 14 able-bodied men between 18 and 38 will probably be students in that school system by the end of this year. A million boys will be in the preinduction courses, the system's prep schools. Nine out of ten of these men will receive advanced training as specialists.

The Future

Much of the education received will be carried over as useful in civilian life, for one out of three of every army and navy job is identical with a civilian job and over two-thirds of the men in the service develop skills that can be used in civilian jobs.

These figures alone, I believe, show that when "D Day" comes, the millions discharged will not be a careless, riotous lot, good for nothing but to fight. As a matter of fact, the vast majority will have, if they have anything like the feeling I and most of my comrades in the last war had, an overweening desire to settle down to a job and the building of a home, "no more to roam." Some, of course, who had the itching foot will have developed chronic cases, but it is doubtful if those rolling stones would have gathered much moss anyhow.

For the majority of the men who make up our armed forces who want and expect to fill civilian jobs, the careful classification of skills which is a vital part of the army and navy system is going to work in reverse in getting them jobs afterward. In preparation for this, experts are already assembling accurate descriptions of jobs which men learn to do in the service, keeping a cumulative record of the work they do, preparing additional tests which will give a clear picture of their achievements and talents to the prospective employer. They are also preparing to tell the serviceman what job he is best fitted for and offering help which will better prepare him for it.

I doubt if ever before in history the military has taken on such a responsibility for fitting the boy back into his natural groove when the fighting is over. This is a total war, everybody is in it, and those who have been forced to take over the abnormal duties of fighting are not going to be set adrift.

In a recent broadcast, Tokyo radio announced that "the military administration over the Philippines has been terminated." The broadcast quoted an announcement from Lt. Gen. Shigenori Kuroda, Japanese army commander of the islands.

Certificates will be awarded to all soldiers who successfully complete prescribed work in the Army Specialized Training program at colleges and universities, according to the war department. It is anticipated that college credits will be granted if the trainee returns to college after termination of the military service.

Do you know the new regulations on packages sent to men in the service? Here they are: You can send packages to soldiers anywhere in the U. S., although there are now Post Office restrictions on packages to overseas Army men; and you can send packages to men in the Navy, Coast Guard, and Marines, wherever they are. And when you send that package from home, remember—the gift men in the service always appreciate is cigarettes. And the favorite with men in the Army, Navy, Coast Guard, and Marines is Camel (based on actual sales records in Post Exchanges and Canteens). So stop in at your local dealer today—and mail him a carton of Camels.—Adv.

A PROFITABLE COMBINATION

FARM-MASTER MINERAL FEEDER and FARM-MASTER MINERALS

By placing the minerals in this special feeder, the hogs will get the correct amount of essential minerals to balance their rations. At first the hogs will eat considerable to overcome the mineral deficiency in their bodies. In a short time they will eat only a normal supply of 2 to 4 ounces per day. This feeder is built strong for long service. It protects the minerals against rain, snow, etc... And the price is low—

Dairy Farmers To Receive Feed Payments

The War Food Administration has announced that a dairy feed payment of 35 cents per hundred weight of whole milk sold or 4 cents per pound of butterfat sold will be made to Kentucky dairy farmers, regradless of the cost price that is being paid in any particular case for dairy feed. The rate of payment has been determined primarily on the basis of changes in the price of dairy feed since September 1942, adjusted for relative increases in the price of whole milk since 1938-40, and the average proportion of dairy feed purchased. The first payments will cover October sales according to John E. Crigler, Secretary of the AAA.

Dairy feed payments will be started as soon as the necessary forms and instructions are received. The payments will be made directly to the producer by the County AAA committee.

Persons selling cream for consumption as much, or butter will also receive a dairy feed payment. It is necessary to file an application for payment with the AAA Committee, no later than November 30, 1943 with respect to Oct. operations, and not later than January 1, 1944 with respect to November and December operations.

All producers are urged to keep accurate records of all sales of milk, butterfat, butter and whole cream sales, beginning October 1st. Producers will be notified as soon as the County AAA Office is ready to receive these records and make up the applications for payment.

Rabbit Hash Homemakers Club To Reorganize.

Cake Cutting To Feature 10th PCA Anniversary

The cutting of a birthday cake topped with ten burning candles will highlight the tenth anniversary of the Northern Kentucky Production Credit Association, announces Leonard C. Taylor, secretary-treasurer. This meeting will be held at Idle Hour Theater, in Williamstown, beginning at 1:00 P. M., on November 12, 1943.

Anna Lou Gross, the ten year old daughter of A. C. and Clara Gross, one of the ten year members, will do the cake cutting honors. As another special feature the Association will honor its original incorporators and all members who have been stockholders for ten years.

A war film and comedy will be shown at 1:00 P. M. Everyone should be on time to see these films and start the meeting promptly.

Talks will be presented by A. T. Mills, Field Representative and H. B. Price of the University of Kentucky.

Community singing will be led by Carl Sheriff, field representative.

Mr. Taylor stated that he expects the members and friends of the Association to turn out to the meeting in large numbers as farm work is not so rushing and the weather will likely be good.

Refreshments will be served at the close of the afternoon session.

Kenton County Homemakers To Meet Nov. 8th

Miss Irene Bewley, nationally known mountain monologist, will appear on the program of the Kenton County Homemakers' Association for their twelfth annual meeting which will be held at the Madison Avenue Christian Church, Covington, Monday, November 8th.

Miss Bewley, a native of the Tennessee hills, has dramatized incidents which occured in the Smokies, the Cumberlands and the Blue Ridge. Her characterizations are dignified and sincere and never becomes caricatures. She reflects life as she has learned it around her home in the hills near the Great Smoky Mountains. Her interpretations which have the element of truth, are a distinct contribution to folk-literature of the day. Her flair for writing and her years of experience in acting, together with a folksey charm of personality bring her at once enrapport with her audience, whether they be highbrow intellectuals, high school boys and girls or plain people from back in the hills.

Miss Bewley recently appeared on the program of the American Association of University Women, Taft Museum, Cincinati. She comes to Covington from a series of appearances in the middle west, which in turn, followed performances in various centers throughout the United States including several in New York city.

Mrs. Warren Scouten is chairman of the meeting. Other committee chairmen are: Program, Mrs. C. D. Vaughan; Registration, Mrs. Wm. G. Heeb; Hospitality, Mrs. Harold Truitt. An outstanding feature of the meeting will be a report of the county citizenship chairman, Mrs. Bluch Rich, on the subject, "Kenton County Homemakers Serve on the Home Front."

1st Lieutenant Harold S. Conrad

Lt. Conrad enlisted in the U. S. Marine Corps October 1, 1939 and received his training at Parris Island, S. C., then went to Pearl Harbor by way of San Diego. His duties were carried out on Midway Island, Tulage and Guadalcanal, he was then sent to New Zealand for a rest and training period. He arrived in San Francisco after overseas duty for 3 year and 7 months.

He is now spending some time at home with his father, John Conrad and family. Harold says he is glad to be back with loved ones and friends, and wishes good luck to all as he leaves again before long.

William Taylor Receives License To Preach.

At the close of the services Sunday night at the Baptist Church, William Taylor was given his license to preach the gospel. William is one of Walton's excellent young men, and a past superintendent of the Sunday School. His many friends wish for him much success in this calling.

John Jefferson Glore

John Jefferson Glore passed away at his home at Big Bone Wednesday, October 27th following a short illness.

Mr. Glore who was 99 years old was a Civil War Veteran. He was a life long resident of Boone County.

He is survived by two sisters, Miss Emma Glore and Mrs. Sally Allen, both of Big Bone and nephews and nieces.

Funeral services were conducted from Big Bone Baptist Church Saturday at 2 P. M. with the Rev. Geo. Branham, pastor of Big Bone Baptist Church and Rev. Roy Johnson of Burlington Baptist Church in charge of the services. Burial was held in Big Bone Cemetery.

Chambers and Grubbs were in charge of funeral arrangements.

Farmers Building Ponds To Insure Livestock Water

Improved livestock water supply is receiving wide spread interest from farmers according to H. R. Forkner, County Agent. More than 100 ponds have already been built this fall and more than fifty applications for pounds or farm reservoirs construction service are now on file at the County Office.

Three operators have been working in the County. They are John G. Exterkamp and Sons of Covington, George Vest, 2830 Minto Ave., Cincinnati, Ohio and Harper Construction Company.

A good farm water supply is just as important as good pasture and hay crops. J. C. Acre of the Soil Conservation Service, Phone Burlintgon 680, has been rendering valuable service in assisting farmers to stake out suitable locations for pond construction. Farmers who have ponds built should give serious consideration as to the location and the size of the dam both at the base and at the top. Farmers should also be present when the dams are being built to make sure that the construction is according to plan with a clay core thru the center. Failure to carefully plan this work almost always costs the farmer more money than he planned and does not give as satisfactory a job. The contractor wants to do his work satisfactory but does not always know what the owner wants.

Local Verona Boy Recieves Commendation

Sgt. Benjamin B. Kannady, son of Mr. and Mrs. John C. Kannady of Verona has recently received the following commendation by Command of Lieutenant General Harmon for outstanding services in the South Pacific Area:

HEADQUARTERS USAFISPA
APO No. 502
September 20, 1943

AG 201.2

SUBJECT. Commendation

TO : Sergeant Benjamin B. Kannady, 20507412, 147th Inantry, APO No. 718.

THROUGH: Commanding Officer 147th Infantry, APO No. 718.

Your performance of outstanding services has been noted by the Commanding General, United States Army Forces in the South Pacific Area, and the following commendation is extended in official recognition thereof:

COMMENDATION: Sergeant Benjamin B. Kannady, 20507412, Infantry, United States Army, for outstanding conduct in the South Pacific Area during the period from March, 1942 to May, 1943. He successfully performed the many and varied duties assigned to him, was a key man in many of the projects undertaken by his organization, and coributed ably to various construction jobs. In addition, he designed several weapons ranges for his regiment, and in every bivouac took the lead in clearing and improving the areas to provide the most healthful and comfortable conditions possible for his fellow-soldiers. When his regiment was engaged in combat operations his service in leading an ammunition and pioneer platoon over the hazardous jungle terrain was both courageous and invaluable.

By Command of Lieutenant General HARMON:

J. M. GLASGOW,
Colonel, AGD.,
Adjutant General.

Nathan Floyd Brewster

Nathan Floyd Brewster, son of Mr. Henry Brewster, passed away October 27, 1943 at the age of 22 years and eight months.

He leaves his father, Mr. Henry Brewster; one sister, Mrs. Elmer Chapman, Walton; three brothers, Leonard, Vernon, and Kimber; also a number of nieces, nephews and many friends.

The pallbearers were: Arthur and Raymond Brewster, James Noe, Clifton Robinson, Harold Chapman and Leon Pennington.

The flower girls were: Ruby McCubbins, Ruby Ballard, Evelyn Brewster, Helen Brewster, Lillie Shepherd and Novella Morgan.

Funeral services were held Saturday, Oct. 30th at New Bethel Baptist Church, Verona by Rev. C. J. Alford with burial in the church Cemetery.

Hamilton Funeral Home had charge of the funeral arrangements.

Mrs. Frances Dennis

Services will be held at Hughes Chapel Methodist Church, Beaver Lick, Ky., at 2 P. M. Friday for Mrs. Frances Elnor Dennis, age 78, who died at her home in Covington, Monday. Mrs. Dennis, a former resident of Beaver, and a member of the Hughes Chapel Church.

Besides her husand, John F. Dennis she leaves two daughters, Mrs. Benjamin Thereikeld and Mrs. Marie Busch and a son, John H. Dennis, all of Covington; twelve grandchildren and ten great grandchildren.

Mrs. Auretta Cozine Money

Mrs. Auretta Cozine Money of Shelbyville passed away October 26th at St. Joseph's Hospital in Louisville after a lingering illness. She had recently returned from Johns Hopkins Hospital of Baltimore. She was the only child of Mr. and Mrs. Claude P. Cozine of Shelbyville.

She leaves her husband and one daughter, Miss Olivia Cozine Money, besides her parents.

Mr. and Mrs. Cozine have many friends in Walton who regret to learn of their great loss and extend to them their sympathy. Mr. Cozine was an employee of the Advertiser part of last year.

Best-Known For Externally Relieving Miseries of Baby's Colds

Mothers, when a young child catches cold—be modern—and relieve distress without dosing, without upsetting the stomach. At bedtime rub Vicks VapoRub on the throat, chest and back. It is what most young mothers do because VapoRub works direct two ways at once—and keeps on working for hours to bring relief—to ease coughing—relieve muscular soreness or tightness—and invite restful, comforting sleep. Often by morning most of the misery of the cold is gone! Try it tonight.

When you see how VapoRub relieves distress of children's colds you should understand why it is the best-known home remedy of its kind in the world. It's just as good for grown-ups, too. Time-tested VICKS VAPORUB

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

To maintain the nation's essential motor transportation system, the American rubber tire industry will be called upon to make 30 million synthetic passenger car tires in 1944. The synthetic rubber program is being geared to permit such an output without hindering the military needs for rubber.

More than 65 per cent of the war materials reaching factories in Michigan travel on rubber-tired trucks, and 67 per cent of the finished products move out by truck. Proof that our national economy is closely bound with rubber.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Tax Body Asks Higher Postal Rates; Coal Miners Offered New Pay Boost; Nazis Strengthen Defenses in Italy As Allied Forces Gather in Corsica

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysis and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

Labor leaders who conferred with President Roosevelt on wages and prices included, from left to right in front row, William Green, AFL president; A. F. Whitney; Mrs. Anna Rosenberg, social security board; Philip Murray, CIO president, and Julius Emspak. Back row from left to right: George Meany, Daniel Tobin and R. J. Thomas.

ITALY:
Dig In

With the Nazis solidly entrenched in the mountains running across Italy 100 miles south of Rome, there were reports that Gen. Dwight Eisenhower was assembling forces in Corsica, possibly for a landing at the Germans' rear in northern Italy, or on the French Riviera.

The mountains in which the Germans dug in form a double ridge and rise to heights of 2,500 feet along the sector occupied by Lieut. Gen. Mark Clark's Fifth army. Because most positions blend well into the landscape and the heights are rugged, experts saw little use of airplanes to bomb defenses effectively or armored formations to break up concentrations.

The continuing flow of German reinforcements in northern Italy indicated that the Nazis intend to pin down the greater bulk of the Allied armies in that country, and make it the principal battleground of Europe.

HAWAII:
Commander in Contempt

When the army's commander of the Hawaiian department refused to produce two German-American citizens in court and show cause why the army should continue to hold them on precautionary grounds, Federal Judge Delbert E. Metzger charged the commander with contempt and fined him $5,000.

Judge Metzger

But when Judge Metzger learned that the army had released the two citizens, he dismissed the order, to produce them, and cut the commander's fine to $100. However, he refused to dismiss the contempt charge entirely.

Under martial law in Hawaii, the writ of habeas corpus, requiring authorities to show cause why a suspect should be held, had been restricted to use in certain civil cases, although Judge Metzger had demanded its full application. At present, habeas corpus stands suspended in military cases, but can be utilized in strictly civil suits.

LABOR:
Raise for Miners

Trimming the United Mine Workers proposition for a $1.50 daily wage raise with compensation for underground travel time, the War Labor board offered John L. Lewis' UMW a $1.12½ boost.

Under the WLB offer, miners would not be paid for underground travel, but would receive time and a half for 45 minutes of work over the regular 7-hour day. According to the WLB, the miners' earnings would increase $1.66 daily for a six-day, 8½ hour day.

Meanwhile leaders of 20 railroad unions were preparing a strike vote among their 1,350,000 members, to decide on a walkout over dissatisfaction of the government's award of wage increases of four cents an hour for the operating unions, and Economic Stabilization Director Fred Vinson's refusal to grant the non-operating unions an eight cents an hour boost.

TAXES:
Ask Higher Postal Rates

With congress opposed to further increases in income taxes, the lawmakers looked to other possible sources of revenue to help raise some of the 10 billion dollars requested by the treasury to bring total receipts to 50 billion dollars annually.

Congress' advisory tax staff proposed increasing the local postal rate to 3 cents; air-mail to 10 cents an ounce; money orders 10 to 37 cents; insured mail 10 to 70 cents, and COD mail 24 cents to $2.40.

The advisory staff also suggested raising the liquor tax to $10 a gallon; beer to $8 per barrel; wine to 5 cents to $1 a gallon; electric light bulbs and tubes to 15 per cent of retail price; general admissions to 3 cents for each 10 cents; bowling 20 per cent of charge, and billiards $20 a table.

In all, congress hopes to raise 1½ billion dollars from the new levies.

RUSSIA:
Nazis Fight Entrapment

Their Dnieper river line smashed below Kiev, the German high command strived to pull hundreds of thousands of their embattled troops out of the huge noose charging Russian forces were drawing about them.

In this sector, the Dnieper turns sharply from a southerly direction and runs almost 200 miles eastward to Dnepropetrovsk. The Germans established a line along these 200 miles of river front, and then organized a defense from Dnepropetrovsk southward some 125 miles to the Sea of Azov.

By slashing through the German lines along the eastern course of the Dnieper, the Russ threatened the whole Nazi line strung to the south from Dnepropetrovsk. To escape entrapment, the German high command began withdrawing its troops.

DRAFT:
Would Take Dads Last

Moving to draft dads last, congress passed a bill which would require Selective Service to induct all single and childless married men throughout the entire country first before fathers would be called by any board.

Incorporated in the same bill which went to the senate for consideration were provisions which would:

1. Eliminate the War Manpower commission's classification of "essential" industries offering temporary deferment; 2. Require all deferments to be reviewed by appeals boards within the district where the employee works; 3. Establish a medical commission to consider change of army and navy physical standards.

MAGNETIC TORPEDO:

Here is one reason why we needed the Azores so badly as an anti-submarine base. The U-boats not only have new devices but also a new strategy and may converge around the bottleneck to the Mediterranean between the Azores and Gibraltar.

DEVICES:

Latest Nazi torpedoes are superior to the former type which exploded only on contact. New torpedoes are exploded (1) on contact; (2) by magnetic attraction on coming close to the steel hull; (3) by the vibration of the engines of the ship under attack. This makes it possible for the submarine to succeed in its mission much more frequently than before. A torpedo is much less likely to miss, since missing actual contact with the target does not now mean, as previously, that it misses the target.

STRATEGY:

Convoys have now discovered that Nazi subs are hunting in packs of sufficient number to employ the same sort of naval strategy which large units of naval vessels are able to use. A group of submarines will surface on one side of the convoy, and thus decoy the escort vessels in that direction. Meantime, another group of submarines on the other side of the convoy will approach within easy firing range and discharge their torpedoes.

Observers believe, however, that the main artery of commerce from the United States to the European theater of war—the North Atlantic run—is still so well guarded that the submarine menace is licked so far as that run is concerned. It is feared, however, that the Nazis will now strike at another vulnerable point, namely, the Straits of Gibraltar. Since these straits must be passed by all Allied merchant shipping supplying the Mediterranean theater of war, including North Africa, Sicily, Sardinia, Corsica, Italy and the Adriatic—not to mention all the shipping now passing through the Mediterranean bound for the Straits of Suez and India—this area is due for a concentrated submarine attack.

A VISIT WITH STALIN

Secretary Hull might have got some interesting pointers for his Moscow trip from Cuban Ambassador Concheso, only Latin American diplomat who has met Stalin.

Brilliant Senor Concheso is both Cuban ambassador to the U.S.A. and Cuban minister to Soviet Russia. Recently he came back from a visit to the Soviet capital during which he presented his credentials to Foreign Minister Molotoff, and expressed the polite hope that he might also call upon Stalin. Knowing that Stalin was one of the busiest men in the world, however, Concheso did not press the point and actually did not expect to see him.

So he almost fell out of his ballet seat one night when someone tapped him on the shoulder and told him that Stalin would see him in 20 minutes. How Stalin knew the Cuban diplomat was enjoying the famous Moscow Ballet, Concheso did not know.

However, he was told that a motor would call for him at the theater in 15 minutes, and he should be ready. Concheso consulted a British diplomat, also present at the ballet, who told him that the man who had tapped him on the shoulder was the Russian chief of protocol, so he had better be ready.

It was May, but zero weather in Moscow. However, Ambassador Concheso did not find it cold in the Kremlin. (Churchill wore a zipper-suit when he called on Stalin, and Mrs. Hull has been worrying on behalf of her husband about the cold in the Kremlin.) Only two officers guarded Stalin. One officer met the Cuban at the entrance of the building and escorted him to Stalin's office. There he was met by another officer who took him the rest of the way. There was no pomp or ceremony.

GENIAL JOSEPH

Stalin himself was not fierce, but kindly and genial. His eyes, according to Ambassador Concheso, are deep and penetrating, but with wrinkles of humor in the corners.

The Soviet premier seemed surprisingly well-posted on Cuban problems, knew something about its labor laws and its economic questions. However, he was not familiar with Cuban - U. S. relations and seemed to think that Cuba was still politically dependent on the U.S.A. The ambassador explained that the Platt amendment had been abrogated and Cuba now enjoyed complete freedom.

Improved Uniform International SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Lesson for November 7

THE SACREDNESS OF HUMAN LIFE

LESSON TEXT—Exodus 20:13; Matthew 5:21-26, 38-45.

GOLDEN TEXT—Whosoever hateth his brother is a murderer.—I John 3:15.

Human life is sacred—and there is a very important reason why that is true. It is not because of any law of man, but finds its foundation in the fact that God created man in His own likeness and image. Because that is true, no man has any right to take the life of another for any cause except at the direct command of God. Only by the orderly process of law for the protection of society and in accordance with the Word of God may there be any such action by man toward man.

Both of these truths are declared in Scripture in God's covenant with Noah (Gen. 9:5, 6), which was made possibly a thousand years before the Ten Commandments were given to Moses.

One cannot deny that human life is held rather cheaply in many places today. War helps to create that attitude on the part of nations which makes them count boys and girls, yes, mere babies, as "war material."

But not only in war is life carelessly destroyed. We decry the "slaughter of innocents" on the highway, unnecessary death in industry, yes, even in the home.

I. The Prohibition of Murder (Exod. 20:13).

The word "kill" in this commandment is one which means a violent and unauthorized taking of life, and is therefore more properly translated "murder."

Not all killing is murder. A man may kill another entirely accidentally, or he may be the duly constituted legal officer carrying out the law of the land in taking the life of one who has forfeited his right to live because he has slain another.

There is also the right of self-defense, be it individual or collective as in war. But these are the only exceptions; let us not attempt to justify any other.

Murder is more prevalent than most of us suppose. Some years ago we were told that there was a murder every forty minutes in our land. With the general increase of crime, and of drunkenness (which so often incites murder), the current figures would probably show an increase.

Do not forget the deaths, the destruction of life, by avoidable automobile accidents. Some of these were really murder because the one responsible drove with defective brakes, dangerous tires, or while he was intoxicated. Add to these the deaths in industry caused by failure to provide proper safeguards or healthy working conditions, and by the exploitation of child labor, and we say that we should cry aloud, "Thou shalt do no murder."

II. The Provocation to Murder (Matt. 5:21,22).

Murder finds its provoking cause in the heart of man. Our Lord was concerned about correcting the desires rather than to apprehend the offender after the act had been committed. It is the better way, and the more effective one.

In this matter of murder, Jesus cut right through the outward aspects of the matter and pointed out that an angry hatred in the heart is the root of all murder. If we hate, we have murder in our hearts. Circumstances may hinder its fulfillment, but the danger is always there until we remove the cause.

Just being angry—calling our brother "raca" (the modern equivalent of which is "nobody there"), and calling him "thou fool," which classifies him as "morally worthless"—these are the three dreadful downward steps to murder. And they begin in anger.

May God help those of us who have strong feelings that we may not yield them to the devil in such anger against our brother!

III. The Prevention of Murder (Matt. 5:23-26, 38-45).

Prevention with God means more than putting up a barrier to keep us from killing. He deals with the heart, and thus puts the whole life right. It is not even a question of how we may feel against our brother. If he has aught against us we are to do all we can to win him. He may be unreasonable, grasping, and unfair. However, the spirit that will win him is not that of retaliation or sullen submission to the inevitable, but rather a free and willing going even beyond what is required.

It is clear from other scriptures that our Lord does not mean that wicked and unscrupulous men are to be permitted to defraud and destroy God's people. At the same time, we must be careful not to explain away the heart of our Lord's interpretation of this great commandment.

We who believe in Christ are to be in deed as well as word the sons of our heavenly Father (v. 45), loving not only those who are kind to us, but even our enemies.

What You Buy With WAR BONDS
Beans

So long as a soldier can eat and think up disparaging names for his equipment the Army will do all right. Food is either "beans," or "chow."

"Chow" may consist of a well cooked meal or if circumstances demand our fighting men have learned to subsist on "Ration K," the concentrated food that all of them carry into battle.

With millions of men and women in the services it will require a lot of War Bond buying on our part to keep them happy.

You Must Have
Vitamins A and D
You must have Vitamin A as an aid in protection against infections which are more likely to occur in the nose, throat, eyes, ears and sinuses, when there is a deficiency of this vitamin.
You need Vitamin D to help the body make proper use of the calcium and phosphorus in your diet.
If you are not getting enough of these two important vitamins, take a ONE-A-DAY brand Vitamin A and D Tablet every day and insure your normal requirements.

"TOWN AND FARM IN WARTIME"

Prepared by the Rural Press Section of O. W. I.

Soldiers' Allowance Payments

Soldiers' dependents must fill out and return a new, one-sheet dependency certificate to benefit by new rates provided by recent servicemen's allowance legislation, the War Department announced. All dependents now receiving family allowances are being sent copies of the new form. These should be filled out, witnessed, and returned to the Office of Dependency Benefits as soon as practicable to avoid possible discontinuance of allowances. Until new accounts can be set up, dependents now receiving family alowances will continue to receive their checks in the old amounts. After an account is converted, any sums accured as a result of an increase in allowances will be included in the first check. The concersion from old to new accounts will take several months.

Peanut Butter Prices Down

Reduction of consumer prices for peanut butter from 33.1 cents to about 26.5 cents per pound, effective November 1, was recently announced by WFA and OPA. The reduction is part of the wartime program to increase use of peanuts in making peanut butter and increase consumption of easily produced foods of high protein content.

30 Days' Notice On Stamp 18

The public will be given 30 days' notice, should it become necessary to terminate shoe ration stamp 18. This announcement was made recently by OPA to "kill' scare-buying rumors that the validity period of stamp 18 might be cancelled with only 24 hours' notice to consumers.

Set Price Range On Cattle

The allowance range of prices for which each grade of live cattle can be sold to slaughterers has been set by Judge Fred M. Vinson, Director of the Office of Economic Stabilization. Within each grade price may fluctuate $1. Price ranges per hundred-weight for various grades at Chicago are; choice, $15 to $16; good, $14.25 to $15.25; medium, $12 to $13; common, $10 to $11; cutter and canner and bologna bulls, $7.45 to $8.45. The Price Administrator are to determine and publish prices at other points in line with Chicago prices. As soon as practicable, the War Food Administrator is directed to put into effect a system of allocation of live cattle to slaughterers and feeders to maintain "equitable distribution of available supplies.

Mail Christmas Cards Now

Christmas cards to soldiers overseas should be mailed at once, the War Department says. They must be sent in sealed envelopes as first class mail. Christmas cards mailed now will reach even the most remote APO's by December 25, according to the Army Postal Service.

Predict Ample Coffee For Duration

"Coffee supplies in the U. S. should remain ample for the duration," according to George C. Thierbach, President of the National Coffee Association. Imports into the U. S. this year were in excess of any prewar year except 1941. Recently Chester Bowles, General Manager of OPA, said "There is not the slightest idea of rationing coffee again." Coffee stamps in Ration Book Four were designed and sent to the printer months ago when coffee was still being rationed.

Farmers Produce Enough Food

American farmers are producing enough food this year to provide civilians with a nutritious diet and meet military and lend-lease requirements, the Office of War Information reported recently on the basis of data from the War Food Administration. Everyone in the U. S. could have more nutrients than are essential for health, with the exception of riboflavin, if the supply of food available for civilian use were distributed equitably and prepared without loss of value.

Who May Slaughter Without Permit

A farmer or other producer of livestock may slaughter without a license or permit and consume meat without giving up ration points, if he qualifies under the following OPA regulations; (1) raised livestock from birth or (2) for 60 days before slaughter, or (3) the weight has increased 35 percent between time acquired and time of slaughter. In addition, a person must have resided more than six months of each year on a farm he operates, or have visited the farm to give his personal supervision to the raising of livestock for at least a third of the time during the period (one of those listed in the foregoing) on which he bases his claim to the right to consume meat point-free. If a person has his livestock custom-slaughtered, he must meet these same conditions and give the slaughterer a certificate showing he is eligible to consume the meat point-free.

550,000 Honorable Discharged and enlisted men have been honorably discharged from the army between December 7, 1941 and Aug. 31, 1943, according to the War Department. Approximately 200,000 men over 38 years of age were released to accept employment in essential industry or agriculture. Of the remaining 350,000 discharges a large majority was for physical and mental disability.

No Coupon Rationing Of Coal

There will be no coupon rationing of coal during the coming winter, according to OPA. Deliveries are being curtailed so as to spread supplies as evenly as possible. The coal shortage is primarily in anthricite, the Solid Fuels Administration For War reports, and anthracite users are urged to supplement hard coal with bituminous coal. Copies of "Supplementing Anthracite with Other Fuels for Home Heating" (Information Circular 7260) may be obtained without charge by writing to the Division of Information, Solid Fuels Administration, Interior Department, Washington 25, D. C.

Marines Celebrate Anniversary

On November 10, the Marine Corps celebrates its 168th anniversary. On this day, the seven branches of the corps will be honored: Aviation, Line, Mess, Musicians, Paymaster, Quartermaster, and Communications.

Bans Harmful Anti-Freeze

To protect motorists and truck operators, the War Production Board last Saturday halted all sales of an estimated half-million gallons of destructive anti-freeze. WPB warned motorists who already have filled their radiators with any of the banned products to drain and flush the cooling system immediately and refil with the alcohol or ethylene glycol type. Harmful types are those compounded with inorganic salts, including calcium, magnesium or sodium chloride and petroleum distillates. Trade names of the products whose sales were halted are: All-Winter, Chem-A-Cool, Frozone, Permazone, Wonder-Solv, Lo-Zone, Alcotex, Ever-Flo, Bird Antarctic, Flexo, Gold Seal, Security, Ant-Arctic, Neva-Freeze, Anti-Frost, Bond (top line), Frez-Zex, No-Freeze, 60-Below, Lo-Tem, Never-Freeze, and No-Boil.

Thanksgiving Dinners Assured Soldiers

Army men and women will have a traditional dinner, November 25, the War Department says. On the menu are; fruit cup, roast turkey with dressing and gravy, cranberry sauce, mashed potatoes, buttered peas, corn, tomato and lettuce salad, celery, pickles, pumpkin pie, apples, grapes, candy, nuts, and coffee. Personnel overseas will be served this menu so far as operating conditions will permit.

Consumers Get More Eggs Products

Consumers will be able to get more egg products since restrictions on liquid, frozen, and dried whole eggs have been removed by WFA. Increase will be reflected primarily in the production of noodles, macaroni, prepared flours and prepared ice-cream powders and mixtures.

North Africa Helps Feed Troops

North Africa now is delivering fruits, vegetables, and meats to Allied Forces, supplying the new French army and feeding essential civilian workers, it was revealed recently. Flour, fruits, and vegetables from North Africa are being used in the Italian campaign, and French authorities are accumulating food supplies for use during and after the liberation of France. Following liberation of North Africa, Allied authorities supplied carefully budgeted seeds, fertilizers, sprays, binder twine, spare parts for farm machinery, and tractor fuel—supplies which have saved many times their weight in shipping space by enabling North Africans to get quickly back into agricultural production.

Aviation Gas Output Quadrupled

Production of 100 octane gasoline needed for war operations is now four times greater than in the early months of 1942 and within a few months will be eight times greater, according to the Petroleum Administration for War. To get the 100-octane gasoline required for military operations it is necessary to produce less of the products needed by civilians such as ordinary gasoline and fuel oil.

Lift Restriction On Elastic Fabric

Restrictions on the use of elastic fabric in girdles, corsets, combinations, sanitary belts, garter belts, and brassieres have been lifted by WPB. However, it is believed no all-rubber garments will be on the market until the early part of 1944, and it will be some time after that before full-scale production will be possible.

Hosiery Prices Increased

Higher ceiling prices for some of the finer gauges of women's full fashioned rayon hosiery have been established by OPA. Prices for 54 and 57 gauge hose have been increased from $1.18 to $1.41 per pair. Sixty gauge and higher have been increased from $1.31 to $1.69.

NOTICE—

The monthly meeting of the W. C. T. U. will be held in the home of Mrs. Bryan Rector, Friday, November 5th at 2:30. Mrs. Robert Moore, program leader.

"We Are Buying War Bonds—Are You?"

Sgt. Carl Funk, 26, Cincinnati, lost his right eye and sustained a fractured left knee in Sicily. He has been buying War Bonds regularly. He will return to civil life as soon as he is discharged from Halloran Hospital, N. Y.

Pvt. Irwin Levinson, Baltimore, was struck by shrapnel in the left shoulder at Palermo. The fingers of his left hand are paralyzed. When his father asked if he needed anything, his son replied: "Buy War Bonds." His father bought $1,500 worth.

Pvt. Thomas Deliarossa, Trenton, N. J., 18th Infantry Patrol, was wounded by shrapnel at El Guitar, Africa, and now must wear a special brace for his left knee. He won the Purple Heart. He buys War Bonds regularly and urges you to.

Pvt. Donat Cartier, Derry, N. H., suffered a fracture of the leg above the knee in Sicily when struck by an 88 mm. shell. He was held prisoner for two days by the Germans, traveling in a tank. He is a regular purchaser of War Bonds.

Pvt. William E. Morris, Long Beach, Cal., is above draft age but has seen three years of service. He lost his left leg below the knee in Tunisia. He wears the Purple Heart and Good Conduct Ribbon and continues his War Bond purchases.

RUPTURE

E. J. MEINHARDI, widely known Shield Specialist of Chicago, will again be in Cincinnati, Ohio, at the Gibson Hotel for Five Days beginning Sunday, Nov. 7th to Thursday, Nov. 11th Inclusive. Office Hours 1 P. M. to 4 P. M. and 6 P. M. to 8 P. M. daily.

It prevents the Rupture from protruding in 10 days on the average—regardless of size or location of Rupture and no matter how hard you work or strain. It has no leg straps. (No Surgery or Injection Treatments used.) Mr. Meinhardi has been coming here for 15 years. He has thousands of satisfied Customers. Ask your neighbors.

Caution: If neglected—Rupture may cause weakness, backache, constipation, nervousness, stomach pains, etc., or sudden death from strangulation.

Men having large Ruptures which have returned after Surgical Operations or Injection Treatments are also invited. When all others fail—see MEINHARDI. He will be pleased to demonstrate to you privately without charge. (Only men invited.) White only.

SPARTA

Death came to one of our oldest and most highly respectable citizens October 29th when the spirit of Benj. Dankins was bourne to its celistial home where no one returns. Born in Carroll Co., Ky., April 19, 1863, where he spent his young man-hood. Later in life he moved to Sparta, Ky. where he has lived for a number of years. Having been in ill health for a long time, he bore his afflictions with true christian fortitude. He lived in the home of his daughter, Mrs. Jas. Sanders where he was tenderly cared for. All that loving hands could do was done to prolong life but to no avail.

He leaves to mourn his passing, one daughter, Mrs. Jas. Sanders, and two grandaughters, Mrs. Roy Roland of Sparta and Miss Margarett Ruth Sanders of the Baptist Hospital in Louisville. His wife preceeded him to the grave two years ago.

The funeral was conducted from his late home. Rev. W. J. Clarke delivered the sermon in a very consoling manner. The remains were laid to rest in Warsaw Cemetery by C. L. Carlton and Son.

BEAVER LICK

Born to Mr. and Mrs. Howard Moore at Booth Hospital Sunday, October 31, a fine son. He has been named Ronald Howard.

Ed Black and family moved to the Jesse Delahunty farm near Union this week. Mr. and Mrs. James Stevenson have moved to Geo. Baker's farm.

Mrs. Ruth Green, Chairman of the War Fund Drive for this precinct, reports that Beaver has gone "over the top" and wishes to thank all who helped in any way to make this possible.

Jake Cleek has a new International Corn Picker that he purchased through Calvin Cress and Harry Moore.

NICHOLSON

"Though your sins be as scarlet, they shall be as white as snow." Christ, the great emancipator is willing and able to liberate all who will call upon Him.

At the lovely home of Mr. and Mrs. Woodrow Butler Thursday evening a most enjoyable Hallow'een party was given for their promising little sons, Allen and Johnny. The little guests were masked and their amusing games evoked buch merriment. Delightful refreshments consisting of ice cream, cake and little baskets of candy and nuts were served. Participating in the festivities were little Miss Jackie Morgan, little Miss Bessie Morgan, little Miss Nellie Fisk, little Miss Peggy Jo Popp, little Miss Phyllis Williams, little Miss Betty Jo Weldon, little Miss Bonnie Wallace,, little Miss Judy Scott, Allen Butler, Johnny Butler, Kirtley Weldon, Michael Wallace and Jimmy Scott.

STAFFORDSBURG

Since Rev. Cardwell was invited to attend the dedication of the Methodist Church at Florence the pulpit was filled by Bro. Barnet from the Pleasant Grove community on Sunday morning. Evidently Rev. Cardwell missed his bus for he didn't get to the church for the evening service.

Several from this community attended he dedication in the afternoon reporting a very impressive service.

Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Kenney and son Donald and Mrs. Tiva Oetzel were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Russell Rector for a triple birthday celebration on Sunday. Those honored were Miss Jeanne Rector, J. A. Kenney and Donald Kenney. Other guests were: Mrs. Augusta Stephens and Misses Alma and Mary Stephens.

Quite an enjoyable affair was the Hallow'een party at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Binder at which partically our entire Sunday School was present, almost everyone came masked. A delicious luncheon followed the games and talkfest.

Friends and relatives are saddened to hear of the rather serious accident which befell Mrs. Edith Stephens, formerly of this place but of late years residing in Cincinnati. As she crossed the street last Sunday a truck backed into her causing a fractured pelvis. She is at Bethesda Hospital where her friends wish her a speedy recovery.

Mrs. Sophronia Mills is visiting for a short time in this neighborhood.

The United States sends about 4,000 short-wave programs of news, propaganda, and entertainment a week to various parts of the world.

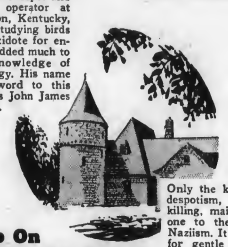
Troop Movement Job Equals 57 World Trips For Every Person In Boone County.

Taking all of Boone County's 10,820 people around the world in sleeping cars nearly 57 times would be a tremendous undertaking, yet that is actually about the size of the troop movement job reported today by The Pullman Company.

Since Pearl Harbor, Pullman has carried about 14,000,000 troops a distance of more than 15 billion passenger miles in its sleeping cars, the company reports. These figures are said to cover mass military movements alone, and do not include the heavy travel of furloughed men and others.

Many of the boys from Boone County, like servicemen from all parts of the country, are getting their first Pullman rides, according to George A. Kelly, vice president of the company. Now most of them are making six or seven trips by Pullman, as the intense training program of the armed services necessitates that many moves or more prior to embarkation for points abroad, he said. In adition, the Army and Navy belive in all the comfort possible for the members of the armed forces, he declared, and about two thirds of all military movements by rail are by Pullman sleeper.



Pullman is now carrying more than 800,000 troops every month in mass movements, it is revealed by Mr. Kelly, who pointed out that in addition to this heavy and steadily increasing military passenger burden, civilian travel itself is also at a record-breaking level. He believes that Pullman's passenger-mile volume for 1943 may exceed the 1942 all-time high of 19 billion by 30 or more per cent.

"The military and civilian passenger burden of Pullman and the railroads today is so heavy," Kelly said, "that there is unfortunately little margin left for some of the conveniences travlers enjoyed in peacetime. Service today is wartime service, and by their understanding and tolerance of this fact, travelers can help us greatly in the performance of our vital job."

Early in the 19th century a storekeeper and gristmill operator at Henderson, Kentucky, took to studying birds as an antidote for ennui and added much to man's knowledge of ornithology. His name is a byword to this day. It is John James Audubon.

FUNERAL SERVICE
VERONA -:- KENTUCKY

JONESVILLE

A good name is rather to be chosen than great riches. Proverbs 22:1.

Rev. Cornelius DeBlock of the Unlon Church in Henry County delivered a very inspiring sermon at the Baptist Church here Sunday morning. He and Mrs. DeBlock and son, together with Mr. and Mrs. Miller, two sons, and mother were dinner guests of Rev. and Mrs. C. B. Love.

About sixty people enjoyed the Halloween Social given by the B. T. U. in the church basement Saturday night.

Mr. and Mrs. Everett Cammack visited relatives at Perryville and Gravel Switch, Ky. last week.

Miss Mabel Kemper and Mrs. Gladys Cotton were dinner guests last Tuesday of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Bingham of Dry Ridge.

Miss Fannie Herndon is visiting her mother, Mrs. Birdie Herndon and family.

Mrs. Lucinda Jump died early Sunday morning at her home near here. She had been ill for several weeks and was 84 years old. Funeral services were conducted Tuesday at the Baptist Church with burial in the I. O. O. F. Cemetery. She leaves one daughter, Mrs. Salome Cammack, two sons, Euysis of Gratz and Jimmie Jump with whom she lived; one sister, Mrs. Eddie Greene, a number of grandchildren and great-grandchildren besides many relatives and friends.

Misses Elizabeth Ann and Ollie Dean Craignyle of near Long Ridge spent from Friday until Sunday with their aunt, Mrs. Hetie Thomas and family.

Bruce Cotton spent the week-end with Jerry and Phillip Points of Dry Ridge.

Miss Bonnie Jean Cook of Clarks Creek spent the week-end with Mr. and Mrs. Price Furnish.

Mr. and Mrs. B. C. Cotton entertained some guests from Murfreesboro, Tenn. Friday night.

Miss Geneva Lee Skirvin spent Saturday night with Misses Elizabeth Ann and Ollie Dean Craigmyle at the home of Mrs. Hettie Thomas.

A large crowd attended the Hallow'een Party at the school house here Friday night.

Mr. and Mrs. B. C. Cotton and Miss Mabel Kemper attended the Buffet Supper given by Misses Martha Blaine and Marie Landrum at the home of Miss Blaine at Dry Ridge Saturday night. The occasion was a surprise for Miss Emma Osborne who has resigned as a teacher at Dry Ridge to accept the place as full-time librarian at Beechwood. There 24 present and all enjoyed the occasion very much. Miss Osborne was presented with a nice gift from the faculty.

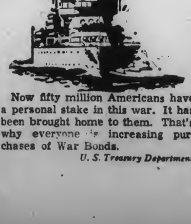
Wartime Lighting Suggestions
HOW TO GET MORE LIGHT FROM YOUR PRESENT EQUIPMENT

Rearrange Furniture to "Double Up" on Lamps

By arranging furniture and lamps carefully, you can often make one lamp do the work of two. An I.E.S. Lamp at the end of the divan, for example, can be moved to the center in back of the divan. Or two chairs or a chair and a divan can be grouped with a lamp to serve two persons with good light, as illustrated above. Be sure the lamp is close enough to both pieces of furniture, though. A difference of 12 inches can reduce the light you get by as much as 50 per cent.

OTHER WAYS TO CONSERVE LIGHT

1. Remove and clean lamp bowls and lamp bulbs regularly. Dry thoroughly before using again.
2. Keep shade linings light. Clean or brush regularly. Repaint or reline dark-colored paper or parchment shades.
3. Sit close enough to the lamp to get all the help it can give your eyes.
4. Avoid direct glare from lamp bulbs by using shades deep enough and wide enough.
5. Eliminate orange or flametint bulbs except for decorative use. Inside frosted white bulbs give more useful light.
6. Turn off lamps not in use. Lamp bulbs use critical materials... Make them last longer.



Electricity ...is vital to war production. Use all you need but don't waste it. It's just because it's cheap and isn't rationed.

WAR BONDS
Battle Wagons

When Japan attacked at Pearl Harbor we had 17 battleships in service and 15 building. We were making preparations but the war did not wait. These 32 battle wagons cost American taxpayers three billion dollars for a two ocean navy. The war seemed far away then.

Now fifty million Americans have a personal stake in this war. It has been brought home to them. That's why everyone is increasing purchases of War Bonds.

From where I sit...

by Joe Marsh

The other day we were talking about George Washington—who besides being a great general was a surveyor, a farmer, and a wise statesman.

"And he made mighty good beer too," says Grandma Hoskins. "His private recipe's filed in the New York Public Library."

Now Grandma Hoskins knows her history—and she told us how other famous men believed in beer and moderation. William Penn, for instance, who had his own brewery and James Madison, who "urged the manufacture of beer in every State of the Union."

When the dark years of Prohibition came along, they proved how right those early American statesmen were—that no law ever takes the place of moderation.

They were right about a lot of things—Washington and Adams and Penn—and the others who founded America. And from where I sit they were certainly right about moderation too.

MAN HAD BRICK IN HIS STOMACH FOR 10 YRS.

One man recently stated that for 10 years he felt like he had a brick in his stomach. This feeling was due to the lump of undigested food he always had inside of him. He was weak, worn out, headachy, swollen with gas and terribly constipated. Recently he started taking ERB-HELP and says the feeling like a brick in his stomach disapeared the second day, Bowels are regular now, gas and headaches are gone and he feels like a new man.

ERB-HELP contains 12 Great Herbs; they cleanse bowels, clear gas from stomach, act on sluggish liver and kidneys. Miserable people soon feel different all over. So don't go on suffering. Get ERB-HELP. Jones Drug Store.

From an old French word "mes" derived from the Latin word "missus" meaning a course at a meal, comes the Army's name "mess" for its breakfast, dinner and supper. Favorite meal with the soldier is chicken dinner—his favorite cigarette, Camel. (Based on actual sales records from service men's own stores.) A carton of Camels, by the way, is a gift that's always welcome. And though there are Post. Office restrictions on packages to overseas Army men, you can still send Camels to soldiers in the U. See Here, Private Hargrove!

by Marion Hargrove

WNU SERVICE

THE STORY SO FAR: Private Marion Hargrove, former newspaper feature editor, has been inducted into the army and is nearing his completion of basic training at Fort Bragg, N. C. He has been classified as cook and in addition his failure to master some of the fundamentals of army training have resulted in considerable extra KP duty for him. He has also learned the finer points of "goldbricking" and "shooting the breeze." Hargrove has become editor of a section of the camp paper and these duties have kept him away from a lecture series. As we pick up the story, his sergeant is assigning him once more to KP for this infraction. Hargrove is trying to explain. He speaks:

CHAPTER XIV

"Sergeant, for days I round up news from battery reporters. There is always too much or too little. When there is too little, I have to write what is needed. When there is too much, I have to choose which battery reporter is going to horsewhip me for leaving his copy out."

"The chaplain is right up the street," the sergeant said.

"Then I have to edit all the copy, delete all classified military intelligence and take out all nasty cracks at first sergeants. Then I have to write headlines for all the stories and place them in whatever space I can find for them. Then I must draw everything up into pretty little pages. This is tedious and nerve-racking work."

"The chaplain will give you a sympathetic ear," the sergeant said. "I will give you only KP. Does anything you are saying relate to what we're talking about—why you weren't in the mess hall yesterday afternoon?"

"I was getting around to that, sergeant. On the day before the paper is issued, I have to go into Fayetteville to keep a careful watch over the printers, to see that they don't put Third Regiment news on the Fourth Regiment page. If I am not there, they may even mix headlines and put church notices under 'Service Club Activities.' It is necessary that I be there."

The sergeant coughed. "I feel for you, Private Hargrove; I deeply sympathize. I wouldn't think of putting you on KP—"

"You wouldn't?" I gasped eagerly.

"Don't interrupt," the sergeant barked. "As I was saying, I wouldn't think of putting you on KP—if you hadn't committed a breach of etiquette by failing to RSVP the invitation. You didn't tell us you weren't coming. Or why."

I was dozing peacefully at my typewriter the other morning when there came a knock on my elbow and a bright young voice shouted "Hey!" at me. I looked up into the impish, cheerful, and unquenchably mischievous face of the boss' daughter, Miss Sidney Winkel, age four.

"Let's be reasonable, Pvt. Mulvehill," I said; "As you know, I am working on Capt. Winkle's sympathies to get a furlough."

Miss Winkel was dressed like the Navy and looked entirely too energetic for such a drizzly morning.

"I'm to be the Valentine," she said, "and Johnny's going to take my picture and you're to take me up to the Service Club and carry Johnny's things for him and wait for him to get there so you'd better put on your jacket and cap and let's go.

"I'm going to have my picture taken with Spud Parker," she added. Spud Parker is the general's son and is considered quite an eligible bachelor by the younger set.

"There's Tom in the cafeteria," she said. "Let's go see Tom."

Thomas James Montgomery Mulvehill, Pfc., was apparently making his morning rounds in search of news. He was, at the moment, engaged in his daily research in the Service Club's toast and coffee.

"Hello, sis," he said. "Hello, McGee. Pull up a chair. McGee, get the lady a drink. Something tall and cool. Such as a chocolate milk. What's the deal, sis?"

"I'm to be the Valentine," she said, "and Johnny's going to take my picture and old Hargrove has to take care of Johnny's stuff until Johnny comes and I don't like him anyway because he makes faces and sticks out his tongue and says sticks and snails and puppy-dog tails that's what little girls are made of and he's not my boy friend anyway."

"No punctuation," I said. I waggled my ears and stuck out my tongue at her.

"The next time I come," she said, "I'm going to bring some soap and every time he sticks out his tongue I'm going to put soap on it because it isn't nice to stick out your tongue." She emphasized her statement by paralyzing my wrist with her fist and sticking her tongue out at me.

"Let's have no unnecessary vibrations, McGee," said the Lieuthomas, looking up reproachfully over his glasses. "Coffee is five cents the cup." He beamed at her. She beamed back at him.

"I have seven boy friends," she said, raising one forefinger delicately and rubbing the other against it in a highly jeering gesture. "I have seven boy friends and you're not one of them and you're not anybody's boy friend." She hit me this time on the elbow and I made a horrible face at her.

"Myaaah," I said. "Who wants to be your boy friend anyway?"

"I wish you wouldn't blow smoke," she said. "It makes me cough and it's not nice to smoke anyway. Old cigarettes!"

I wearily crushed my last cigarette in the ash tray. "Women, the eternal reformer," I sighed. "It wasn't like this in the Old Army."

Miss Sidney Winkel took off her sailor cap and arranged her big red hair ribbon. "You're a nasty old thing and you're not nice like Johnny and Tom and Lieutenant Meek and Captain Wilson and all my other boy friends," she said. After a pause she added, airily, "And Major Long and Captain Quillen, too."

"Myaah," I sighed, wrinkling my nose more violently.

"Oh there's Johnny," she suddenly cried, "and he's going to take my picture and—" She tripped off with a bewitching smile for Bushemi and a running line of babble.

"No punctuation," I said to Mulvehill.

"It's a woman's world, McGee," he said, reaching for another slice of toast.

"Get him away from me, Bushemi!" roared Private Thomas James Montgomery Mulvehill. "He's got that gleam in his eye. Get him away!"

"You're just being difficult, Lieuthomas," I told him. "Just sit down and relax." The Lieuthomas laid his enormous frame on the bunk and started slapping his knees in utter despair.

"What kind of deal are you trying to swindle this time?" he asked.

"Let's be reasonable, Private Mulvehill," I said, patting him reassuringly on the shoulder. "As you know, I am now working on Captain Winkel's sympathies to get a furlough sometime in February . . . the first half of February."

"I know what's coming," he screamed. "And I won't do it! I can't do it!"

"Now, as you know, furloughs are laden with little expenses—necessary little expenses. To help me along with the load, Sergeant Sher and Private Bushemi have already made philanthropic little loans. I have your name on my honor roll here, Lieuthomas. What's the donation?"

The Mulvehill cringed and edged away. "What do you need—from me?"

"Well," I estimated, "I should say that ten dollars."

"Great gods and refugee children," he gasped. "Ten dollars he says yet! Why don't you ask me for my life's blood? Six dollars he owes me already and now he's asking—oh, I can't stand it! I can't stand it! Take him away!"

"My life's blood," he moaned. "Where's the six I lent you two months ago?"

"That was only five weeks ago," I reminded him gently, "and I've already paid two of that back. Three weeks ago I paid it back."

"Yeah," he protested, "but you borrowed it back the next day." He rose and paced the floor. "What are they doing to me? My life's blood they would draw from my veins? Thirty-six measly little dollars a month I make—and he wants ten dollars! Maybe I'm Winthrop Rockefeller I should lend out ten dollars a clip! Thirty-six dollars, and he wants half!"

"You see, Lieuthomas, a sad and work-worn creature—an Alice sit-by-the-fire whose only hope for the future is in the faint glimmering hope of a furlough. Day after day, week in and week out, I have worked my frail fingers to the shoulder blade to make things pleasant for you and Bushemi and Bishop. I have patched your quarrels with the mess sergeant. I have saved you from the terrible wrath of provoked Rebels. I have sat here at night, sewing buttons on my blouse so that you wouldn't have to wear it hanging open on your merry jaunts to town. Money could not pay for the things I have done for you and Bushemi. And now this. Ten dollars between me and spiritual starvation—and no ten dollars. How sharper than a serpent's tooth."

"Don't talk like that, Hargrove," he said, his voice cracking. "Put me down for ten."

There was a little note stuck in my typewriter when I came back from prowling for news. It looked like Private ("One-Shot") Bushemi's typing. "The stockholders of the Union of Hargrove's Creditors," it read, "will hold a business meeting this evening about seven o'clock in the latrine of Barracks No. 2, Headquarters Battery. Please be present or we will beat your head in."

It was the day before my furlough so I got the general drift. The vultures who were contributors to the furlough would probably stand around frowning and figure out some sort of budget for my vacation. I could picture the blue-nosed demons slashing away at my enjoyment.

The meeting had an unexpectedly small attendance: Maury Shermess sergeant of Battery D of the Third and chairman of the ways and means committee of the Union; Private Bushemi, principal stockholder and president; and Private First Class Thomas James Montgomery Mulvehill, chaplain.

Private Mulvehill beamed. "Sergeant Hart sends his regrets. He has a heavy date in Lillington. He is with us in spirit, though."

"Come in, drip," said Bushemi.

Sergeant Sher got down to business. "I've got to hand it to you, son," he said. "Gone through this much of the month and still haven't tried to get any of your furlough money back from the chaplain! We're all proud of you."

"Shucks," I blushed. "'Twern't nothin'. I was able to bum a cigarette here and there."

"McGee," said Mulvehill, clearing his throat, "you leave tomorrow for New York, where there are many snares to trap the unwary. Don't buy any gold watches in the park or any stolen furs anywhere. You know, I presume, about buying the Brooklyn Bridge."

"Now, we don't have any restrictions about the way you use your money," said Bushemi. "Only last time you spent too much money on

"Little man," she said, "will you please ask the waiter for more water?"

taxicabs. You'll have to use the buses and subway more this trip. All the shows you want to see, all the books you can buy—but taxicabs only for very special dates."

"Somebody has been exaggerating this taxicab—" I began.

"Taxicabs," Sher broke in, "only for very special dates. You may go to the opera once if you sit downstairs and twice if you sit in the Famile Circle. You are not to buy more than six theater tickets. In uniform, you can see all the movies you want for two bits each."

"And be conservative in tipping the waiters," said Mulvehill, tapping his glasses on the window sill. "Very conservative. Short-change them, if necessary."

"Tell him about the budget," said Bushemi, with unnecessary impatience.

"As the matter stands on the furlough deal," said Sher, "you owe Bushemi 22 dollars, me 10, Mulvehill 10, Hart 10. That's 52 dollars. Counting the ten you'll wire Bushemi for before the week's over, it's 62. With what money we have taken from you and given to the chaplain during the past few weeks, you should make out all right."

"Must I be treated as a child?" I asked.

"When you get back broke, McGee," said Mulvehill, "you are not to eat breakfast at the Service Club. You are not to take out any post exchange books. You will get your cigarettes from Sergeant Sher, who will ration them out to you as per budget."

Sergeant Sher, Private Bushemi, and the other members of the Union of Hargrove's Creditors would have been quite pleased at the sight. Instead of spending their money lavishly on taxicab sightseeing trips and expensive shows, I was dining quietly in a conservative grillroom with the Redhead. We weren't even discussing ways to spend their hard-earned money.

"Little man," she said, "will you please ask the waiter for more water?"

"I beg your pardon," he said, rather unctuously. "There is a fifteen million gallon shortage in water at this very instant. On the other hand, madame, all supply ships to Great Britain use Scotch whisky as ballast for the return trip. Perhaps madame would like a glass of Scotch whisky?"

The Redhead lifted an eyebrow.

"I wonder," she said, "what they use in the finger bowls here—rubbing alcohol? I do not want Scotch whisky. I want water."

"It is as madame wishes," the waiter said, bowing from the knees. He walked away and returned again to lean against a post. The Redhead drummed her fingers on the tablecloth.

"Don't be afraid of him," said the Redhead. "Call his bluff."

All-Bran "Honey Muffins"

2 tablespoons shortening
½ cup honey
1 egg
½ cup buttermilk
1 cup Kellogg's All-Bran
1 cup flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon soda

Blend shortening and honey. Add egg and beat until creamy. Add milk and All-Bran; let soak until most of moisture is taken up. Sift dry ingredients together; add to first mixture, stirring only until flour disappears. Fill greased muffin pans ⅔ full and bake in a medium-hot oven (400° F.), about 25 minutes.

LETTER FROM SICILY

The following letter was received by Mr. J. B. O'Neal on his 87th birthday from his grandson, Captain C. L. Baker who is stationed in Sicily.

Dear Grandpa:

Today is your 87th birthday—let me wish you a happy birthday and many more of them. By the time this letter reaches you it will be too late to write one I suppose, but I can't seem to get these letters written soon enough for them to reach you on time.

A year ago when I write your birthday letter I was about 40 miles S. E. of Edenborough, Scotland. We had been there 3 days for practice firing and were getting ready to move back to Glascoe. On Oct. 12th I left by convoy for Liverpool, England and after staying there a week I loaded on a cargo ship and sailed back to Glascow. We laid in the harbor one day and then went to sea—we were at sea until the morning of Nov. 8th when our particular bunch landed at Arzew, Algeria. During the past year many changes have occured and looking back at our situation then makes one shiver at the possibilities the Germans had to drive us back into the sea. Outfits such as anti-aircraft were few and scattered all over N. Africa—parts of my own Battalion was 50 miles away and one battery was 600 miles away from us for months. The Germans had air superiority and equality, if not superiority in tanks and ground forces. Since then all of N. Africa is ours, the Mediterranean is clear—Italy is on our side or at least neutral. I saw the mass surrender of the Germans on Cape Bon and around Tunis and I still can't understand it. A quarter of a million men just laid down their arms and quit.

I was with in sight of the Island of Cantelleria while they were bombing it and I saw the hoards of planes flying over the island the day it surrendered. Now we are in Itlay—the Russians are shoving the Germans back and in the long run its probable that the heavy bombing of Germany proper will do more towards the ending of the war than anything else. We are beginning to expect the Germans part of the war to be over by Christmas and the Japs by this time next year.

Our own outfit is still here in Sicily and have been here since the first part of August and the war has moved away from us and left us sitting here so to speak.

In previous letters I have described the Island the best I could and since that letter I haven't much else to tell.

The people seem to like us but they seem to have the idea that we are to take care of them and they seem to hope that Sicily will be a part of the U. S. All of them look at the U. S. like the old Hebrews did the Promised Land—A land of milk and honey or as they think the land of Dollars and Luxrey.

At the moment we are living in a Hotel or rather the offices are—it cost us 20 Lira (20c) a day but we get beds with springs and clean sheets—which is a real luxury to us after army blankets and a bed roll for a year. We have our own men in the Hotel or rather have 3 enlisted men who cook and clean up for us—some war eh?

I intended to write this letter last night but just as I started Col. Vance came in to have a talk and a few minutes later an Italian doctor and his brother came in—then Maj. Burch came in so we had a session until time to go to bed.

Today it's raining a bit and thundering quite a bit. The past 2 or 3 night it has sprinkled but barring one shower in July are the first rains we have seen since the first of last April—that is a long dry spell isn't it?

I received your Aug. 16th letter the other day and a card from Grandma—needless to say I appreciated them very much. Once more congratulations on your birthday and lots more of them.

4-H Achievement Week

November 6th to 14th has been designated as National 4-H Achievement Week, according to O. D. Perkinson Assistant County Agent. The observation of this week will attract new attenion to the accomplishments of 4-H Club members. It will also provide an opportunity for 4-H Clubs to get set for 1944 in a more effective way than ever before. Above all else this week should give 4-H Club Members an appreciation of what the combined effort of all, mean in helping to win the war through serving well in the home, on the farm and in the community.

The Accomplishments of 560 4-H boys and girls in Boone County are such that every citizen in this county can be justly proud. Every boy and girl who has finished a project will receive an achievement certificate at their local 4-H club meeting in November. This will be in recognition of the fine job they have done in producing food and fiber to help win the war.

November Meeting Held By Woman's Literary Club

Mrs. E. Bruce Wallace entertained in her lovely home, in South Walton, the regular meeting of the Walton Woman's Literary Club on Wednesday, Nov. 3rd.

Mrs. C. F. Blankenbeker, the president, presided over the business session. At this time reports were given by Mrs. J. E. McCabe, Mrs. Sam B. Sleet, and Mrs. Clayton Jones on the District meeting that was held in Williamstown on October 27th. The Club regrets to lose as a member, Mrs. C. J. Alford.

Following the business session an excellent program was presented. The Roll Call was answered with a quotation from Book Lovers, in observance of Book Week. The spiritual thought for the day was given by Mrs. Cloyd Johnson with an appropriate selection based on Psalms 46:10, "Be still, and know that I am God."

A Thanksgiving poem, entitled "Midwest Autum" by James Golden was read by Mrs. Clayton Jones.

The guest speaker, a former member of the Club, Mrs. Lydia S. Stephens now of Covington, in her usual pleasing manner reviewed the novel "Happy Land" by McKinley Kantor. This book review was greatly enjoyed, since it is a story so true to life today.

At the conclusion of the program the hostess served lovely refreshments to the following guests, Mrs. Helen Tomlin, Mrs. Lydia S. Stephens, Mrs. Georgia Sikes, Mrs. Mabel Stansifer, and Mrs. Walter Renaker. Members present were: Mrs. J. C. Bedinger, Mrs. C. F. Blenkenbeker, Mrs. G. S. Caroland, Mrs. C. S. Chambers, Mrs. B. W. Franks, Mrs. E. E. Fry, Mrs. Clayton Jones, Mrs. Cloyd Johnson, Mrs. H. F. Mann, Miss Emma Jane Miller, Mrs. R. G. Moore, Mrs. John Myers, Mrs. J. E. McCabe, Mrs. G. C. Ransom, Mrs. W. O. Rouse, Mrs. W. W. Rouse, Mrs Sam B. Sleet and Mrs. J. L. Vest.

Notice—Item Omitted From Public Sale Ad.

There will be 35 or 40 shocks of fodder sold by Mr. Hugh Semons at his Public Sale, Thursday, November 18 on his farm one mile from Verona Bank, between Highway 42 and 16.

Women Missionary Society To Meet Wednesday, Nov. 17th.

The W. M. S. of the Walton Baptist Church will meet at the church, Wednesday, November 17th for an all day meeting.

The business session beginning at 11 o'clock. Lunch at noon, program at 1:30, Mrs. Tom Percival, Program Leader; Topic for the month, "Paganaism a challenge to the Christian Witness."

Please bring clothing for the children of the Baptist Orphan Home at Glendale, Ky.

Mrs. F. E. Fisher and Mrs. Bryan Rector attended the quarterly meeting of the North Bend W. M. S. at South Side Baptist Church, Covington recently.

Sidney J. Booth

Sidney J. Booth passed away early Monday, November 8th at the St. Elizabeth Hospital from a parallitic stroke suffered about a week previous.

Mr. Booth made his home with Mr. and Mrs. Irvin Kampman near Richwood for the 18 years. He was formally from St. Louis, Mo. and was a retired building contractor.

Funeral arrangements will be conducted upon the arrival of his son from Delaware.

Chambers and Grubbs are in charge of the arrangements.

NOTICE—

Members of St. Cecelia Church will entertain with a Chicken Supper and Card Party Saturday evening, November 13th from 6 to 11 P. M. in the church basement. Public Welcome.

Birthday Dinner

Mrs. Mollie Cleek, mother of O. W. Cleek of Walton, Howe Cleek of Beaver and Mrs. C. F. Blankenbeker of Florence. Mrs. Cleek is one of Walton's finest older ladies. She was honored with a delightful dinner party at her home in South Walton Tuesday, celebrating her eighty-fifth birthday. Among the guests besides her children, were her grandchildren, Clinton Cleek, Mrs. Cleek and son Ronnie; Mrs. John Faegan and two children, Judy and Joy and Mrs. Joe Berkshire, her other grandson, Jimmie Cleek is serving in the Armed Forces. Other friends were: Mr. and Mrs. J. E. McCabe and Mrs. John R. Faegan, Mrs. Fannie Brittenhelm, Mrs. W. O. Rouse, Mrs. Sam B. Sleet and Mrs. Agnes Roberts.

Mrs. Cleek received many pretty and useful gifts and a most pleasant day was spent together.

Christmas Gifts Should Be Mailed During November

Dellvery of the annual flood of Christmas gifts and cards on time, always a serious problem, "will be more than a problem this year—it will be an impossibility—unless Christmas mailings are made largely in November," Postmaster General Frank C. Walker warned today.

"Transportation facilities are burdened to the limit with war materials and personnel, and the Postal Service has sent more than thirty-one thousand experienced employees into the Army and Navy," Mr. Walker said. "The only solution to the Christmas problem is: MAIL IN NOVEMBER. Mark your parcels, 'DO NOT OPEN UNTIL CHRISTMAS.' That is the only way to avoid disappointment on Christmas Day not only for many civilians but also for millions of members of the armed forces who are still in this country.

"It is also the only way to avoid the possibility of a Christmas emergency in the transportation and postal services. If the public will cooperate by mailing their Christmas parcels DURING NOVEMBER, we can handle a small volume of light, last-minute mailings, such as cards, up to December 10—but we can do that and avoid an emergency only if November is really 'Christmas Mailing Month."

Postal officials pointed out that the volume of mail now is far above any previous records, that railway cars by the hundreds have been diverted to war service and that the air lines have only about half as many planes as they once operated.

More than two hundred thousand extra temporary employees normally are employed to help with the holiday postal rush. This year, the extra employees will be largely women and high school boys and girls who are unable to work the long hours usually required and whose work will be relatively slow.

To deliver the Christmas mails on time, therefore, it is necessary that mailings be spread out over a longer period so that available transportation equipment and postal personnel can be used during more weeks. It will be utterly impossible to make the deliveries by Christmas if mailers wait until the last three weeks before the holiday, as in normal years.

There is another reason for shopping and mailing earlier than ever before. Retail stores are short handed. Purchasers can avoid shopping in crowded stores, long waits for service, and other inconveniences of late shopping if they buy now. They will also doubtless have a better choice of merchandise than will be available later.

Postmaster General Walker observed that his warning is not an attempt to tell the public what to do; it is only an advance notification of what will happen if they mail late. He feels that the public is entitled to the facts, and that when they know them, they will decide to MAIL IN NOVEMBER.

Mrs. Markesberry Allphin

Mrs. Markesberry Allpin, age 55, formally of Verona, but for the past six weeks had been living with Mrs. Mattie Griffith on the Richwood Road was struck by an auto while walking on Highway 42 in Boone County near Warsaw Sunday evening.

She was taken to St. Elizabeth Hospital in an ambulance from the Carlton funeral home, where she died a few hours later.

Services were conducted Wednesday at 2 P. M. at the Big Bone Baptist Church, by Rev. Roy Johnson, with burial in the Big Bone Cemetery.

She is survived by one sister, Miss Mary Markesberry and two brothers, Charlie and Willis, all living near Verona.

Hamilton funeral directors were in charge of the arrangements.

Mrs. Dorothy Smith 22, of Columbus, Ohio driver of the auto that struck Mrs. Allpin was released by Boone County authorities after relatives of Mrs. Allphin consented that no charges be placed against her. After investigation of the case a verdict of accidental death was returned.

19,000 Refugees Now In Sweden.

Nineteen thousand Norwegian refugees are now in Sweden and 7,000 of them are earning their own way by working "in forest, agriculture, industry and road construction", according to an article in the Swedish newspaper, Dagens Nyheter. "The refugees offer a possibility for personal contact and a foundation for friendly Swedish-Norwegian relations that may be far more decisive for the future than theoretical political plans," the article commented.

Simeon S. Willis Elected Governon In Close Race

For the first time in sixteen years, Kentucky has elected a Republican Governor, Simeon S. Willis, Attorney of Ashland, Ky., and former Judge of the State Court of Appeals won by more than 5000 majority.

The race with J. Lyter Donaldson, Attorney of Carrollton, banker and State Highway Commissioner was a very close one, and was not decided until almost all of the votes were counted.

Kenneth H. Tuggle of Barboursville, the Republican Candidate for lieutenant governor also was elected. Other state officials elected by the Republicans were: Secretary of State, Auditor, Treasurer, Superintendent of Public Instructions and Commisioner of Agriculture.

The Democrats retain control of the Legislature.

Mrs. Fanna Rider

Mrs. Fanna Rider, age 62, wife of William Rider Jr. died suddenly from a cerebral hemorrhage at her home near Napolean Saturday, November 6th.

She leaves two children, Ottis Rider of near Napoleon and Mrs. Bertha May O'Donell of Covington and one grandson, two sisters, Miss Grace Rider of Patriot, Ind., and Mrs. Welletta Rayles of Ill.

Burial was in the Odd Fellows Cemetery at Napoleon.

Hamilton funeral directors had charge of the arrangements.

The War Fund Drive in Boone County has gone over the top by three hundred dollars. All reports are not complet at this time but a full report will be published next week.

Wild Animals Plague Norwegians.

Bears, wolves, wolverines, and foxes have staged such a comeback in Norway during the past three year that they have become a plague to the Norweglan farmers Stripped of thelr firearms by Nazi order, the Norweglans are unable to combat the pests. Wolves, formerly confined to northern Norway, have spread southward. One Gudbransdal farmer recently lost 35 sheep in a single night.

Campaign Started To Help America Save Food

This article, and following articles, we hope will help to solve many of the arguments and discussions on the food question of today.

Your Uncle Sam, after 20 years of wrestling with food surpluses, is now asking each and every one of us to get behind a campaign to save food. Why?—

Despite shortage of farm machinery and farm labor, American farmers for the past 3 years ave answered the Deprtment of Agriculture's call for more food by progressively stepping up food production. In 1942, aided by favorable weather, they produced an all-time record crop—27 percent more food than the average for the pre-war years 1935-39. In 1943 even this record was pushed still higher, despite a wet, cold spring, floods, and a summer drought. Why hasn't this been enough?

The answer is that production alone is not enough. No matter how much food the Nation's farmers are producing, the demand grows more rapidly than the supply.

The increased demand has come in three main catergories: military, civilian and lend-lease. Our armed forces by the end of 1943 will approximate 10 million men. Many of these men went into the army from food-producing, food-processing, or food-distributing jobs. All of them eat more in the armed forces than they did as civilians. Men in service get about 5 pounds of food a day; civilians average 3½ pounds. We all recognise that our soldiers need more. And with more of our troops overseas, in all corners of the globe, supply llnes must be extended. This calls for increased shipments, larger reserves.

At the same time the needs of our fighting Allies have increased. While the English were fighting off the German blitz attacks of 1940 and 1941, they were increasing the amount of food they raised and cutting down the amount they ate. By planting gardens in bombed-out city blocks and in the grounds of Buckingham Palace, by darining swamp lands and plowing up pastures, the British increased the proportion of their food which they raised themselves from one third to two thlrds. On the other hand their armies have also expanded and their food needs likewise.

Soviet Russia which has suffered greater casualties than any of the United Nations has also suffered most heavily in production capacity. In the first year of Nazl atack Russia lost her "bread basket"—the Ukraine—and other areas, which produced 40 percent of her peacetime food. She suffered the same problems of farm manpower as we, as her armies swelled to hold back the Nazi flood. Although all Russia has been cheered by the successes of the Red Army in rolling back the Nazis in 1943, American observers report this winter food rations will be lower than ever and many civilians will go hungry until the reconquered lands can be restored to production. We can ill deny these Allies the food they desperately need.

World Community Day

In many cities and towns throughout the United States, today, November 11th, is being observed as World Community Day. In meetings and programs held by and for church women on the theme: "The Price of An Enduring Peace," for the purpose of uniting all church women in local communities in a day's study of their responsibility for a just and lasting peace in a new world order.

In Walton, for all women of this community, a meeting beginnlng at 11:00 a. m. will be held at the Methodist Church, sponsored by the women of the Methodist and Christian Churches. A covered dish lunch will be served at noon. All the women of this community are cordially urged to attend both morning and afternoon sessions, bringing a covered dish for the lunch.

Walton Methodist Church Redecorated.

The repair work on the outside and inside walls of the Methodist Church as well as the redecorating of the inside walls have been completed. Rev. Dearing deserves much credit for his faithful work given to this job. Mr. Kelly was his able assistant. The church gave a very pleasing appearance Sunday with its newly painted walls, the U. S. Flag and Christian Flag and the new Service Flag in honor of seven of our young men of the church who are serving in the Armed Forces, Russell Dearing, Johnnie Gault, Malcolm Simpson, Paul Simpson, William Roberts, "Bud" Young and Sam J. Hudson. Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Pruett gave the Service Flag Sunday.

Brazil To Make War Machines

Tanks, tractors, automobiles, and aviation motors will be manufactured in a factory 40 miles from Dio De Janeiro. The factory is already employing 2,500 persons and within the coming year a city of 30,000 ls expected to arise around it.

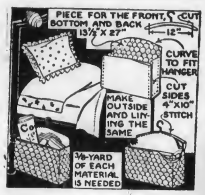
Boone County Tuberculosis Ass'n Elect Officers

The Boone County Tuberculosis Association met at the Town Hall in Florence Monday, November 1 to elect officers and to appoint committees. R. V. Lents, Principal of the Constance School was elected Executive Secretary who will have charge of the Christmas Seal Sale, Mrs. Justin Dolph, of Petersburg was elected Recording Secretary, and Miss Mary Bess Cropper, of Hebron, Treasurer.

A committee was appointed to report all cases of tuberculosis from their communlties and to keep the executive committe informed of the patients needs. This committee is composed of Mrs. John L. Vest, Walton; Mrs. Jesse Hamilton, Verona; Mrs. Louis Houston, Florence; Mrs. Lawrence Rodamer, Constance; C. D. Benson, Burlington; Mrs. Hugh McArthur, Grant; Mrs. Jameson Aylor, Hebron; Mr. Everit Jones, Hamilton; Mrs. Geo. Baker, Beaver Lick; and Mrs. Raymond Newman, Union. All those appointed have not been contacted, but it is assumed that all will accept their responsibilities.



It is the purpose of the Boone County Tuberculosis Association to ald every tubercular that is not financially able to ald himself. Mr. Lents stated to a reporter of this paper that many cases have been alded, but due to financial limitations outside aid has been called upon to aid in some cases. He also said that by having a committee representing every community in the county every needy patient will receive some aid from the organization.

ON THE HOME FRONT

with RUTH WYETH SPEARS

THIS bag was planned as a gift for someone who was finding days in bed difficult enough without having books, magazines and writing materials scattered about. If you like to take an assortment of reading matter to bed, sick or well, you will enjoy a bag like this. Its hanger hook may be sewed to box springs and there you are with everything handy.

The bag shown here was made of a remnant of heavy cotton upholstery material in tones of green with a touch of red in the pattern. The red was repeated in the sateen lining. The sketch gives all the dimensions and shows how the lining and the outside part were made. A coat hanger was cut down to measure 12 inches from end to end and was placed between the lining and the outside; these being stitched together around the top, as illustrated.

NOTE—This bedside bag is but one of thirty-two useful things to make for the home, that are illustrated with detailed directions in BOOK 8 of the series prepared for readers. The price of BOOK 8 is 15 cents. Send your order to:

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Terrific Air Attacks Spur Allied Drive Against Nazis on Central Italian Front; Moscow Conference Offers Blueprint For Lasting Peace in Postwar World

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysis and not necessarily of this newspaper.)
Released by Western Newspaper Union.

An Allied transport is shown rumbling over pontoon bridge thrown up by American engineers across the Volturno river in Italy.

EUROPE:
Blast Communications

Roaring over France's once paradisaical Riviera, Flying Fortresses took pot-shots at communications lines shuttling troops between southern France and northern Italy. To the south, Allied medium bombers blasted harbors above Rome, which the Nazis have been using to relieve strained road and rail facilities.

As their heavy bombers smashed far back of German lines, Allied troops slowly drew up for their next assault on Nazi mountain positions in central Italy. As rain continued to fall in swirling sheets and mud-died up the country, U. S., British and Canadian soldiers captured strategic heights for observing enemy action and took over important road junctions for shuttling supplies.

As the Allies edged forward, the Germans snuggled deeper into their new posts along the 2,500-foot high Massico ridge facing Lieut. Gen. Mark Clark's Fifth army on the west, and the rugged country confronting Gen. Bernard Montgomery's Eighth army to the east.

Italian King on Spot

Noted for his political tight-rope walking, King Victor Emmanuel of Italy now threads a very shaky line, with the new democratic forces in the country demanding his abdication.

Prince Vittorio

Led by former foreign minister and refugee Count Carlo Sforza, Italy's democratic elements have expressed approval for setting up King Victor's six-year-old grandson, Prince Vittorio Emmanuel, as the nominal monarch, with a regent like Marshal Badoglio to represent him until he comes of age.

Chief objection to King Victor is that he not only allowed Mussolini to come into power, but that he also supported him throughout his administration, renouncing him only when it appeared Italy would lose the war and the smart thing to do would be to jump onto the Allied bandwagon.

Removal of King Victor Emmanuel would sound the death knell of monarchy in Europe, since he is one of the last rulers with any actual governmental powers.

SOUTHWEST PACIFIC:
Last Step

Gen. Douglas MacArthur took the final step toward driving the Japanese from eastern Australasia with a massive attack designed to clear the enemy from the big air and sea base of Rabaul in New Britain.

Feeder point for Japanese forces in the Solomons and New Guinea, and nerve center for enemy resistance in the whole eastern Australasian area, Rabaul stood threatened as U. S. forces spilled over into the remaining Nipponese holdings in the Solomons, which flank the base and offer means for harassing any Allied force attempting to move against the big pivotal position.

Occupation of the Treasury Islands heralded MacArthur's drive in the Solomons to cut off Rabaul. Then, U. S. troops landed on the last two important Jap strongholds of Choiseul and Bougainville, with units of the enemy fleet and air force offering resistance.

ELECTION NEWS:
GOP Maintains Growth

Continued growth of Republican strength was evidenced in a smattering of important state and mayoralty elections.

In New York, GOP candidate Joe R. Hanley won the lieutenant-governorship from Democratic candidate Lieut. Gen. William N. Haskell by more than 340,000 votes of approximately 3,308,000 cast. Hanley's victory assured the GOP of control of the state if Governor Thomas Dewey should make the race for the presidency, since, as lieutenant-governor, Hanley would step in his shoes.

New Jersey's governor during World War I, Republican Walter E. Edge, returned to the political arena to win the office again during World War II by defeating Democrat Vincent J. Murphy by approximately 100,000 votes. Edge succeeds retiring Governor Charles Edison.

Republicans held their 62-year control of Philadelphia, with GOP Mayor Bernard Samuel beating Democrat and White House favorite William C. Bullitt by more than 64,000 votes.

FOUR POWERS:
Postwar Blueprint

From out of the conference of foreign ministers in Moscow was fashioned a four-power pact between the U. S., Great Britain, China and Russia pledging a finish fight with the Axis and this blue-print for the postwar world:

1. Establishment of an international organization of both large and small sovereign nations to maintain peace and security; 2. Before the establishment of such an organization, the four powers will act together to preserve order; 3. Regulation of the armaments of nations.

For Italy, the powers dedicated themselves to destroying Fascism and promoting democratic government. They refused to recognize Germany's annexation of Austria in 1938, telling that country its future treatment will be conditioned by its assistance in overthrowing Nazism within its borders.

The U. S., Great Britain and Russia planned creation of a committee to advise on political questions in countries reconquered by the Allies.

MINES:
Back in U. S. Hands

With the nation's coal pits back in U. S. hands, Secretary of Interior Harold Ickes conferred with United Mine Workers President John L. Lewis to end the walkout of almost 350,000 bituminous miners.

Having given the pits back to private ownership October 12 after having taken them over last July, Ickes found them in his lap again, following their seizure by President Roosevelt after the UMW began its walkout over failure of negotiations for a signed contract.

The big bone of contention lay in the War Labor board's refusal to ratify a new contract drawn between the UMW and Illinois Coal Operators, providing for an 8½ hour day, with compensation for underground travel time and a daily wage increase of $1.50. Instead the WLB recommended an 8½ hour day, with a daily pay boost of $1.12½.

To Ickes fell the task of reconciling the UMW and WLB differences, even as a danger of a coal shortage arose, with deliveries prohibited to anyone with 10 days' supply on hand, and sales limited to one ton to householders.

HIGHLIGHTS . . . in the week's news

ENEMY ALIENS: Since Pearl Harbor, 7,884 enemy aliens have been interned or paroled after a hearing, Attorney General Biddle reveals. That is more than half of the 14,738 persons seized as potentially dangerous. Biddle says that 3,771 aliens have been interned, of whom 1,853 are German, 1,798 Japanese, and 111 Italians. A few Hungarians and Rumanians are held.

GROUND GAINER: The Notre Dame football team is establishing a new mark for ground gaining. The average is now about 485 yards a game. The army team is close behind with 434 yards.

RUSSIAN RELATIONS IMPROVE

The diplomatic grapevine reports that inter-Allied relations with Russia are going pretty well now. This is certainly true on the surface, and while some irritations have occurred below the surface, both sides have shown a real tendency to try to get along.

Most serious sub-surface irritation was over the Mediterranean Council, through which Russia, the United States and Britain were to confer regarding Italy, North Africa and the Balkans.

The Russians, snubbed earlier in the summer regarding preliminary Italian armistice terms, took the Mediterranean Council seriously and appointed as their representative Andrei Vishinski, the famous prosecutor in the Russian purge trials. This was the equivalent of sending the most outstanding member of the U. S. Supreme court or the leading lawyer of England.

Vishinski is a man of national stature, capable of making Mediterranean decisions without consulting Moscow. But to represent the United States on the Mediterranean Council, Secretary Hull sent Ed Wilson, U. S. ambassador to Panama. Wilson is a thorough-going, competent diplomat who can handle any routine job and handle it well. But almost no one outside diplomacy or Panama has heard of him. He has no national stature and he cannot act on his own.

Immediately it developed that Wilson was to act as a glorified messenger and report everything back to Washington. The British representative was to do the same. In other words, Churchill and Roosevelt were to make the decisions, and the much publicized Mediterranean Council was to be a mere reporting agency.

This immediately roused Russian wrath. They had welcomed the Council, appointed a top man. So for a moment they considered withdrawing. However, for the sake of Allied harmony, they stayed on and are giving the Mediterranean Council a trial.

POOR 'PA' WATSON

Toughest job White House Secretary Maj. Gen. Edwin ("Pa") Watson of the White House secretariat has to tackle each day is keeping the President's appointment schedule on time.

Frequently FDR will sit talking to an old friend for 15 or 20 minutes over the allotted time, and that snarls the White House schedule for the rest of the day.

This is hard on the general's nervous system, especially when bigwigs from the war or navy departments are waiting to discuss military matters. On such occasions Watson is not above barging in and breaking up the conference.

The other day when the President's old friend, Governor Bob Kerr of Oklahoma, was overstaying his time—through no fault of his own—Watson walked in and began to parade nervously about the room.

"Well, here's the undertaker, Mr. President," quipped Kerr, catching the hint. "If one of your callers gets so he doesn't move, 'Pa' will move him."

Roosevelt laughingly motioned Watson to a chair.

"Sit down and talk to us for awhile, general," he said. "We're having a very interesting conversation."

With a sigh, Watson took a chair.

BACK TO NORMALCY

Industry's eagerness to get back to peacetime operation is seen in the deluge of mail received by the chemical division of WPB. Theme of every letter is: Unlace the straightjacket and give us a chance to expand.

This pressure hits the chemical division more than any other because of the tight control which that division has exercised over the industry, and also because of the tremendous future of plastics and other developments in the chemical field.

Controls are so tight that no materials may be bought or sold without clearance with WPB, and in the course of getting clearance, the applicant must state a lot of intimate facts about his business, including buying price, selling price, profit, and inventories.

The real meaning of the complaint is that the industry is not worried about paper work so much as it is worried about limitation on profits. Under government control, prices are held down by the fact that sales are limited to war needs, but when this restriction is removed, the demand for chemical materials will be terrific, and profits will go through the ceiling.

THE SANCTITY OF THE HOME

LESSON TEXT—Exodus 20:14; Matthew 5:27-30; Mark 10:2-12.

GOLDEN TEXT—Blessed are the pure in heart: for they shall see God.—Matthew 5:8.

As the divinely appointed center of man's life, the home holds a place of such importance that it is the special target of Satan's offensive. That has always been true, but it seems that in recent years the onslaught against the home has been intensified.

Books, plays, movies, magazines, all contribute their filthy efforts to break down all sense of moral responsibility. Sex is magnified, and not in any useful or normal sense, but rather for the stimulating of unholy desires and purposes, the breaking down of Christian standards of living, and the ultimate prostitution of the most sacred of all human relationships to the lowest level of which animals might well be ashamed.

All this means that this lesson should be taught with a holy boldness and plainness which will make it effective for God in our homes.

We do not like to talk about adultery and related sins. We must speak with care and tact, but perhaps the time has come for some straightforward dealing with an unpleasant situation.

I. Protect the Purity of the Home (Exod. 20:14; Matt. 5:27-30).

Any violation of the divine plan for the marriage of one man and one woman, in loving communion for the founding and maintenance of the home, is a direct violation of the law of God.

It is also a violation of the law of man. It brings serious results in the destruction of the home, and in the ruin of individual life—physical, moral, and spiritual.

The words of Jesus broaden the interpretation of the commandment to cover all sexual impurity in thought, word, or deed.

We are to be firm and definite in our dealing with this temptation to moral uncleanness even though it be as painful as tearing out an eye or losing a hand. The command here is not necessarily to be interpreted literally. Tearing out an eye will not help if there is lust in the heart. The point is, go to the root of the matter, and get rid of it even if it hurts. Most of us are far too easy on our sinful impulses. We dally with them when we should destroy them.

II. Recognise Marriage as a Divine Institution (Mark 10:2-8).

The Pharisees, who had devised some ingenious schemes for getting rid of an undesired wife, wanted to get Jesus involved in the question. They put him up against Moses who had allowed divorce.

Jesus made it clear that this was not in accord with God's plan and only took place because of their sinful hardheartedness.

As a proper background for the discussion of divorce He set up the divine origin of marriage. He made it clear that marriage was ordained by God, and that it involves a holy union of two individuals which makes them one.

All those who look forward to marriage should realize that it is not a casual thing, or a merely temporary legal contract. It is a union for life—be it for better or worse, in sickness or health, in prosperity or adversity. All who are married should highly regard their sacred vows.

The high place of marriage in Christian teaching dignifies that relationship and denies the misleading and destructive theories of men.

III. Follow God's Law on Divorce (Mark 10:9-12).

Failure to observe God's law in these matters may involve a person in the guilt of gross sin. This passage and others teach that divorce is to be permitted on the one ground of adultery (Matt. 5:32).

Divorce and remarriage other than on grounds permitted by God involves the parties in the sin of adultery. Men may make laws based on the civil contract of marriage which provide differently, but man cannot remove marriage from its place as a divine institution, nor can he add to or take away from God's law concerning it.

Aware, as we are, of the laxness of some branches of the church in such matters, and the almost entire lack of standards in the world, we cannot but present the plain teachings of our Lord and urge every reader to follow the commandment of God's Word.

There can be no question that divorce is a major evil in our day. Statistics are positively shocking, but they are cold and quickly forgotten. But who can fail to see, and who can forget, the awful woe brought into American home life by divorce.

Bad as it is, the awful effect on parents is nothing compared to the nervous, moral and spiritual shock which comes to children in broken homes. And that problem is everywhere.

Large-Sized Vestee

THE older woman sometimes has difficulty in finding instructions to make a smart crocheted sleeveless vestee. This one was especially designed for sizes 38-40 and 42. It is comfortable, well-fitted and can be worn in the house in our winter heat-rationed rooms and is equally comfortable for out-of-door wear under a heavy coat. Make it of wool sport yarn in American Beauty, navy blue, brown or dark green.

Robot Radio Operator

The lives of many torpedoed seamen may be saved by a new invention.

It is an automatic wireless transmitter. The ship's name and code mark are inscribed on a film, and the vessel's position is inserted on the film as often as conditions demand.

When a vessel is torpedoed or mined, the transmitter comes into action and continues to send out the ship's name as long as the ship remains afloat without the radio operator standing by. The inventor is Captain Espeseth, a Norwegian seaman.

When the soldier talks about "the skipper" he means his captain, the head of his company. And that's just what the title "captain" means. It comes from the Latin word "caput" meaning "head." Another leader high in the Army man's favor is Camel cigarettes—they're first choice with men in the Army. (Based on actual sales records from service men's own stores.) When you're sending gifts from home, keep in mind that a carton of cigarettes is always most welcome. And though there are Post Office restrictions on packages to overseas Army men, you can still send Camels to soldiers in the U. Birthday Of The Marine Corps

The following will be read to the command on the 10th of November of each year:

(1) On November 10, 1775, a Corps of Marines was created by a resolution of the Continental Congress. Since that date, many thousand men have borne the name Marine. In menory of them it is fitting that we who are marines should commemorate the birthday of our Corps by calling to mind the glories of its long and illustrious history.

(2) The record of our corps is one which will bear comparison with that of the most famous military organizations in the world's history. During the greater part of its existence the Marine Corps has been in action against the Nation's foes. Since the Battle of Trenton, marines have won foremost honors in war, and in the long eras of tranquility at home generation after generation of marines have grown gray in war in both hemispheres, and in every corner of the seven seas that our country and its citizens might enjoy peace and security.

(3) In every battle and skirmish since the birth of our corps marines have acquitted themselves with the greatest distinction, winning new honors on each occasion until the term "marine" has come to signify all that is highest in military efficiency and soldierly virtue.

(4) This high name of distinction and soldierly repute we who are marines today have received from those who preceded us in the corps. With it we also received from them the eternal spirit which has animated our corps from generation to generation and has been the distinguishing mark of the marines in every age. So long as that spirit continues to flourish marines will be found equal to every emergency in the future as they have been in the past, and the men of our Nation will regard us as worthy successors to the long line of illustrious men who have served as "Soldiers of the Sea" since the founding of the corps.

What You Buy With WAR BONDS

Battle of the Atlantic

A sinking smokestack, a great air bubble, an empty lifeboat, all that is visible of a torpedoed tanker, all that is evident of the hard work, the savings we put into War Bonds to build this tanker, to load it with 50,000 gallons of high octane gas.

Our money is still safe but the tanker is lost forever. Another and another and another must be built to take its place.

The men who sail the seas are giving their lives to win the Battle of the Atlantic. We are asked only to lend our money.

Flyer's Wife Urges Housewives To Save Food, Prevent Waste.

In a message to American housewives urging the conservation of food, Mrs. James H. Doolittle, wife of the famous flyer, said nothing should be, or need be, wasted in kitchens today, "for even two spoonfuls of peas may be used to advantage."

Mrs. Doolittle has a personal interest in seeing that "food fights for freedom," for the war has scattered the Doolittle family far and wide. When last heard from, Major General Doolittle was in Africa. Son Jimmy, a lieutenant in the Air Force, has recently returned to the United States from the South Pacific. The other Doolittle boy is a cadet at West Point.

"Food is the number one essential on the home front," Mrs. Doolittle said. "The amount of food we have is not nearly as important as the use we make of it. Most of us in America have been too lax in the preparation of food and have given too little thought to the serving of food and providing balanced meals. Today we are learning that we can conserve food and at the same time be better fed."

Mrs. Doolittle, who loves to cook and boasts she has never had a cook, says one of the best ways to see that food is not wasted is to "use imagination. Don't be afraid to substitute beans for peas, stale bread for cracker crumbs. Even cold mashed potatoes may be served again if prepared with imagination." Mrs. Doolittle adds milk to them, if necessary, and uses them in a casserole.

Emphasizing that food should be seasoned well and served attractively, Mrs. Doolittle said leftovers can be delicious if the cook uses ingenuity. She is noted for her "out-of-the-icebox" dishes which may serve twenty people when there seems to be only enough food for two or three.

COOKED A FINE DINNER; THEN THREW IT TO DOG

One lady recently stated that she used to throw her own dinner to the dog most of the time. It made her sick just to look at anything to eat. She was swollen with gas, full of bloat, had headaches, felt worn out and was badly constipated. Finally she got ERB-HELP and says she now eats everything in sight and digests it perfectly. Bowels are regular and normal. She is enjoying life once more and feels like "some other woman" since taking this New Compound.

ERB-HELP contains 12 Great Herbs; they cleanse bowels, clear gas from stomach, act on sluggish liver and kidneys. Miserable people soon feel different all over. So don't go on suffering! Get ERB-HELP! Jones Drug Store.

YOU MAY NOT BE ABLE TO Fight FOR AMERICA,

..but you CAN buy War Bonds regularly, from income, and you CAN add to your savings...all for use AFTER VICTORY.

SEMI-ANNUAL DIVIDENDS

"...A-way down South in Dixie"

THERE'S a new tune in the air in our Southland these days. And it's sweet music to the ears of America's fighting men.

You hear it in the vibrant roar of great Southern mills and factories...

You hear it in the ceaseless clatter of Southern shipyards...

You hear it in the busy hum rising from Southern farms and forests and mines...

You hear it in the deep voice of powerful Southern Railway locomotives and in the endless rumble of the Southern's freight trains.

It's the song of the South today...the hustling, wartime Southland, served by the Southern Railway System and dedicated, above all else, to speeding the day of final Victory.

And after the war is won, this great and growing Southland will turn to the rich, rewarding tasks of Peace.

Then, new and better products will come from modern Southern industries.

Then, new wonders will spring from Southern research laboratories.

Then, Southern forests and farmlands, mills and mines, will bustle with peacetime activity.

Then, the men and women of the Southern Railway System will make good use of the lessons they're learning under the pressures of war...to speed the peacetime commerce of the Greater South to an eager world...from "A-way down South in Dixie."

Danes Blow Up Germans

When the Danish Admiral Vedel had given his order that the fleet was to be either scuttled or sailed to Sweden, a detachment of German marines succeeded in getting on board the Danish naval ship "Ingolf". The German commander demanded 10 hostages as guarantee that the ship would not be blown up nor scuttled. The captain of the "Ingolf" said, "I can't prevent you from taking the hostages but I must call your attention to the fact that the seacocks are already open." The Germans put their ten hostages in a row on the deck, when suddenly a signal sounded, the whole Danish crew, hostages and all, jumped overboard, and deafening explosions shook the ship. Many of the Germans were killed or wounded, but all the Danes escaped. This report came from the Stockholm newspaper, Dagens Nyheter.

WAR BONDS TO HELP PAY FOR PEACETIME SOIL BUILDING JOB

CHICAGO.—"Pay day" for farm soils now working overtime to meet the war's vast food production quotas can be readily faced if farmers will earmark part of their present war bond purchases for peacetime soil rebuilding projects, according to a statement issued here by the Middle West Soil Improvement Committee.

"Once peace comes," says the statement, "most farmers will owe their soil considerable back pay in the form of nitrogen, phosphorus and potash now being removed much faster than it can be replaced.

"Money to pay for the prime job of soil replenishment that lies ahead can be accumulated NOW, in this sunshiny time, when farm cash income is at the highest level in history and farm debt is at the lowest point in many years. Most effective method of assuring this is to set aside a portion of war bond purchases and build up a soil 'bank account.'"

EARLY CROP PLANS VITAL IF FERTILIZER NEEDS ARE TO BE MET

CHICAGO. — The cooperation of farmers in making early arrangements for their fertilizer supplies is vitally essential this season if producers are to provide the plant foods necessary to help win the battle of food production, according to a statement made public here by the Middle West Soil Improvement Committee.

"With supplies of fertilizer smaller than the demand," says the statement, "manufacturers are doing their utmost to see that each farmer gets his fair share of the plant food available. Each farmer, in his turn, should cooperate by helping the fertilizer manufacturer plan to fill farm requirements with the least possible difficulty or delay.

"War-time conditions have drastically changed production and distribution schedules in all fertilizer factories. Formerly the shipping seasons were concentrated into fall and spring rush periods. Now shortages of labor, materials and transportation have changed all that.

"Fertilizer production schedules must be on a year-around basis now instead of on seasonal peaks. Producers are being allocated their raw materials on a relatively uniform basis thruout the year.

"The supply situation is further complicated by a scarcity of both potash and superphosphate brought about by American lend-lease agreements for shipments overseas.

"In view of all these factors, it is evident that the fertilizer tonnage must flow from factory to farm in a steady volume for all the months to come instead of on a seasonal rush basis which cannot be handled as in the past."

Members of the Eight Army Air Force in England have opened a hobby shop. Here the boys spend their spare time making toys for English children—model tanks, fire trucks, cradles, tommy-guns, little woden locomotives, racing automobiles, with real windshields. The boys go to the schools in poorer districts and ask the teacher which children need things and what they like the most. The boys set a goal of 2,400 toys to be made and stuffed with candy and gum from their weekly rations.

BUY FERTILIZER NOW AND STORE IN BARN, FARMERS ARE ADVISED

CHICAGO.—Why fertilizer supplies should be purchased much earlier than usual, if farmers are to have necessary plant food on hand when needed at crop seeding time next spring, was told in a statement made public here today by the Middle West Soil Improvement Committee.

"The necessity for prompt action in making arrangements for fertilizer is due to a number of wartime causes," the statement points out.

"For example, labor shortages in factories make it impossible for the fertilizer industry to move its product in at all the usual fashion.

"Freight traffic jams faced by both railroads and truck lines are growing more serious daily.

"Shortages of essential raw materials for fertilizer have already developed. This is especially true of superphosphate and potash.

"Meanwhile, added requirements of lend-lease shipments are reducing fertilizer supplies available to American farmers.

"In the face of all these difficulties, the fertilizer industry in the Midwest, as elsewhere, is doing its utmost to provide for the essential needs of every farmer.

"By ordering fertilizer early and taking delivery when the production and shipping schedules of the factories permit, farmers can be assured of plant food in time for their next crop season. The fertilizer can be safely stored in farmers' barns until it is time to apply it to the soils which are to grow our nation's wartime crops."

NICHOLSON

"The Lord is our fortress and deliverer." With war clouds hanging low and the world at its worst, Christians should be at their best, for God's cause ultimately will win. Wrong shall not triumph over right permanently, God still rules and reigns and is on His throne presiding over His children.

Deeply appreciated was the recent kindness of Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Rankin and Mrs. Bryon Fisk.

Again, are we indebted to Mrs. John Hume for another lovely tray of delicious dinner consisting of roast beef, mashed potatoes, sliced tomatoes, head lettuce, radishes, and other things.

Most heartily do we thank Miss Nellie Fisk for a cluster of autumnal blossoms.

Heartiest thanks are extended to Mrs. Bolen for lovely sandwiches.

INDEPENDENCE R. R. 1

"Watch and pray, that ye enter not into tempation." Matt. 26:41.

This entire community was grieved to learn of Mr. Chas. Barlow passing away this past week at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Dawson Losey of Visalia Hill. Mr. Barlow lived at his same residence at this place since his marriage until a few years ago when he became blind and had to be moved to the home of his daughter where everything that human hands could do was done to alleviate his suffering and to make things pleasant for him in his few last years of life.

His funeral was conducted at the Staffordsburg M. E. Church last Friday afternoon by his former pastor, Rev. E. K. Kidwell with his pastor, Rev. Cardwell assisting in the presence of a large congregation of sorrowing relatives, neighbors and friends.

He leaves to mourn his going four children, seventeen grandchildren, and five great grandchildren. Mr. Barlow will be sadly missed in the home, and community as he always had a pleasant hand chake and kind word for everyone.

T. W. Swindler of Latonia had charge of the funeral interment at Independence Cemetery.

The many friends of August Hawkins are sorry to learn he is quiet ill at Bethesda Hospital and is expected to have to undergo an operation this week. We pray God's richest blessings on him, and wish him a speedily recovery.

Mr. and Mrs. Joe Richardson and daughter Reva called on Mr. and Mrs. Chester Ballanger Sunday evening.

Miss Hope Keeney of Lexington passed the week-end with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Keeney.

Mrs. Alice Ervin of Covington and Mrs. Earl Hanna spent the week-end with the laters sister, Mrs. C. E. Ervin of Middletown, Ohio.

Miss Minnie Rapp of near Dayton, Ohio came down to attend the funeral of Mr. Barlow, he was her brother-in-law. She spent the week-end with relatives.

Several of the Homemaker attended the annual meeting in Covington Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Earl Hanna entertained with a six o'clock dinner last Thursday for Rev. and Mrs. E. K. Kidwell and little daugther of Florence, Ky.

VERONA

Not much rain yet but the weather is colder this week.

Mrs. Mattie Whitson was brought from Christ Hospital last week to the home of her daughter, Mrs. Rose Hamilton and is doing nicely.

Mrs. Nell Hunt visited her son, Albert who was inducted into the Army last week and is now stationed at Ft. Thomas.

Mr. and Mrs. B. C. Griffith had supper in the Hunt home last Wednesday night.

Willie Lunsford moved to the Anderson house last week.

Car Sturgeon and children have moved to the house recently vacated by Mrs. Daisy Yelton.

The Happy Twelve Club met with Mrs. Lelia Wassom for the November meeting. Some of the Junior members came for lunch. Members, visitors and children present were around thirty. After the abundant and delicious dinner there was quite a bit of business taken care of. The following are the officers for next year: Sue Pennington, president; Sarah King, vice-president; and Maude Whitson, historian. Final plans were made for the Christmas Party and the place and time of meeting was chosen.

Testifies To Activity Of French Patriots.

"There is growing proof of the faith, number and strength, and the activity of (French) patroits," said the Commissioner of the Interior of the French National Liberation Committee, in an interview upon his return to London. "Although winter is coming on, positions in the mountains are being held. There are nearly 80,000 men organized in hideouts at lower altitudes than during the summer. Thanks to the tremendous efforts which have been made to provide them with clothing, provisions, and means of heating, we are hoping that they will get through the bad season in conditions which are more or less bearable."

WARTIME SAVINGS SUGGESTIONS for Electric Appliance Users

Nine Ways to Operate Your Refrigerator More Economically and Efficiently

- Defrost whenever frost reaches thickness of ¼-inch. Frost acts as an insulator—makes the motor run longer.
- Do not open door oftener than necessary—and close it quickly.
- Do not maintain colder temperature than necessary—40 to 42 degrees is safe.
- Do not overcrowd shelves. Circulation is needed for efficient refrigeration.
- Cover all liquids. Moisture drawn to freezer speeds formation of frost.
- Avoid quick freezing as much as possible.
- Keep condensor coils free of dist and dust.
- Do not store hot foods—let them cool first.
- Oil open unit models periodically according to manufacturer's directions.

Uncle Sam Says:
Waste of anything in wartime is a crime. Don't waste electricity just because it isn't rationed. Wasting electricity involves a waste of fuel, transportation facilities, manpower and critical materials needed elsewhere in the war effort. Use all the electricity you need—but need what you use.

FARMERS PLAN TO AVOID BOTTLENECKS IN FERTILIZER USE

CHICAGO.—If plant food to feed Uncle Sam's mammoth war crops is to flow from factory to farm without crippling bottlenecks, the cooperation of farmers in making early arrangements for their fertilizer supplies is essential, according to a statement made public here by the Middle West Soil Improvement Committee.

"Because of labor shortages in fertilizer factories and the uncertainties of transportation," says the statement, "it is no longer possible for producers to concentrate their fertilizer distribution season into a three-or four-week rush period.

"Only by moving considerable tonnage ahead of the usual season can the industry meet agriculture's demand for plant food. Because of present war-time conditions it is no longer possible for producers to get extra factory help to fill last-minute orders, or trucks to ship them.

"Every ton of fertilizer purchased early, shipped to the farmer and stored in his barn ahead of planting time, will help take some of the strain off factories and transportation systems later on. The farmer who delays ordering his supplies until he is ready to plant his crops faces a very good chance of getting no fertilizer at all.

"The farmer's ability to produce bumper crops for the war program depends on the productivity of his soil. And this soil productivity, in turn, depends on whether the land receives a sufficient supply of necessary fertilizer elements. By taking immediate steps to obtain supplies, the farmer can make certain that his soil receives the necessary plant foods."

WOULDN'T it be tough if your family's food had to be bought at auction, where goods go to the highest bidder?

That's just what rationing and top legal prices for food aim to prevent. They give everyone an equal portion, at a fixed price. And this is vitally necessary, since the American food supply—despite greatly increased production—cannot meet all the wartime demands at home and abroad.

You can help greatly in this food shortage—help your country, and help yourself—by treating food as the vital war material it is. Here are four things you can do:

1. PRODUCE FOOD, where and when you can. Farmers are urged to meet farm goals. City families are urged to plan a bigger Victory Garden, to help out on a farm or in a food processing plant if possible.

2. CONSERVE FOOD. Can and preserve food. Cut waste. Stretch your food supply by substituting plentiful for scarce foods. Balance your meals for good nutrition.

3. SHARE FOOD. Put the war's food demands first. Share the supplies willingly with your armed forces, your Allies, your neighbors.

4. PLAY SQUARE WITH FOOD. Accept no rationed foods without giving up ration stamps. Pay no more than top legal prices under any circumstances.

Restrict Deliveries

Restrictions on all wholesale and retail deliveries ordered by the Office of Defense Transportation have gone into effect throughout the nation. The restrictions include—(1) No retail delivery of packages weighing five pounds or less or measuring 60 inches or less in length and girth combined; (2) Limitations upon the frequency of retail and wholesale deliveries of certain commodities; (3) No Sunday retail deliveries except of ice, milk or cream. Common carriers may not be used to make retail or wholesale deliveries to circumvent the order.

95 Percent of Soldiers Insured

The National Service Life Insurance Program in the army has grown to a 65 billion dollar enterprise, providing insurance protection to more than 95 percent of all members of the army according to the War Department. The program was established three years ago.

TO SIN OR NOT TO SIN
"What Shall We Say Then, Shall We Continue in Sin?" (Rom. 6:1)

1. Paul says not (Rom. 6:2)
2. Should not serve sin (Rom. 6:6)
3. Sin must not reign in us (Rom. 6:12)
4. Sin must not have power over us (Rom.6:14)
5. Sin enslaves (Rom. 6:16; John 8:34)
6. Sin is of the devil (I John 3:8)
7. Jesus came to destroy sin (I John 3:8)
8. Jesus saves FROM sin (Matt. 1.21)
9. Jesus keeps from sin (John 17:15)

Help Farmers Collect Ration Points

To assist farmers in sending OPA the ration points they collect from the sale of rationed foods, local rationing boards are mailing farmers the necessary reporting form, addressed envelopes, and complete instructions. Farmers who either sell or transfer rationed foods, such as fresh or smoked meat, all types of sausage, lard, butter and cheese, are required to collect ration points from purchasers. The full cooperation of farmers is essentail for the success of the food rationing programs, OPA said.

Ration Tokens In February

Ration tokens are expected to be ready for use by February. They will be red and blue and each will have a value of one point. They will be used by consumers as change for processed foods and meat-fats ration stamps The blue tokens will be used with blue ration stamps for buying processed foods; the red tokens with the red stamps for buying foods rationed under the meat-fats program. The ration coins, made of layers of vulcanized fiber, will be slightly larger than a nickle and smaller than a quarter.

What You Buy With WAR BONDS

Wigwag

Frequently the Navy, the Coast Guard and the Signal Corps finds it expedient to relay messages without benefit of telephone, telegraph or radio. That is when the semaphore system is employed.

Like a single flag in the "Wigwag" system, the purchase of a War Savings Stamp or Bond, in itself has an infinitesimal effect upon the entire war effort, but when 130 million determined people set their minds to make our War Bond drives successful, the result is anything but infinitesimal. *U. From where I sit . . .

by Joe Marsh

"Folks tryin' to pass laws to take legal beer away are usin' our soldiers as an excuse," remarked Jeb Howell recently.

"They don't really give a darn how the soldiers feel about it but they think it's a good opportunity to move in fast now, while the soldiers can't vote."

"That's so," I told him, "I was just readin' a London dispatch about the British Institute of Public Opinion polling our soldiers on that very subject.

"Overwhelmingly our men voted 'no prohibition laws 'til we get back!' Here's the clipping."

The poll showed that 85% of our men would vote against any new dry laws at all. Only 9% would vote for one. And 6% hadn't made up their mind on it.

From where I sit, that bears out everything I've ever heard about soldiers. And when they get back if they want dry laws they'll have the votes to get 'em! But for folks to pass laws in their absence is just another double-cross, like after the last war.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Ceylon, Africa and tropical America are expected to provide the U. S. with 84,000 long tons of crude rubber during 1943. In 1939, it is estimated, 499,473 long tons of crude were imported by this country.

Para, Brazil, was the first great rubber center. Founded in 1615, it became an important port for foreign trade about 1775. A hundred years later it was the rubber capital of the world.

Rubber obtained from a native wild vine in the Belgian Congo made Leopold II of Belgium wealthy during the 1890-1910 period. Plantation rubber development killed the Congo vine boom.

See Here, Private Hargrove!

by Marion Hargrove

WNU SERVICE

THE STORY SO FAR: Private Marion Hargrove, former feature editor of a North Carolina newspaper, has been inducted into the army and is near the end of his basic training at Fort Bragg. He has been classified as a cook and in addition his failure to master some of the fundamentals of army life have resulted in considerable extra KP duty. Thus he is thoroughly familiar with the Company kitchen and its workings. He has also learned the finer points of "goldbricking." He is editor of a section of the camp paper. As we pick up the story, Hargrove is entertaining "the Redhead" at dinner. She is having trouble getting the waiter to bring her a glass of water and Hargrove speaks:

CHAPTER XV

"Ahem," I said. He stopped humming a little tune with which he had engaged himself, and he looked at me with kindly curiosity. "Ahem," I repeated. "Are you the waiter with the water for my daughter?"

He turned on a tight, polite little smile. "The water, monsieur, will be forthcoming. I have sent my friend Charles for the water."

The Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor this afternoon came as stunning news to the men at Fort Bragg. There had been a rumor, one day a couple of months ago, that Germany had declared war on the United States to beat us to the draw, and since it was merely a rumor, there was no confirmation or denial over the radio all day long. That supposed news back then had been taken with a philosophic shrug and the thought, "Well, it's what we've been expecting."

This today caused a different war feeling. It was not what we had been expecting. To the soldiers here, whose only attention to the newspapers is a quick glance at the headlines, it was startling and distressful.

The men who heard the news announcement over the radio this afternoon at the Service Club were, for the most part, new to the Army, with less than a month of training behind them. Their first feeling of outrage gave way to the awful fear that they would be sent away, green and untrained and helpless, within a week.

The rumor mill began operation immediately. New York and Fort Bragg will be bombed within the month, the rumors said. Probably, by that time, all of us will be in Hawaii or Russia or Persia or Africa. Green and untrained and helpless. This business of teaching a man for thirteen weeks in a replacement center will be dispensed with, now that war is upon us. You're a civilian one day and a rookie member of a seasoned fighting outfit the next.

Except for a few for whom the radio held a terrible fascination the men thought first of communicating with their families, their friends, their sweethearts. They immediately went for writing materials and for the two public telephones of the club. Almost all of the 64,000 men of Fort Bragg were trying to reach their homes through the eight trunk lines which ran out of the pitifully overburdened little telephone exchange in Fayetteville.

Miss Ethel Walker, who was acting as senior hostess for the Replacement Center's Service Club, had planned an entertainment program for the evening, but when she looked out at the tension in the social hall, she despaired. She telephoned her boss, Major Herston M. Cooper, the special services officer.

"There's no use trying to put on the show tonight," she said. "Shall I cancel it? And may I turn off the radio?"

"If it's a good program, keep it," said the major. "And by all means leave the radio on. Just hang on; I'll be there in five minutes."

The major, a former criminologist and schoolteacher in Birmingham, was a lean and mischievous-looking infantry officer with a gift of gab and a camaraderie with the enlisted men. He sauntered into the Service Club, noised it about that he was going to talk, and hooked up the public address microphone.

"Here it comes," said an unhappy acting corporal. "Here comes the higher brass, to tell us the worst."

The major cleared his throat and looked over the crowd which gathered about him. "I know that this is your Service Club," he said, "and I'm a staff officer barging in on you. Before I was an officer, I was an enlisted man. And, as an enlisted man, I've done more KP than any man in this room."

A little of the tension passed and the major lapsed into one of his conveniently absent-minded ramblings. "In fact, I went on KP every time they inspected my rifle. Couldn't keep the thing clean."

He paused. "The main thing that has us worrying this afternoon is the very same thing we're being trained to protect. It's what they call the American Way—and they spell it with capitals.

"I have my own ideas about the American Way. I think the American Way is shown in you boys whose parents paid school taxes so that you could know what it was to cut hooky. It's shown in the men who pay two dollars to see a wrestling match, not to watch the wrestlers but to boo the referee. It's the good old go-to-hell American spirit and you can't find it anywhere but here.

"You and I both, when we were called into the Army, brought our homes with us. We've been thinking less about war than about getting back home after a while—back to our girls and our wives and our civilian jobs.

"Well, we know now where we stand and we don't have to worry about whether we're in for a long stretch or a short vacation. That should be cleared up now. We know that we've got only one job now and we haven't time to worry about the one at home.

"You're worrying because you're not prepared soldiers, you're not ready to fight yet. When the time comes for you to go, you'll be ready. You'll have your fundamental training before you leave the Replacement Center.

"Spending your duty hours at work and your leisure hours at worry

"As an enlisted man, I've done more KP than any man in this room," said the major.

—that's no good. That's what the enemy wants for you."

"I guess that's all, boys."

He turned to leave the microphone, but returned as if he had suddenly remembered something.

"The regular variety show will go on tonight at eight o'clock," he said.

They come and they go from the Replacement Center more quickly now, or perhaps it merely seems that they do. The training cycles have not been cut down much, but the turnover of men seems greater. Perhaps it's just that we notice the arrivals and departures more, now that war has given them grimness.

We call the train—the one that brings in recruits and takes out soldiers—the Shanghai Express. The term probably was used first by some disgruntled soldier who put into it the bitterness of a difficult transition from civilian to soldier. Now the term is used with a certain tender fondness by the permanent personnel of the Center, we who watch the men come and go.

The melancholy moan of a train whistle is heard in the distance of the night and a sergeant clicks his teeth wistfully. "Here she comes, boys," he says. "Here comes the Shanghai Express." The sound of the whistle identifies all that touches the heart of a soldier.

There was a group of new men coming in this morning, down at the railroad siding. Their new uniforms hung strangely upon them, conspicuous and uncertain and uncomfortable—new uniforms on new soldiers.

They were frightened and ill at ease, these men. A week ago they had been civilians and the prospect of the Army had probably hung over some of them like a Damoclean sword. They had been told, by well-meaning friends, that the Army wouldn't be so bad once they got used to it. The Army will make you or break you, they had been told. The Army really isn't as bad as it's painted, they had heard. All of this, in a diabolically suggestive way, had opened conjectures to terrify the most indomitable.

This morning, they still hadn't had time to get over their fears. They still had no idea of what Army life was going to be like. Most of all and first of all, they wondered. "What sort of place is this we're coming into?"

Their spirits were still at their lowest point — past, present, or future.

The Replacement Center band, led by wizened little Master Sergeant Knowles, was there to greet them with a welcome that might dispel from them the feeling that they were cattle being shipped into the fort on consignment. First there were the conventional but stirring military marches, the "Caisson Song" and all the rest. And then there was a sly and corny rendition of the "Tiger Rag," a friendly musical wink that said, "Take it easy, brother."

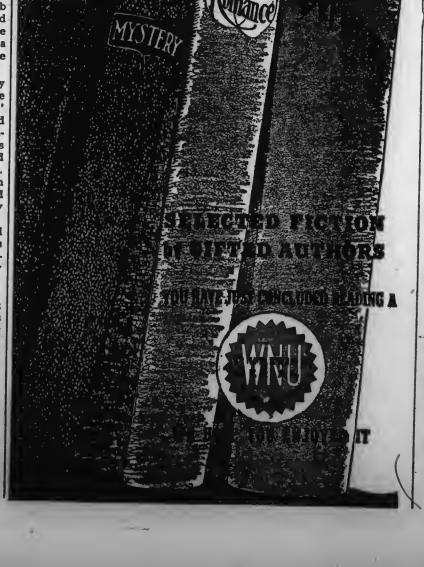
Just as their arrival marks an emotional ebb, their departure is the flood tide. The men who came in a few weeks ago, green and terrified, leave now as soldiers. The corporal whom they dreaded then is now just a jerk who's bucking for sergeant. Although they are glad that they have been trained with other men on the same level here, the training center which was first a vast and awful place is now just a training center, all right in its way—for rookies. They themselves have outgrown their kindergarten.

The band is at the railroad siding, this time to see them off with a flourish. They pay more attention to the band this time. They know the "Caisson Song." They know their own Replacement Center Marching Song, composed by one of their number, a quiet little ex-music teacher named Harvey Bosell. They hum the tune as they go aboard.

They see the commanding general standing on the side lines with his aide. He is no longer an ogre out of Washington who might, for all they know, have the power of life and death over them to administer it at a whim. He is the commanding general, a good soldier and a good fellow, and it was damned white of him to come down to see them off.

They board the train and they sit waiting for it to take them to their permanent Army post and their part in the war.

As a special favor and for old time's sake, the band swings slowly into the song that is the voice of their nostalgia, "The Sidewalks of New York," Yankee or Rebel, Minnesotan or Navadan, they love that song.



You can see their faces tightening a little, and a gentle melancholy look come into their eyes as the trombone wails beneath the current of the music. Their melancholy is melancholy with a shrug now. Home and whatever else was dearest to them a few months ago are still dear, but a soldier has to push them into the background when there's a war to be fought.

With the music still playing, the train pulls slowly out and Sergeant Knowles waves it goodby with his baton.

An old sergeant, kept in the Replacement Center to train the men whose fathers fought with him a generation ago, stands on the side and watches them with a firm, proud look.

"Give 'em hell, boys," he shouts behind them. "Give 'em hell!"

That Should Be Fast Enough to Suit Anyone

An excited woman stalked into the dry goods store and threw a faded apron upon the counter. "Look at this!" she cried. "Just look at this!"

"I am looking at it," said the young lady behind the counter. "What about it?"

"What about it?" shouted the woman, "what about it? Why when you sold me that apron you said that its color was fast. And what happened? Why the color came out at the very first washing!"

The girl looked at the woman in surprise.

"Well," she remarked, "that certainly was fast!"

"TOWN AND FARM IN WARTIME"

Prepared by the Rural Press Section of O. W. I.

WFA Releases Canned Foods

Approximately 2,790,000 cases of canned peaches, peas, and tomato catsup were released to consumers recently by the War Food Administration. The canned goods probably will not reach retail shelves for several weeks. These foods were a portion of the reserves owned and held by canners to meet possible emergency requirements of the government.

Reduce Octane In Gas

Premium gasoline used by civilians will be reduced from 78 and 80-octane to 76-octane to conserve tetraethyl lead and volatile gasoline fractions, both of which are required in the manufacture of high-octane military gasoline. More than 50 million gallons of gasoline, fuel oils, lubricants, and other petroleum products are going directly to the fighting forces every day, the Petroleum Administration for War disclosed. One-third of all gasoline produced in the U. S. is now required for military purposes.

Plenty of Turkeys

The civilian turkey supply, just starting to come on the market, will be almost as large as last year according to the Department of Agriculture. However, this year's demand will probably be much larger and shoppers will be wise to put in orders early. Men and women on duty in the American armed forces, at home and abroad will be served a pound of turkey at dinner Thanksgiving Day and will have all the traditional "fixin's."

V-Mail Christmas Presents

Relatives and friends still have time to send men and women overseas V-Mail notices of war bond gifts for Christmas. The Army Postal Service has assured delivery by December 25 of all V-Mail notices sent before December 1. War bonds as Christmas gifts will help to hold down inflationary buying of scarce merchandise, and will be a financall cushion for the service man or woman upon return to civilian life, the Treasury Department added.

Raise Hamburger Point Value

The ration point value of hamburger has been increased from seven to eight points per pound. OPA has also broadened its definition of hamburger to include additional meatier cuts of the lower grades of beef.

Increase Civilian Food Supply

More peas, beans, rice, and cheddar cheese are going to be available for civilian consumption. Supplies have been increased by the removal or reduction of government set-aside orders. Present conditions indicate there will be enough dry beans to provide about 10.4 pounds per capita for civilians consumption in the 1943-44 marketing season, compared to 8.6 pounds in 1942-43.

Tire Situation Tightens

Operators of passenger cars may find it impossible to obtain used tires because commercial vehicles delivering essential goods are now eligible to receive used passenger and truck tires of sizes smaller than 7.50-20 to replace tires no longer serviceable. November quotas recently released by OPA for new passenger and truck tires show 30 percent fewer for trucks and 14 percent fewer for passenger cars.

No More Issues Of Book One Or Two

No more copies of War Ration Books One or Two can be issued by local rationing boards for any purpose whatsoever. All stamps in the two books have expired except stamp 18 in Book One, for shoes, and blue stamps X, Y, and Z in Book Two, which may be used to buy processed foods through November 20. OPA said the covers of the two books may be thrown away when the stamps have been used or have expired.

Asks Cooperation On Coal Situation

Consumers and dealers have been urged to cooperate in an effort to alleviate suffering in homes and public institutions which may be without coal. 'Consumers who have any coal are urgently requested to refrain from ordering more while their neighbors may be without any," Harold L. Ickes, Solid Fuels Administrator for War, said recently. Retail coal dealers have been asked to check the fuel supply of their customers to discover where the need for coal is most acute. Dealers in communities where coal has been short and where the weather has turned cold have been directed to get in touch with the area distribution manager of the Solid Fuels Administration so the limited amount of coal may be distributed where most needed.

Ration-Free Children's Shoes

Some relief from the shortage of youngster's shoes will be provided about the first of the year by a new supply of children's non-leather shoes for general wear, to be sold ration-free, OPA has announced. In general, children up to about eight years of age will benefit. The shoes will have canvas uppers and soles made from remnants and heavy woven fabric reinforced with vulcanized rubber. Shoes of this type larger than misses' and youths' size three will be rationed.

Unsalted Butter Price Down

Maximum prices of unsalted butter have been reduced by ¾ of a cent a pound, which means direct saving to consumers. Other changes made by OPA in the price regulation for buter will act to end inflationary pressures which had arisen. Unsalted butter previously had a ¾ permium over saled butter.

Revise Limit On Farm Construction

The limit on farm construction, including residential, has been placed at $1,000 under a revision of Order L-41 by WPB. Previously, there were separate limits, farm residences not being considered part of the farm unit.

CCC Wheat Loans

Loans on 103,877,754 bushels of 1943 wheat, totalling $130,509,475.72, have been made by the Commodity Credit Corporation through October 23, 1943. The average amount advanced was $1.26 per bushel, which includes some transportation charges from the production area to warehouse locations.

Soft Wheat Prices Set

Sales of soft wheat by producers and all other distributors in 34 states east of the Rocky Mountains have been placed under ceilings by OPA. The maximum price established at Chicago and St. Louis is $1.64-½ a bushel. Prices at other terminal markets are: Kansas City, $1.59-½; Evansville, Ind. $1.66-⅜; Cincinnati, Ohio, $1.68-¼; Louisville, Ky., $1.68-¼; Baltimore, $1.78-¾; Philadelphia, $1.79-¼; New York City, $1.80-½; Boston, $1.81-¾; Memphis, Tenn., $1.68-½; Atlanta, Ga., $1.86-½; Galveston, Tex., $1.76-½. Maximum service charge by a commission man is set at 1-½ cents a bushel.

Plane Production Reaches New High

Production of all type of aircraft reached a new high of 8,362 planes in October, including the largest number of heavy bombers ever produced in a single month, it was announced recently.

County Grain Elevators Exempt

County grain elevators establishments which employ not more than eight individuals now are exempt from applying for War Labor Board approval of wages and salary increases, even if the establishments are part of a chain which employs a total of more than eight, according to WLB.

Pickle Prices Up

Quart jars of pickles will cost about one cent more since OPA has put maximum prices on all pickles (except fresh cucumber pickles) and picalilli. The regulation applies to sales by all persons except wholesalers and retailers. Wagon wholesalers are included, however.

Cut New Car Quota

Only 20,000 new passenger automobiles have been released for rationing during November, OPA has announced. This is the lowest figure since rationing began and represents a reduction of nearly 35 percent from the Oct. quota of 30,800.

Millions Sign Home Front Pledge

More than 12 million pledges have been signed during OPA's Home Front Pledge Campaign—The Citizens' Battle to Kill Black Markets and Hold the Line Against Higher Prices. In Minnesota, so many rural families signed the pledge that the district OPA office ran out of forms, and had to stipulate that one member sign for the entire family. When the supply ran low in Evansville, Ind., newspapers printed the pledge so the campaign could carry on. Similarly, in West Virginia, 1,030,000 pledge scrolls were printed without charge to relieve a shortage. Newspapers in San Francisco and Wenatchee, Wash., likewise printed the pledge form.

Ceramic Stove Model Built

The first ceramic cooking stove model to be built in the U. S. was recently demonstrated at the National Bureau of Standrds. The stove contains only 80 pounds of metal, mostly cast iron. The pre-war all metal model which it supplants weighed 1,085 pounds. The ceramic stove is designed to be heated with anthracite or coke. It uses only about 10 pounds of fuel in 24 hours and if it is fired every 12 hours, it will be ready for use at any time. It is expected that the first ceramic cooking stoves will reach the market around the first of the year. The purchase price has not been determined yet, but it presumably will be lower than that of the all-metal ones.

Kentucky Farmers Told 'Early Bird Gets Worm' So Far as Fertilizer Supplies Are Concerned

Need for Prompt Action to Increase Wartime Crop Output Stressed.

CHICAGO.—The old adage that "the early bird gets the worm" has a modern application in the present plant food situation, so far as Kentucky farmers are concerned, according to a statement of the Middle West Soil Improvement Committee.

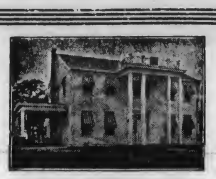
Farmers who order early and store plant food in their barn will be sure of having supplies at crop seeding time.

"In this instance," the statement points out, "it will be the early purchaser who will be sure of getting his needed fertilizer supplies for 1944 crop operations.

"Formerly the business of ordering and shipping fertilizer was concentrated into a rush period of three to four weeks. Many farmers waited until the last minute to figure out their plant food needs. Then they contacted their dealer who had a truckman go to the factory and then deliver the fertilizer out in the field.

"Now wartime labor shortages and transportation jams have made all this impossible. The production and shipping schedules of fertilizer factories are hampered by a scarcity of workers. Truck and rail systems are already overloaded. The supply situation is further complicated by a scarcity of potash and superphosphate and by additional lend-lease requirements which are cutting down the amount of fertilizer materials available to farmers.

"In view of these conditions it is obvious that fertilizer tonnage for Kentucky farms must move on a year-round instead of a seasonal rush basis. Otherwise labor and material shortages at the factories, lack of storage space and the clogged condition of transportation lines will create a bottleneck that cannot be broken.



"The forward-looking farmer who acts promptly will be certain of getting his supplies. The man who waits until the last minute faces the likelihood of getting no supplies at all."

Cooperation Essential

Every step taken now to help boost wartime crop production is a step closer to victory. Fertilizer is playing a tremendous part in helping increase per acre yields of essential crops. Plant food producers are doing their utmost to speed the war program by turning essential raw materials into the finished product for fertilizing the soil. But they are faced with difficulties in the form of labor shortages at the factory, overloaded transportation facilities, lack of sufficient storage space and scarcities of potash and superphosphate due to increased lend-lease requirements. Farmers can cooperate in easing the strain by determining at once what crops they are going to plant, how much fertilizer they will need and then getting in touch with their dealer.

Whe farmers see the advantage of following War Food Administration's advice to order fertilizer immediately.

Campaign Started To Help America Save Food.

bined we sent 6 percent of our 1942 production. In 1943 it is more, but still amounts to only about 12 percent of our total supplies. Realizing that every support we can give our Allies reduces the amount of fighting our own soldiers will have to do—and that, despite rationing, our food allowances are still far higher than our Allies'—most Americans will take it with the same "thumbs up" as the British, and with the same grim determination as the Russians: "Nicheve" — "What does it matter?"

Nor can we force the starving people of Athens and Warsaw, of Czechoslovakia and France, or Norway and Yugoslavia. These people have borne the horrows of total war for 4 years. It is not only good humanitarianism to store up food so that at the first opportunity we can send it to them. It is good military and political strategy as well. As these nations are liberated, one by one, we want them to become effective fighters on our side. Until that time, nothing else can so inspire their will-to-resist as the assurance that the day of liberation will bring American ships and trucks loaded with food. To make good on such a promise of food is up to us civilians here at home. When we realize that food saved will mean the saving of lives of our soldiers who must clamber out of landing barges to storm the guns of Hitler's fortress of Europe, we shall make good!

The greatest increase in demand for food, however, has come from our own civilian population. Civilians are eating more, as a group, than they ever have before, although with rationing, upper income families are eating less. Despite rationing, higher prices, and temporary shortages, most American families have been buying more and more food. In 1942 less than 13 percent of the food we produced went to either our own armed forces or for Lend-Lease shipments. With a 27 percent increase in production over the period 1935-39, that meant that our own domestic consumption had increased 14 percent. In 1941 and 1942 American civilians ate more food per capita than ever recorded before, and current estimates indicate that for 1943 our per capita food consumption will exceed that of any year during the 1920's or 1930's.

More people were working. Our unemployed shrank from around 8 million to about 1 million. More people had more money to spend. Higher hourly wage rates, longer hours, and steadier employment swelled weekly and annual earnings. At the same time, there were fewer things to buy. The goods civilians normally would have purchased (automobiles, radios, refrigerators, furniture) were disappearing from the market. Billions of dollars of their income went into war bonds, savings, and the payment of debts—but not nearly enough to make the difference between the 65 billion dollar national income in 1936 and the 116 billion dollar income in 1942. Higher prices took their share of the remaining margain. But there was still a large amount of excess earnings available and food was the most plentiful of the consumer goods left to absorb them. Legitimate merchants all over the country felt the pressure of greatly increased demand. More people started eating in restaurants. And when rationing finally became necessary, black markets arose to supply people who valued their appetites above their country. Through all these channels an unprecedented amount of food went to civilians.

It is clear that if we are to have enough food to meet all our needs—military, civilian, and allied—rationing is necessary. But there is another resource we have not yet tapped. Twenty to thirty percent of the food we produce appears to be wasted! The big and little dribbles all along the line, from farm to garbage can, constitute our biggest reserve of food today. This seems increadible but it is so!

In our next article we will endeavor to show you how even you, Mr. and Mrs. American, and your children, are committing a crime in food wastage.

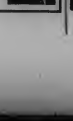
What You Buy With WAR BONDS

Free the Seas

Before we win the final battle with Hitler's Nazis all navy men are agreed we must win the battle of the Atlantic; that is to free the sea lanes of the German U-boats.

A year ago we were building 54 cruisers and nearly 200 destroyers or just about enough for a two ocean navy.



Now we have come to realize that this war is to the finish, "winner take all," and our Government is building a five ocean navy.

That is why we are being asked to increase our subscriptions for War Bonds. That is why we must do it.

Tobacco Grading Demonstration To Be Held Friday

Two tobacco stripping and grading demonstrations will be held in the county on Friday, November 19th according to H. R. Forkner, County Agent. John Y. Sleete Federal Tobacco Grader will give the demonstrations.

The demonstrations will be given at the new stripping room on the farm of H. E. White of near Burlington at 10:00 A. M. and at the farm of Joseph A. Huey of near Union at 1:30 P. M.

Tobacco stripping and grading demonstrations have been held in the county for a number of years. They offer tobacco growers an unusual opportunity to come together for a few minutes to discuss latest developments in marketing practices and prospects for the coming season. Securing the full market value of the crop produced is one of the growers most important jobs. All who are interested in the production of tobacco are invited to attend one or both of the meetings.

Miss Evelyn was a graduate of Walton High School.

James A. Farley Visits Walton Post Office

Hon. James A. Farley, former Postmaster General, demonstrates his continued interests in his government, particularly the Post Office Department, by visiting the local Post Office. Jim Farley, as he is affectionately referred to by employees of the Post Office Department, could never have administered the affairs of the Postal Department, in the history making manner that he did, unless he had a deep seated affection for the department and its employee's. In Mr. Farleys travels over the United States he never misses the opportunity of visiting a Post Office, disregarding the size. The fact that Mr. Farley's interest continues even though he is not connected with the Government, is additional proof that this interest will never flicker. The accomplishments made by him during his tenure of office has left him with a feeling of personal pride that he has just cause to harbor.

The local office, even though it be a small office, presents evidence of the general empovement he made in all divisions of the Post Office Department, inasmuch as we enjoy an office that is equipped to serve the public in the best possible manner. In addition to the betterment of service, we have an office that the citizens of this community do not have to make any apoligies for its appearance. All of this general improvement was made throughout the Post Office department without any deficit. Mr. Farley showed an excess over and above expenses throughout his administration.

Employee's of the Walton Post Office feel greatly honored by Mr. Farley's visit, is ability to make oen feel that he has been a life long friend is an accomplishment which can be cultivated only by sharing the hardships of life with his fellow men.

John Dudley Breeden Enjoys Plane Ride Home From Chicago.

John Dudley Breeden, son of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Breeden arrived by plane from Chicago Saturday afternoon, his wife arrived two days previous to visit her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Colcough and family of Independence. Those who met the plane to welcome him were: Mrs. J. L. Colcough, Mrs. Glen Laws, Mrs. W. M. Breeden, Miss Delorus Wagner, Mrs. C. O. Carlisle, Mrs. Charles Finnell, Miss Barbara Robfagel, Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Breeden and Mrs. John Dudley Breeden.

A lovely dinner was spread at the Breeden home, after which a number of relatives and friends called to visit with this fine young couple.

John Dudley Breeden S 2-c and wife left Sunday evening for Chicago where he will graduate from Navy Pier, as Aviation Machinist Mate, on Friday, November 19th.

Mrs. W. E. Duchemin of Portsmouth, Ohio came this week to spend several weeks with her sister, Mrs. Dan Roberts and family.

Mrs. Worth Conrad

Mrs. Worth Conrad, age 77, of Crittenden passed away at Booth's Hospital, Covington Monday afternoon after two weeks illness.

Funeral services will be held today (Thursday, Nov. 18) at the Mt. Zion Baptist Church at 2 p. m. with Rev. C. J. Alford of LaGrange having charge of the services, assisted by her pastor, Rev. Hammond of the Crittenden Baptist Church and Rev. A. K. Johnson of Verona.

Besides her husband she leaves four sisters, Mrs. Ida Beach and Mrs Lawrence Menefee of Crittenden and Mrs. Lula Vest and Mrs. Kate Noell of Walton and one brother Barnett Franks of Walton, Ky.

Mrs. Conrad was born at Mt. Zion and lived most of her life in that community.

She was a faithful member of the Baptist Church, devout Cristian, who will be sadly missed not only by her family, but by a host of friends.

Chambers and Grubbs were in charge of the funeral arrangements.

No Matter To Be Laughed Off

(Editorial from Kentucky Post November 11, 1943)

As the hearing of the abatement suits instituted by Attorney General Hubert Meredith proceed slowly in Campbell county, it seems to us that this fact becomes more and more apparent: Chief Justice Fulton could not have designated a more able man to sit as judge and hear the case in Campbell County Circuit Court.

We take it, as we have heard the rulings and statements of Judge John L. Vest, of Boone county, that here is a man who is neither a crusader nor a whitewasher. He is going to see that the abatement proceedings in the "gambling-corruption" case are held purely on their merits and with a view to the upholding of law and order and decency in the community.

It is lamentable that only 10 of the 48 defendants had been served with summonses when the court resumed Tuesday, Nov. 9th. Judge Vest expressed disappointment and acted with dispatch to see that prompt service is obtained in all cases by naming special bailiffs as aides to the coroner for the task.

That the legal actions begun in several centers and in various directions to break the grip of the alleged gaming and political tie-up in northern Kentucky are not going to be by-passed becomes more evident as time passes. It looks as if the assertion of a general that he'd "fight it out on this line if it takes all summer," is likely to apply here in a drive for civic betterment.

DHIA Members Make Good Record

The twenty five members of the Northern Kentucky Dairy Herd Improvement Association did a good job in producing milk the past month according to Wilson Short, cow tester for the association.

The 25 members owned an average of 18 cows per herd. The herds produced 457 pounds per milk per cow, which averaged 21.9 pounds of fat with a feed cost of $1.88 per hundred pounds or 39 cents per pound of butterfat. Ten members were feeding silage and four were feeding wet brewers grains. All but one member was feeding grain conscentrate feeds which averaged 16.7% protein.

The average production and profits per cow can not be judged from the DHIA members in that this group represents the most efficient class of dairymen. Feed costs represents less than 60% of the total costs of production.

DeLanie Roberts

DeLanie Roberts, 64 years old, passed away at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Chas. Engle of Bullittsville Thursday, November 11th after a short illness.

Funeral services were conducted from the Bullittsville Christian Church Saturday, November 13th at 2 p. m. with burial in Richwood Cemetery.

Mr. Roberts is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Chas. Engle, Mrs. Sam Patrick; two sons, Samuel and Burman Roberts all of Boone County; one brother, Sewell Roberts of Lost Creek, Ky.; four sisters, Mrs. Fred Koroling of Lost Creek, Ky., Mrs. W. L. Campbell, Hazard, Ky., Mrs. Rebecca Allen, Buckhorn, Ky., and Mrs. Serena Gillun, Porthmouth, Ohio.

Chambers and Grubbs were in charge of the arrangements.

The Happy Helpers Class of the Methodist Church was entertained for their November meeting in the home of Mrs. Elizabeth Hall Conrad at Crittenden. A most enjoyable time was spent. About eighteen members being present.

Boone County War Fund Drive Over The Top

Boone County's quota in the War Fund Drive has been exceeded by more than 15 per cent, every precinct in the county raising more than its allotted quota except one.

Boone County's quota was $3023.11 and at a meeting held at Florence on Octoer 8th when the drive was launched, Mr. Edward A. Vosmer, President of the First National Bank and Trust Co., of Covington, Ky., who was Chairman of the 3rd War Bond Drive for the area including Boone County, together with Mr. Albert Reik, Assistant Vice President of the Fifth-Third National Bank, Cincinnati, who was Vice Chairman of the same area and both of whom were present at the meeting at Florence, made the first subscription to the drive. This first subscription between these two gentlemen amounting to $23.11, leaving Boone County's balance an even sum of $3000.00.

In the same spirit which has heretofore characterized Boone County's citizenship, instead of raising $3000.00, they raised practically $3500.00. The various precincts, the Chairmen of the precincts, the quotas alloted to the precincts and actual amounts raised in the several precincts are as follows:

Precinct	Chairman	Quota	Subscriptions
Beaver	Mrs. Ruth Green	$116.55	$153.60
Belleview	R. S. Hensley	119.16	121.00
Bullittsville & Hebron	Charles W. Riley	268.88	353.50
Burlington	J. K. Cropper	414.07	506.30
Carlton	Rebuen Kirtley	108.32	64.00
Constance	Mrs. Geo. Kottmyer	168.90	175.00
Florence	W. R. Davis	681.23	826.00
Hamilton	William Walker	100.00	109.16
Petersburg	Mrs. Justin Dolph	166.08	226.60
Union	Mrs. Martha Huey	245.29	278.75
Verona	Fred Hamilton	149.16	150.00
Walton	Clinton F. Cleek	484.87	527.00
Mr. Albert Reik and Mr. Edward A. Vosmer		.00	23.11
		$3,021.11	$3,508.11

This has been reported to Mr. Frank L. McVey, State Chairman and he is very hearty in his praise of the Boone County people. He says in part, "The success of the drive points a lesson to all of us by showing what can be accomplished by joint action and cooperation. The results in your county will be a great stimulus to other counties in coming along with their drive."

Along with Mr. McVey as State Chairman, I want to thank every precinct chairman and every worker, no matter how small his or her contribution may have been because it is this spirit of cooperation and unity which we must all put forth in order to bring this war to a close.

John L. Vest
Chairman, Boone Co.

Mr. and Mrs. Chapman received many nice and useful gifts. At a late hour all sang "God Be With You Till We Meet Again," and left wishing Mr. and Mrs. Chapman many more happy days together.

Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Benson and children of Forest Hills and Mr. and Mrs. Scott Hamilton of Latonia were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. O. P. Mann.

Farm Labor Shortage To Be Critical In 1944

1944 will present a more critical farm labor shortage year than in 1943 according to Rev. W. M. Smith, county farm labor assistant. Farmers will be called upon again next year to produce abundantly for the war effort.

Many farmers can go a long ways toward solving their next years labor production needs by contracting early between both tenants and landlords or thru the employing of full time help.

Both landlords and tenants are quite often short sighted in wanting to change partnerships. One good farmer the past week estimated that it cost him $300.00 in tools, equipment and other losses every time he was forced to change tenants. It probably cost the tenant a like sum so both were loosers and food production was probably reduced. Landlords, tenants and hired help are urged to cooperate more now than ever before to see that the fewest changes possible are made. An attitude on all parties to give and take, and, work together should be followed.

All farmers whether landlords, tenants or hired help who must make changes, secure additional help or secure use of custom machinery and need help in such activities should contact the County Agent's office in Burlington. All activities should be geared to the maximum food production most needed now by our country.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Of the 125,000 communities in the United States, 54,000 have no rail connection. They depend on rubber tires for their existence and their contacts with other communities. They rely solely on buses, trucks and passenger cars.

Reduction of the national average mileage of passenger cars to 5,400 miles a year through rationing has proved an important factor in rubber conservation. An idea of how little mileage is regulated will be understood when it is known that 55 per cent of the country's cars are operated on "A" gas ration books alone; about 25 per cent have "B," and 20 per cent have "C" books for supplementary supplies.

CHAPTER I

With every slap of her powder puff resentment grew in the amber-eyed girl leaning close to the mirror. It was the color of her hair—such a dark red! Did any hair have to be so dark that it could never, even on top of a Fifth Avenue bus on a sunny day, be described as red-gold? Maybe if she did her hair a different way—but she had no time for experiment. She was late now. And Paul Harris would be quick to tell her, not for the first time, that if she didn't care enough about her job as magazine counter girl at the Devon Arms Hotel to get there on time, he, as manager, would be forced, regretfully, to accept her resignation.

But indignation at her looks and against having to hurry off to work—on Thanksgiving Day, too!—were only items in a long list of resentments that Jan Payson had accumulated. There was the matter of the Thanksgiving dinner she and Dora had just finished to the last scrap. She had set her heart on having a broiler for Dora's Thanksgiving, and to that end had smiled her prettiest every day for a week at the customers who stopped at her stall for reading matter or cigarettes. A smile, she had found, was sometimes good for a tip, but not this week—oh, no, she needed the money too badly this week to have even an extra nickel thrown her way.

A thump on the door made her jump, so that her elbow knocked against a slender vase standing on the dresser and sent it crashing against the marble.

"Who's there?" called Jan, knowing that peremptory thump very well, but pausing to retrieve the rosebud, nevertheless. It put off the actual moment of facing Mrs. Mallord by at least a split second.

"Who are you expecting?" came the sarcastic rejoinder from without, and Jan, with a sigh, opened the door gingerly. Mrs. Mallord pushed it wide the minute the knob was turned, and took a step into the room. "Well?" she said.

"Well what?" said Jan, bravely.

"Well what?" Mrs. Mallord mimicked her roommate. Then, with a brusque change of tone: "It's the rent I'm after. Give."

She held out a large, rather grimy hand at the end of a stout arm. In spite of herself, Jan's voice shook a little as she explained that, since it was Thanksgiving, she hadn't expected Mrs. Mallord to ask for the rent until—

"Yez can have till Saturday," said Mrs. Mallord, "to pay up or get out, and I'm breakin' a lifelong rule of my house to let you stay a day over three weeks—

"Good-by, darling." Jan stooped to kiss Dora's white cheek.

She smiled gayly from the threshold, then closed the door softly and ran down the stairs. It was drizzling, a fact which she had no opportunity of noting in their flat, for their two windows looked out on the brick wall of the house next door, hardly three feet away. That nickel she thought she had, proved to be nonexistent. Twenty blocks—a generous mile—lay between her and the Devon Arms. Not much of a walk, but quite a run, especially in the rain. And as far as she could figure it out, she would have to move at what was practically a run to reach the hotel anywhere near on time.

There was the Devon Arms, at last, across the street. Jan headed for the employees' entrance, darting in front of a car parked at the curb. So quickly had she bounded across the glistening black road that the man behind the wheel, with his foot on the starter, had no warning of her catapulting approach. At the instant she flew into his line of vision he pressed down, and the long car shot forward.

The edge of the front fender bumped Jan smartly as she clipped past. It was not a hard blow, but it threw her off balance and she sprawled on the wet sidewalk. The man, with an exclamation of alarm, leaped to the ground and lifted her to her feet. "You are hurt!"

Jan turned wrathful eyes on him. "Hurt? I'm ruined!" she cried. She dabbed feebly with her handkerchief at the mud that streaked down the front of her suit.

"Allow me." The young man whisked out a huge square of fine linen and began an expert job of mopping up.

"I don't know how you keep your job, if you can't drive any better than that," Jan said severely. "As a matter of fact, I've a good mind to complain to your employer."

"Let me—" said the chauffeur.

"Oh, skip it! I was only trying to scare you. I won't make trouble."

Jan, who had the door open by this time, waved a friendly hand, grinned a friendly grin and disappeared. The young man stood for a moment, staring at the slowly closing door. Then on an impulse he bounded across the sidewalk and gently pushed it open. Jan was just entering another door at the end of a long corridor. He heard a shrill greeting from within.

"Jan!" a girl was shrieking. "Gee, Jan, you're late!"

Jan walked slowly toward the manager's office and down the two little steps that led to the door in a remote corner of the main lobby. Her fingers had just touched the knob when the door opened suddenly from the other side. For the second time within the hour she was thrown off balance, but this time she did not actually fall. She simply careened against Paul Harris, who had just wrenched the door open—all his movements were as brisk as machine gun fire—and knocked the carnation from his buttonhole.

"Oh!" said Jan, "excuse me." She stooped to pick up the flower just as Paul made the same gesture. Their heads clicked. "Oh!" said Jan again.

"Well, well," he began with what he intended for a smile, "so we're here at last, are we? Such a bother, isn't it, to come down to work every day. And quite impossible to get here on time."

"You're firing me, aren't you?" Jan interrupted, her bitterly tried temper slipping its leash. "Then why don't you say so?" Her voice broke and she stopped suddenly.

"Very well, then, here it is in two words: you're fired," said Paul, obviously enjoying her misery. "Stop at the cashier's window for your money."

Paul Harris absently tapped a pencil on his glass-topped desk and gazed out at the rain that was now coming down in torrents. Holidays were always a dreary business, even at the Devon Arms.

"Hurt? I'm ruined!" she cried.

Paul threw the pencil down and, rising, pulled his morning coat into its usual meticulous, creaseless fit. It was generally profitable to walk around the hotel at odd hours.

Paul walked out, satisfied with himself, just in time to see a tall lanky figure advance on Molly, the telephone operator. In his hand he carried a chauffeur's cap and Paul, without seeming to, watched his progress to the switchboard and the lengthy conversation that followed. After a few minutes, however, when the man remained, Paul moved toward the raised platform where the switchboard was placed. Any chauffeur ought to get his instructions more quickly than that.

He was almost upon him before a certain familiarity in the arrogant tilt of the long narrow head made him walk more slowly. He changed his direction slightly, so that as he approached he could see the strongly etched profile of the man who was hanging on Molly's every word.

In the space of two steps Paul's manner was transformed from the domineering one he used with the help to the dignified, courteous manner he employed toward well-paying guests. This was none other than William Anthony Deverest—darling of society and hoped-for prey of every romantic debutante.

Paul's quiet, catlike tread did not herald his coming, and the young man swung around abruptly at Paul's smooth question: "Is there anything I can do, sir?"

"He was looking for Jan Payson, Mr. Harris, and I was just telling him—" put in Molly.

"That Miss Payson is no longer with us," Paul finished quietly. "Miss Elkina is taking her place and will be glad, I am sure, to carry out any commission—"

"But she said she worked here!" "Yes—ah—yes. She did. At the magazine counter."

"Was she fired?" Deverest demanded, and his tone was so brusque that Paul tactfully evaded a direct answer.

"She was late," Paul's lips thinned to a disapproving line.

Bill Deverest grinned boyishly and ran a hand through his already far from smooth hair. "Yes, I know," he said. "I guess I was responsible for that, in a way."

The manager's eyes widened slightly, but he gave no other indication that these words had started a new train of thought in his quick brain. It was one thing for a clerk to be late, but it was another for a valued customer to admit that he had been the cause of her tardiness.

"Miss Payson has been promoted—ah—that is," he said carefully, she will work during the evenings, starting tomorrow."

"Oh!" There was disappointment in Tony Deverest's monosyllable. "Say, do you promote people by making them work harder hours?"

"No," Paul said hastily, "of course not, Mr. Deverest. Miss Payson will—will only work for a few hours at night. She—she's to be in the new floor show," he added with a sudden burst of inspiration.

Tony Deverest was suddenly conscious that the pale eyes looking at him so earnestly were a little too bland for comfort. He realized that his innocent intention of taking Miss Payson to dinner by way of apology for the day's mishap was being interpreted in a more serious light by her immediate employer. Panic gripped him.

"I just wanted to make sure Miss Payson was all right," he stammered. "I mean, I just wanted to see her for a moment—"

"Of course." Paul's manner was diplomacy itself. "We are always glad to see you here, Mr. Deverest. I am sorry Miss Payson is not in, but she'll be here the next time you come," he promised.

"Well—" Tony Deverest turned the chauffeur's cap in his hands as if he had never seen it before. "My man's day off," he explained to Harris. "I'm chauffeuring myself around town. Well, see you again."

Paul Harris recognized opportunity when it whirled through the ornate doors of the Devon Arms and he now proceeded to seize it.

He retreated to his office to consider. A telegram? No, a note. He'd send one of the bellboys with it. With the employees' directory open before him, he observed that Jan lived fairly close by. He'd go himself!

Jan looked at Dora and Dora looked at Jan. The sick girl's fingers were lightly smoothing the pale blue satin of the chaise longue on which she lay.

"I still can't believe it," she said to Dora.

"But, darling, it was only a question of time before somebody realized how good you are. I've always told you that you have an awfully pretty voice and that you really dance very well."

"But a place in their new floor show! And right after he'd just fired me! And then moving us to this lovely, lovely suite—"

She prayed that she could keep the dream a reality for a few weeks. If only she could sing or dance a little better! But they seemed to like her anyway—at least Zambrini, the orchestra leader, who had been coaching her in a cute little song.

A knock at the door interrupted the girl's thoughts and made Dora jump.

"I forget and think it's Mrs. Mallord again," she laughed shamefacedly. Jan patted her shoulder reassuringly, as she went to the door.

"I am Mary Elizabeth Howard," a smart young woman announced. "This is my assistant, Pringle," she added, nodding toward the drab woman who stood beside her laden with a number of cardboard boxes.

"But—but you must have the wrong suite!" Jan protested when she could find her voice.

"Oh, no!" Miss Howard moved quickly about the room, adjusting the shades, pushing back the furniture with quick, birdlike movements. "You're Jan Payson, aren't you?" At Jan's nod she continued, "I'm to do you an evening dress and a few sports things. Mr. Harris said you are to appear in the new floor show."

But Miss Howard was in no such predicament. She flung herself into a chair and proceeded to rap out orders that Jan did not even think of hesitating to follow. She slipped out of her well-washed kimono and proceeded to allow the silent Pringle to encase her in what Miss Howard referred to as "the correct foundation for evening"—to help her don stockings finer than Jan had ever seen in her life—and to fit her slender feet into a pair of evening sandals studded with "jewels." Dora gasped as she looked at them and Miss Howard threw in a word of explanation in her crisp, hurried tones:

"The latest. Jeweled sandals. You're practically the first to wear them in New York."

NOSE AND THROAT AILMENTS

A patient consulted her physician about attacks of urticaria (hives). She explained that she had formerly been able to eat strawberries, eggs, wheat and other foods without any symptoms but now these foods caused the skin eruption.

Dr. Barton

As the patient was still under 30 years of age, the physician did not consider gland changes to be the cause. Careful inquiry brought out the fact that the attacks had begun just one year previously and shortly after her husband had gone overseas. It was upset emotions that was interfering with the glands or digestive organs so that they did not handle these particular foods properly.

It is known that emotional upsets or imbalance is the underlying cause of most attacks of stomach and duodenal ulcer, and also many cases of asthma, eczema and hay fever.

That many cases of sinus trouble are caused by emotional disturbance or imbalance is the statement of Dr. Julius A. Haiman in the New York Physician. Thus sinusitis for years has been believed due to infections which caused inflammation with pus formation. Treatment was by operation to open up or ventilate the sinuses. Other conditions caused in many cases by nervous imbalance are polyps (soft growths of tissue) and also enlarged turbinates, which also underwent operation.

Those cases of head and throat inflammation (rhinitis) with associated symptoms of gas, belching and distension, are now being recognized by the stomach and intestine specialist as being caused by emotional or nervous lack of balance, or control. Fewer operations are now performed for removal of the appendix and gall bladder.

It is interesting to learn what should have been recognized sooner that just as the emotions can upset the action of the heart, stomach, intestine and other organs, it can also cause nose and throat conditions such as sinusitis, polyps and enlarged turbinates.

Emotional upsets, improper eating, depressed mental states, must all be corrected if treatment is to be successful.

Fitness in Old Age Depends on Habits

When men and women become 65 years of age, they enter the "elderly" class and should not forget that whether they consider themselves as still middle aged, nature knows the truth and treats them accordingly. They must not try to do the same physical work as that of the young or middle aged, nor should they consider themselves definitely old and ready for retirement.

The number of men and women 65 or over in the United States and Canada today is 7 per cent of the population. That is about 10 million. At the present rate of increase in the percentage of elderly persons, there will be almost 25 million 65 years of age and over in 1980.

Fortunately, the great majority of these elderly people do not think of themselves as old or ready for the shelf and desire to carry on their usual manner of life. Unfortunately, however, many of them will ignore the little warnings of advancing age and not until they find themselves getting short of breath easily, having "rheumatic pains," having digestive disturbances with painful gas pressure, that they consider it necessary to consult their physician. Conditions causing these symptoms may have been coming on for several years.

While the most important thing to do is to get a complete physical examination, there are other things that can make people old before their time. I refer to their daily habits of life. The physician can often be of great help if elderly people carefully tell him their daily habits as to how much and the kind of work done, sleep, exercise, use of spare time.

The most important matter in postponing old age is the right diet. Fewer foods at regular meal hours and a cup of hot milk or beef juice midmorning and midafternoon will stave off hunger and prevent overeating.

Avoid fried foods, salt meat, fish, canned meat, spiced meat or fish, mustard, malt drinks, hot rolls, spiced sauces.

Why VICKS VAPORUB Is So Good
For Relieving Miseries of Childrens Colds

More than two generations ago—in grandmother's day—mothers first discovered Vicks VapoRub. Today it is the most widely used home-remedy for relieving miseries of children's colds. And here is the reason . . .

The moment you rub VapoRub on the throat, chest and back at bedtime it starts to work two ways at once—and keeps on working for hours—to ease coughing spasms, help clear congestion in cold-clogged upper breathing passages, relieve muscular soreness or tightness. It promotes restful sleep. Often most of the misery of the cold is gone by morning! That's why VapoRub is so good to use when colds strike. Try it!

CHATTERER IS MADE FUN OF

"HA, HA, HA! HO, HO, HO! Mr. Smarty caught at last!" Sammy Jay fairly shrieked with glee as he peered down from the top of an apple tree at Chatterer the Red Squirrel in the cage Farmer Brown's Boy had made for him. Sammy Jay was so relieved to think that Chatterer was not dead, and he was so tickled to think that Chatterer, who always thought himself so smart, should be caught, that he just had to torment Chatterer by laughing at him and saying mean things to him until Chatterer lost his temper and said things back quite in the old way. This tickled Sammy more than ever, for it sounded so exactly like Chatterer when he had been a free little imp of mischief in the Green Forest that Sammy felt sure that Chatterer had nothing the matter with him.

But he couldn't stop very long to make fun of poor Chatterer. In the first place, Farmer Brown's Boy had put his head out of the barn door to see what all the fuss was about. In the second place, Sammy fairly ached all over to spread the news through the Green Forest and over the Green Meadows. You know he is a great gossip. And this was such unusual news! Sammy knew very well that no one would believe him.

"All right," Sammy would reply. "It doesn't make the least bit of difference in the world to me whether you believe it or not. You can go up to Farmer Brown's house and see him in prison yourself, just as I did!"

So, late that afternoon when all was quiet around the farmyard, Chatterer saw something very familiar looking behind the old stone wall, on the edge of the Old Orchard. It bobbed up and then dropped out of sight. Then it bobbed up again, only to drop out of sight just as quickly.

"It looks to me very much as if Peter Rabbit is over there and feeling very nervous," said Chatterer to himself, and then he called sharply, just as when he was free in the Green Forest. Right away Peter's head bobbed up for all the world like a jack-in-the-box, and this time it stayed up. Peter's eyes were round with surprise as he stared across at Chatterer's prison.

"Oh, it's true!" gasped Peter, as if it was as hard work to believe his own eyes as it was to believe Sammy Jay. "I must go right away and see what can be done to get Chatterer out of trouble." And then because it was broad daylight and he really didn't dare stay another minute. Peter waved a good-by to Chatterer and started for the Green Forest as fast as he could run.

A little later who should appear peeping over the stone wall but Reddy Fox. It seemed very bold of Reddy, but really it wasn't nearly as bold as it seemed. You see, Reddy knew that Farmer Brown's Boy and Bowser the Hound were over in the Old Pasture and that he had nothing to fear. He grinned at Chatterer in the most provoking way.

"Smarty, smarty, Mr. Smarty
Glad to see you looking hearty!
Weather's fine, as you can see,
Won't you take a walk with me?"

So said Reddy Fox, knowing all the time that Chatterer couldn't take a walk with anyone. At first Chatterer scolded and called Reddy all the bad names he could think of, but after a little while he didn't feel so much like scolding. In fact, he didn't half hear the mean things Reddy Fox said to him. You see, it was coming over him more and more that nothing could take the place of freedom. He had a comfortable home, plenty to eat and was safe from every harm, but he was a prisoner, and having these visitors made him realize it more than ever. Something very like tears filled his eyes, and he crept into his hollow stump, where he couldn't see or be seen.

Improved Uniform International | SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By HAROLD L. LUNDQUIST, D. D., Of The Moody Bible Institute of Chicago. Released by Western Newspaper Union.

Lesson for November 21

Lesson subjects and Scripture texts selected and copyrighted by International Council of Religious Education; used by permission.

HONESTY IN ALL THINGS

LESSON TEXT—Exodus 20:15; Leviticus 19:11, 13; Luke 19:1-10, 45, 46.

GOLDEN TEXT—Thou shalt not steal. —Exodus 20:15.

Honesty seems to be so obviously right that one might expect it always and everywhere—if bitter experience had not indicated the opposite to be true.

As a matter of fact, dishonesty has become so common that a person who is strictly honest is a bit of a novelty. Some even think he is peculiar.

Under such circumstances the Christian needs to be vigilant lest he also accommodate his own ideas of honesty and begin to justify little evasions rather than being absolutely upright.

The teaching of Scripture on this matter is very plain.

I. Honesty and Fair Dealing (Exod. 20:15; Lev. 19:11, 13).

The very commandment against stealing implies that men have a right to that which they have made, earned, or saved. If no one had property rights there could be no stealing. Some of our modern isms deny such rights, but their reasoning is clearly not biblical or Christian.

"Thou shalt not steal" forbids every kind of theft, and the passages from Leviticus indicate that this includes more than robbery or ordinary stealing.

It relates to every kind of false dealing with another, such as oppression or the withholding of just wages. That, too, is stealing in God's sight.

Perhaps we ought to be more specific and apply the truth to our own day. Stealing includes such things as loafing on one's job, "borrowing" money from the cash drawer, taking goods from the stock with which one is working, stealing another man's sermon and preaching it as one's own, "lifting" material out of another man's book without credit, contracting debts which one can never pay, using false weights and measures, adulterating food or other material, "watering" milk for sale, selling worthless stock, dodging taxes or lying to the tax assessor, or using a slug instead of a nickel in the telephone to escape proper payment.

One might add gambling (which is taking another man's property by skill or by chance), making an unduly large profit on the labor of another, making money out of the sorrows and failures of others, etc. To be honest means to be fair—and that has broad implications.

II. Honesty and Restoration (Luke 19:1-10).

The reality and thoroughness of Zacchaeus' conversion was indicated by his willingness to restore all the money he had unjustly (but legally, note that) taken from his fellow citizens—and that in fourfold measure.

Insofar as it is possible to do so, the honest person will make right any known injustice. To be right with God must mean that we are to be right with men. The testimony of many Christians could be presented to show that they have only entered upon real peace and usefulness as they have made consistent effort to right every wrong, to pay every debt.

Often such actions open opportunities for Christian testimony and point others to the redemption in Christ, which makes a man live right as well as talk right.

III. Honesty and Religion (Luke 19:45, 46).

One might think it unnecessary to urge honesty upon religious folk. They ought to be honest. But here we see in sharp contrast to the quick honesty and restitution of Zacchaeus, the stubborn disobedience and dishonesty of the priests in the temple. Jesus had already cleansed the temple of the traffic in money-changing and the sale of animals for sacrifice practiced there (see John 2:13-17). On that occasion He rebuked them because they made His Father's house "a house of merchandise."

Had they known the change of heart of a converted Zacchaeus they would have heeded His admonition. But they did not believe in Christ and went on with their ungodly desecration of the temple area until it became "a den of thieves" (v. 46).

What happened so long ago needs application to our present day. So apt is the quotation from the "Lesson Commentary" which we have used before that we repeat it now.

Speaking of "the goings on in our own churches" the writer says, "Is a church honest when it assumes obligations that it cannot meet, and is then forced to use all sorts of questionable means to raise money for the benefit of the church? Is a church honest when it turns a building consecrated to the worship of God into a restaurant or a theater? Is a church honest that turns its pulpit into a lecture platform for the discussion of current events or the review of popular books or plays?"

Hothouse Lambs Hard to Raise; Expensive Delicacy

Sheep born in the fall and early winter, when sold in the suckling stage between two and four months of age, are known as hothouse lambs, says Pathfinder. The animals not only have to be raised with special care, but they constitute only one in about every 25,000 sheep slaughtered here annually.

Consequently, their meat is a rare and expensive delicacy and most of it is purchased by fine restaurants and other luxury trade.

The Rubber Shortage is behind us but the Tire Shortage is still here!

Less than two years ago America faced as frightening a situation as any country at war ever faced.

Unless something was done, and done quickly, we would soon be without rubber.

And without rubber, no plane could fly, no tank could move, no ship could sail, no truck could roll, people could not get to work, materials could not move to and from plants.

That was the situation the Government and the rubber companies had to lick inside of two years if America was to stay in the war.

Did the "impossible" really happen?

Let's see what you think. Right now, there is nearly enough rubber to meet our essential needs.

Today, this threat to American victory is merely an unpleasant memory, because Government, the Rubber Director, and a group of industries—rubber, petroleum, chemical, alcohol—working together, compressed into less than two years a job that would normally have taken a dozen years. But . . .

Because the public saw huge synthetic rubber plants shoot up almost over night, and heard that synthetic rubber was in large-scale production, they figured the tire headache was almost over.

Now—a warning!

This is the situation today—the rubber supply crisis is past, but the long predicted and anticipated tire shortage is with us.

Why is this so, when thousands of tons of Government synthetic rubber are now being made?

Why is this so, when the rubber industry is producing a tremendous tonnage of rubber products and more airplane and truck tires than ever before?

Because, as the Baruch Committee foresaw—the fact that few tires could be made until we had our synthetic rubber supply well on the way, resulted in millions of tires going out of service without replacement—and those remaining have less mileage in them. Inventories of prewar tires are gone.

Because our military needs are way beyond anyone's anticipations.

Because the rubber companies must use a lot of their manpower and machines to make bullet-sealing gas tanks and hundreds of other rubber products for war, in addition to tires.

Because half of today's requirements are for heavy-duty, large-size truck, bus, combat, artillery, and airplane tires, requiring many, many times the labor and materials of peacetime needs . . . and finally . . .

Because the manpower shortage hangs over the tire industry as it does over all industry, and there are just too few hands for the job.

Straight from the shoulder

These problems will be licked when our enemies are licked. Meanwhile, we want to tell you frankly that unless you, and all tire-owners continue to make the preservation of tires a vital personal problem . . . our home-front transportation will break down and slow up the war production of America.

The way out is for you to conserve the tires you've got—stretch their life in every way you can.

How to make tires last longer

Do no unnecessary driving.

Live up to the government regulation—don't exceed 35 miles an hour.

Keep your tires inflated up to recommended pressure, and check them every week.

Avoid hitting holes in the road, or bruising your tires on curbs or stones. Don't start or stop suddenly. Slow down for sharp corners.

See that your wheels and axles are in line.

Switch your tires from wheel to wheel every five thousand miles, and have them inspected regularly for removal of foreign objects and repair of cuts.

And—most important of all—recap your tires as soon as they become smooth.

Though not all civilians will be able to get synthetic rubber tires in the near future, you may be one of those who will. Therefore, you should know . . . and remember . . . these facts:

FACTS ABOUT PASSENGER CAR TIRES

The synthetic rubber tire is not yet an improvement but it will keep your car rolling through the emergency.

In many respects, the new synthetic rubber tires are an unknown quantity.

How they would behave at the phenomenally high speeds of prewar days is purely academic. The patriotic citizen knows that high speeds wear out his treads far faster than the recommended speed of 35 miles per hour, and drives accordingly.

Under-inflation, driving over rough roads, and other abuses are bad for all tires—but today's evidence is that synthetic tires will stand less of these abuses than the tires you have been used to.

But, since these tires will be rationed to you in trust for the nation, it will be your duty to take every possible care of them, and to prevent misuse and abuse.

As we gain more experience with synthetic rubber tires, more and more things will become known about them, and the public will be kept informed.

If you use synthetic rubber tubes, be sure they are properly installed. They should be put into the tire, then inflated, deflated, and inflated again. And they should never be mounted on rusty rims.

FACTS ABOUT TRUCK AND BUS TIRES

On truck and bus tires, particularly in over-the-road, inter-city service, the situation is less satisfactory.

Truck and bus tires are operated under more severe conditions than passenger car tires. They are heavier, thicker—generate more heat. They are all too frequently overloaded, must travel on any kind of highway their work requires.

Again we'll be perfectly frank about it: synthetic truck and bus tires now built will not stand all the abuse that the prewar tire would take, especially overloading. Progress is being made every day—but overloading which damaged a prewar tire can ruin today's synthetic rubber tire.

The Tire Industry is bending every effort to solve the serious problems of furnishing satisfactory and sufficient tires to the truck and bus field.

But a serious threat still exists to our most vital transportation.

So remember this—while the treads of present truck and bus tires are vitally important, the carcasses of these tires have a value to our truck operators, and to the nation, that is beyond price. Unless these tires are made to last and last, there is almost certain to be a breakdown of truck service.

Every one of these tires must be recapped the very minute it needs it—before any damage is done to the carcass. Speeds must be cut down, especially on hot roads. Overloads must be eliminated. Proper inflation is a necessity.

Operators, garage men, drivers, all have a heavy responsibility that they cannot now avoid. These are straightforward statements. The warning must not go unheeded. A new tire warranty recognizes these conditions, but the real job is conservation!

A new warranty—

With conditions as they are, and synthetic rubber in its present stage of development, a new tire warranty has become necessary and has been adopted. It applies to all tires. Under its terms, injuries such as bruises, body breaks, cuts, snags, and heat failures, as well as tread wear are not subject to adjustment consideration.

Nor are injuries or failures which result from improper tire care or misuse or abuse. This includes failure as a result of overload, excess speed, improper inflation, or other non-defective conditions. Or when tires are used on rims not conforming to Tire and Rim Association Standards.

Remember—the tire industry, the Rubber Director, everyone is working together with all their energy, as they have from the outset, to keep America's wheels turning.

Do your part—take care of the tires you've got now!

CONCORD

Services were well attended at Concord Sunday, we were glad to have so many visitors at church. The pastor and wife were entertained at the James Beach home Saturday night, and Sunday at D. R. Chapman's where Mr. and Mrs. Chapman celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary. Quite a crowd of relatives and friends gathered, look for the full account in the Advertiser this week.

The W. M. S. met at Mrs. Glackens last Wednesday, nine members and one visitor were present. The program was given by our President, Mrs. Vivie Webster, new officers were elected for the coming year, all enjoyed the program and the day together.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Lucas have purchased them a home in Walton, we will miss them when they leave our community.

Mrs. Stanley Robinson and Opal Hughes went to Covington Sunday to visit their mother in the hospital. We hope to see her well again soon.

There will be a musical praise at Concord the fourth Sunday night, a gracious welcome extended to veryone.

NOTICE

There will be a joint meeting of the local division of the Women's Society of Christian Service and Circles No. 1 and No. 2 of the Methodist Church, at the Parsonage Saturday, November 20th in an all day meeting.

All members and friends are cordially invited.

VERONA

Mrs. Mattie Whitson is still with her daughter, Mrs. Rose Hamilton and family.

Piner Homemakers

The Homemakers Club of Piner met at the home of Mrs. Fred McMillian Wednesday, November 11th. Those answering the roll call were: Mrs. Chas. Cupp, Mrs. Chas. Flynn, Mrs. Frank Rust, Mrs. James Kidwell, Mrs. Malcolm Oliver, Mrs. John Dwyer Fisk, Mrs. Angelina Pelizzari, Mrs. Marion Collins, Mrs. Frank Elliott, Mrs. Wolfe, Mrs. Robt. Elliott, Mrs. Steve Rich and Mrs. Odis Fisk.

An address by Mrs. Dewey Fisk was followed by a discussion on slipping roses, planting bulbs and other instructive ideas about flowers led by Mrs. John Dwyer.

At the noon hour a full course dinner was served. The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Steve Rich at Piner.

Corn Measured In Crib

Many farmers are calling at the County Agent's office for information on measuring wagon beds and corn cribs to find the number of bushels of corn the bin will hold.

A bushel of ear corn, measurers two (2½) and one half cubic feet according to the Kentucky rule. A simple method of figuring is to find the number of cubic feet, divide the cubic feet by five (5) and multiply by two (2).

A bushel of ear corn is twice the capacity of a bushel of shelled corn. A bushel of shelled corn measures 1¼ cubic feet per bushel.

A bushel of good ear corn will quite often shell from 58 to 60 pounds.

Homemakers Enlisted To Make Food Fight For Freedom.

All housewives enlisted to make food fight for freedom will want to use every scrap of left over food during the coming winter months. Leftover food can be made into attractive and nutrition dishes for the family according to Mary Hood Gillaspie, Home Demonstration Agent.

To help with food thrift, home economists of the U. S. Department of Agriculture offer the following suggestions:

. Store leftovers, when practical, together in one dish.

2. Store leftover foods cold and covered, and use as soon as possile to save food values.

3. Learn many different appetizing ways to prepare leftovers so that the family will not tire of them.

4. When cooking foods that keep well, occasionally prepare enough for two meals and plan to use the food a different way at the second serving. This saves time and fuel.

5. Stale slices, dry crusts and other leftovers in the breadbox can make scores of delicious dishes. Bread is the most wasted food in American kitchens. Sliced bread too hard for the table can be made into one of several different kinds of toast. Melba toast is made simply by heating thin slices of bread in a slow oven until they are thoroughly dry and take on extra flavor. For cinnamon toast, a breakfast favorite, toast and butter lightly and sprinkle with cinamon and sugar. For french toast dip the bread sliced in an egg and milk mixture, then brown on both sides in a little fat.

Crusts and other odds and ends of bread may be dried in a slow oven, then rolled to crumbs or run through the meat grinder. Keep crumbs covered and protected against dust and moisture. Dried crumbs may be used for coating foods for frying, topping dishes for baking, and stuffing vegetables or meat, crumb pastry for cream pies, crumb cake and crumb cookies.

GLENCOE

Several relatives and friends gathered with well filled baskets at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Tucker Sunday, Nov. 14th to celebrate Mrs. Tucker's birthday.

Those present were Prof. R. S. Tucker, Mr. and Mrs. Tom Furnish, Gent, Ky.; Mrs. James Carlton, Gent, Ky.; Miss Bell Maxwell, Worthville, Ky.; Mrs. Ada Brock and son; Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Carlton and three sons; Raymond Furnish and girl friend, and others who names we failed to get. All left at a late hour wishing Mrs. Tucker many more Happy Birthdays.

Sorry to hear Mrs. Elmer Riddell is on the sick list.

Mrs. Henry Gross spent Saturday in Covington shopping.

The sale held by Mrs. Claud Bradley was well attended. Everything selling for a good price.

Mr. and Mrs. Bill Webster of Covington spent the week-end at their home here.

The two small children of Mr. and Mrs. Tracy have whooping cough. We hope they will soon be able to return to school.

WARTIME SAVINGS SUGGESTIONS for Electric Appliance Users

Electric Range Economy Tips

- When you're roasting meat in the oven, bake potatoes, a pudding and a casserole dish of vegetables, too. Saves using top units.
- If you have sectional pans, cook two or more vegetables on one unit at same time.
- Switch the top units to low heat promptly when food comes to steam.
- Cook more one-dish meals, such as hash, Irish stew, etc.
- Use only enough water to prevent food from scorching. Some vegetables, like greens, need no water.
- Don't toast one or two slices of bread in oven. Broiler is economical only for toasting in quantity.
- Use well cooker for long, slow cooking operations, such as cooking dried beans. Plan more cooker meals.
- Use covered, flat-bottomed utensils that fit unit. Pans that are warped or too small waste electricity.
- Switch off surface units when food is nearly done and finish cooking on stored heat.
- Avoid excessive oven peeking.

Uncle Sam Says:

Waste of anything in wartime is a crime. Don't waste electricity, just because it isn't rationed. Wasting electricity involves a waste of fuel, transportation facilities, manpower and critical materials needed elsewhere in the war effort. Use all the electricity you need — but need what you use.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Allied Drive Through Italy Is Slowed By Hard Fighting and Stout Defenses; U. S. Campaign for Rabaul Threatens Entire Jap Southwest Pacific Position

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysis and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

Attention in the South Pacific is focused on the great Jap naval base of Rabaul on New Britain island, which U. S. air forces have pounded from New Guinea on the west and the Solomons on the east.

ITALY:
Fight for Main Road

With their artillery commanding the mountain heights, German troops fought doggedly to seal off a pass leading into the long, level corridor to Rome.

Complicating the Fifth army's task to break through, was steady rain, which muddied the country. A succession of German counterattacks were designed to disturb U. S. and British groupings for concentrated assaults against Nazi posts.

To the east, the British Eighth army picked its way slowly over the mountainous central sector, with strong German armored formations holding it off on the flat coastal stretches of the Adriatic.

Shipping Gains

As a result of Italy's surrender, the Allies have come into control of 170,000 tons of merchant shipping and 149 warships, besides many smaller craft.

Adding to this trip-hammer blow against the Axis sea strength, was the destruction of 527,000 tons of enemy shipping in the Mediterranean, mostly by submarines.

While the enemy was being lambasted, 22,526,485 tons of Allied merchant shipping reached North African ports, including Casablanca. Losses in action totaled 1½ per cent of the total tonnage.

AGRICULTURE:
Less Cotton

On the basis of conditions prevailing November 1, the department of agriculture estimated a 1943 cotton crop of 11,442,000 bales of 500 pounds each, compared with 12,824,000 bales last year, and a 10-year average of 12,474,000 bales.

Yield per acre was set at 253.4 pounds of lint cotton. The average last year was 272.5 pounds, and for 10 years, 217.0 pounds.

For Texas the 1943 crop was estimated at 2,825,000 bales; Mississippi, 1,820,000; Arkansas, 1,090,000; Alabama, 950,000; Georgia, 845,000; Louisiana, 745,000; South Carolina, 700,000; North Carolina, 610,000; Tennessee, 500,000; Oklahoma, 375,000; California, 360,000; Missouri, 305,000; Arizona, 141,000; New Mexico, 116,000; Virginia, 25,000; and Florida, 16,000.

As of November 1, 9,061,252 running bales of cotton of this year's growth had been ginned.

U. S. Fat Supplies

About 44 pounds of fats and oils will be available for civilians during the next year, compared with 47 pounds in 1943, the War Food administration announced in revealing that total U. S. needs will approximate 11,700,000,000 pounds.

Of this vast amount, the U. S. will produce 11,300,000,000 pounds, or 90 per cent of the total, and 1,100,000,000 pounds will be imported.

Of the 8,000,000,000 pounds allocated for food, civilians will get 70 per cent of the supply, while the army will receive 9 per cent. The remaining 21 per cent will be divided between exports, lend-lease and requirements for feeding liberated countries.

Industrial users will be allotted 3,600,000,000 pounds, with 2,100,000,000 pounds going into soap and glycerine production. About 600,000,000 pounds will be allocated for civilian and military paints, varnishes, linoleums, oil-cloth and other coated fabrics. The remainder will be used for lubricants, printing inks, leather and textile processing.

SOUTHWEST PACIFIC:
Focal Point

Two years ago Johnny Doughboy never heard of Rabaul.

Today, this great port on New Britain island is the focal point of the U. S. drive in the Southwest Pacific, with hundreds of bombers soaring over it to dump tons of explosives on the ships lying in its waters and the planes parked on its many airdromes.

With Rabaul lost, the Japs might as well pull up their stakes in the area to the northeast of Australia. Today, not only does it block any general move the U. S. might make northward to the Philippines and Japan, but it also acts as feeder point for barges supplying New Guinea and the Solomons.

Using such barges which can carry from 35 to 150 troops, the Japs reinforced their embattled forces on Bougainville island, their last stronghold in the Solomons from which U. S. Doughboys fought to expel them.

HITLER:
'Fight to Finish'

Declaring that "the last battle will bring the decision, and it will be won by the people with the greatest persistency," Adolf Hitler broadcast to the world Germany's resolution never to give in at the 11th hour.

Adolf Hitler

But speaking in London one day later, Prime Minister Winston Churchill said Germany was doomed to defeat in 1944, in a campaign that will be the most severe and costly in life experienced by the Allies.

In 1918, Hitler said: "Germany's final collapse was due less to force of arms than to destructive propaganda . . . The people were simple . . . The leaders were weaklings . . ." Claiming that Nazi war production had risen despite persistent bombings, Hitler said civilians suffered most from Allied air raids, but vengeance would be wreaked on England. ". . . We cannot reach America . . ." he said.

Because of their disturbing effect on enemy morale, Allied bombings are one of the prime forces against Hitler's regime, Churchill said. "The back of the U-boat campaign has been broken," he asserted.

WORLD RELIEF:
Planned by Allies

To rebuild shattered Europe after the war and relieve the privations of 24 people, 44 United Nations signed an agreement establishing an organization to conduct the work.

Supplies needed for the undertaking will be contributed by participating nations, and of the 46 million tons of food, seed, fuel, clothing, raw materials, machinery and medical items that will be required during the first six months after the war, the U. S. will furnish 9½ million tons, Great Britain 3½ million, Europe 29 million and other regions, 4 million.

Money required for U. S. participation must be appropriated by congress. Plans call for putting the distressed people back on their feet, then gradually withdrawing support as they restore their own economy to the prewar levels.

HIGHLIGHTS . . . in the week's news

PEACE SCARE: Stocks, bonds and commodities broke on rumors of peace with Germany. Shares on the New York market fell from one to ten points before rallying. Low grade bonds dropped sharply. Wheat went down two cents a bushel, wool two to three cents, cotton $1.35 a bale. Two billion dollars of "paper valuation" were lost in the sharp decline.

POST OFFICE: Revenues of the postal department have passed the one billion dollars a year mark for the first time in history. For the 12 months ending September 30, total income was $1,006,000,000. Postmaster General Walker reveals. Expenditures totaled $994,000,000, leaving a surplus of $12,000,000. The period is neither a regular fiscal nor a calendar year.

Washington, D. C.

KEY ECONOMIST OUT

Handsome, platinum-haired Ed Stettinius, acting secretary of state, telephoned "Assistant President" Jimmy Byrnes, asked that he call a meeting of the War Mobilization cabinet to consider cancellation of war contracts where foreign countries are involved. Already various war contracts are being cancelled, and some of the cancellations, especially those involving the purchase of metals, mean breaking commitments to foreign governments.

Byrnes agreed, called the meeting. On the morning set Stettinius phoned again.

"We've got to call off the War Mobilization cabinet meeting," he said.

"Why?" asked the puzzled Byrnes.

"Feis has resigned," replied Stettinius. "He's the expert on foreign war contracts." He was referring to Herbert Feis, economic adviser to the secretary of state.

"Well, can't you come to the meeting and present your views to the cabinet?" suggested Byrnes.

"No," replied Stettinius, "Feis is the only man who knows anything about the subject."

The special cabinet session was postponed.

Note: Herbert Feis, related by marriage to the late President Garfield, is a distinguished liberal economist appointed by Secretary of State Stimson under Hoover. His resignation was handed to Hull shortly after the resignation of Sumner Welles, at which time Hull began to sweep out liberals. When newspapers revealed this clean-out, Hull held up acceptance of Feis' resignation, left word that it be announced while he was in Moscow.

DIES COMMITTEE DYING

The Dies committee soon will release an interim report, listing the various Nazi and Jap groups which operated more or less openly in this country until Pearl Harbor under the names of tourist bureaus, trade associations, etc.

It will be prosaic, less sensational than previous reports, with a backhanded slap at the administration for permitting such things to happen.

Employees of the committee are bemoaning the report's mildness. Committee funds are getting to the point where the house must be asked for more, but maybe the dough will not be forthcoming unless Dies can throw the house something far more sensational.

The only thing sensational that forthright Martin Dies can drag out now concerns Communist influence among the Negroes, and he hesitates to do this, fearing nation-wide repetition of the Detroit race riots.

WHEAT UNCERTAINTIES

Though no announcement has been made, inside word in the agriculture department is that wheat farmers will get a loan price of 90 per cent of parity, which is a 5 per cent increase over this year.

Officials recognize that something attractive must be done to increase wheat plantings. As it looks now, plantings are going to fall below the high goals set by the government—an acreage increase of 14 million over this year.

This year farmers had the 85-per-cent-of-parity loan, which acted to support the price, plus both parity payments and conservation payments. But congress has knocked out parity payments for next year, leaving a margin of uncertainty as to whether wheat will bring as much as flax or grain sorgbums, or some other crop.

Planting is now well along in the winter wheat belt, but it is reported to be a slack planting. Never has there been so much demand by farmers to know what the price is going to be. And the official answer is still withheld.

And when the announcement is made, it will be a loan figure of 90 per cent of parity, whereas farmers would like to have 100 per cent, to make up for the loss of parity payments.

All this confusion comes at a time when there is a greater demand for wheat than this country has ever known. In addition to the tremendous demand for wheat for flour, 450 million bushels have been used for animal feed in the past 12 months, and still more will be needed for the same purpose in the next year.

And beyond that, the government has pledged another 50 million bushels for foreign relief.

All this explains why the gates are being opened again to imports of wheat and barley from Argentina, for the first time in quantity since the drouth years.

Government Asks Reports On U. S. Holdings Abroad

Form TFR-500 Supplies Valuable Information Concerning American Stake in Foreign Lands, Aids Reconstruction.

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, Union Trust Building, Washington, D. C.

When Paratrooper Jones landed "plop" in the midst of a field he had never heard of in a country he had only read about in books, he was able to lead his comrades direct to a certain building whose purpose, importance, construction and contents, almost down to the last nut and bolt, were all known in detail by the American high command. Paratrooper Jones knew just where to get to the point he wanted to leave his dynamite and General Smith, at the headquarters, knew exactly the damage that would result to the enemy when that dynamite went off.

Neither would have had that information if a worried banker in Bingville, U. S. A., hadn't painstakingly filled out Form TFR-500 which the treasury department had sent him.

The information asked for concerned American investments in foreign lands, and the information the government got back made it possible for it to get the detailed blueprints of the factory that Jones blew up from the American firm which had built it and, in this case, the construction engineer who had bossed the job.

The function of these annoying TFR-500's which have already located American investments in 102 countries, the largest single one of which is seven million dollars and the smallest forty dollars, serves other exceedingly useful, if not as dramatic, purposes.

Other Functions

One government official pointed out to me another important function this information plays in nonmilitary wartime activities. He said:

"The more complete information the government has on the total American stake abroad, the more successful will be the efforts of our forces on the fighting fronts, the more quickly will the Allied Military Government be able to restore civilian activities in reoccupied areas, the better equipped our representatives will be to safeguard the interests of the American people during the peace table discussions, and the sounder will be the working out of postwar policies in the field of international economic relationships.

"This survey of American investments abroad is an instrument of vital importance to the future of this country. Most other world powers have long since collected similar information. They not only know the holdings of their own nationals all over the world, but their relations with those of other countries. Their plans are well formulated to protect and develop these investments. Our government believes we should not be less well informed."

This official had a particular reason in discussing this situation with me.

First, he wanted to stimulate the people who had received Form TFR-500 in giving as complete a report as possible.

Second, he desired wide publicity in the hope that other American citizens, individuals, corporations, executives of estates, trustees of charitable organizations who might be able to furnish the information desired, would get in touch with the treasury department and turn it over to the government.

Rehabilitation

Aside from its value to military men, the facts are exceedingly important to the Allied officials who are administering rehabilitation in occupied countries. If they know about a plant that has certain production facilities or trained people who can be used in producing what they desire, it greatly helps their work. It has proved in Sicily, and will prove in Italy, of great value to the Allied administrators to get information concerning the citizens so that they can pick those who are of known non-Fascist leanings to cooperate with them.

The information also, of course, is exceedingly valuable to many of the government departments.

Claims for Damage

Another thing that the state department is called upon to do is to assist citizens in getting back their property in countries that have been affected by the war. Also there is the question of claims for damage to American property.

There are more than 100 people in the state department alone who are now working on postwar plans. One of the most important phases of this work is the reopening of trade with the war areas as well as the rest of the world. Of course, the terms under which the trade is reopened may depend on the industrial possibilities of the various areas; and how soon the controls of foreign exchange can be dropped will depend, in a large part, on the extent of the U. S. and other foreign holdings of the obligations of the country in question. All this will affect our exporters here as well as American interests in foreign countries.

The treasury department, as you know, has drawn up the White plan for international stabilization; the British government has the Keynes plan.

None of these projects, treasury officials said to me, which vitally affect the postwar movements of trade and capital, can be intelligibly planned and certainly cannot be put into effect without adequate knowledge of the value and type of United States interests and the number and character of the persons having those interests.

Many other important business negotiations such as private loans to foreign countries, direct investments by American corporations, furthering the good neighbor policy, will be affected by the information in the government's hands. For instance, if the government can say definitely that in a certain area there is very little capital invested in a certain type of enterprise and it is known such an enterprise might be enlarged there, the government might be able to encourage companies with foreign experience to develop such an enterprise.

The Moscow Conference

Washington correspondents for the press associations and some of the country's metropolitan dailies as well as the network broadcasters lived on needles and pins for more than a day and a half before the news of the agreements reached at Moscow were released.

There have been many bad leakages in advance of important international events recently. The state department, the Office of War Information and the Office of Censorship have done their best to protect American newspapers and radio against these violations of premature release of important stories involving foreign countries. The leaks usually have come through foreign officials who whisper a few hints to some of their newsmen friends. They also sometimes occur when news dispatches, radioed in advance for later release, are picked up by the enemy or are divulged in neutral countries.

Every effort was made to prevent such leaks in connection with the Moscow conference. The question of safety of the lives of British and American negotiators was involved. It was feared that if the fact that the conference was over was publicly revealed, the enemy might be on the watch to shoot down the planes carrying Secretary of State Hull and British Foreign Minister Eden and their parties.

Some of us who were affected, learned on the Saturday before the Monday of their official release that copies of the agreements had reached the state department earlier. We had guessed as much since the President commented on the success of the agreement the day before in his press and radio conference. We were told we would receive copies as far in advance as possible which meant that someone representing the various news agencies and networks had to be on duty day and night. Finally, the word came Monday morning that the messages were available and they were given out at ten o'clock for release at one o'clock. We, therefore, had three hours in which to digest the five separate documents.

Fortunately for me, the one o'clock release made it possible for me to report the story a minute and 19 seconds after it was given out on my one o'clock network broadcast.

1918—ARMISTICE—1943

The bells chimed out with joyous sound,
Two decades and a half ago;
For peace had come—a world-wide peace,
And people cheered, the high, the low,
No more the armaments of war
Would nations need. The slogan cry
Was: "Peace forever! Peace for all
We'll live, let live, that none may die."
The boys who fought, and bled, and died,
Were eulogized as heroes brave,
For they had died for freedom's cause,
And that Old Glory still might wave
O'er all the things for which they'd fought;
For love, for liberty and peace,
They were content; they'd given all
That war forevermore might cease.

An now their sons on far-flung fields
Of battles fight, with other men;
They cry: " 'Tis victory, then peace,
Or else we'll have to fight again."
So let us stand behind our boys,
With tanks and guns, with planes and prayers,
So they'll come marching home again,
And know today that someone cares.

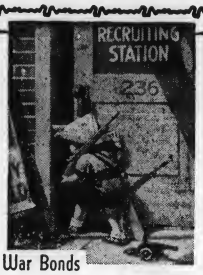
Citizens Who Own Property In Foreign Countries Must File Reports Of Their Holding With The Treasury Department Before December 1st.



Citizens of Walton, Ky. who own any property in foreign countries were notified by Postmaster Clinton F. Cleek today that they must file reports of their foreign holdings with the Treasury Department before December 1. The notice was given by means of a poster placed on display in the post offices.

Postmaster Clinton F. Cleek points out that it is necessary for the government to have as complete information as possible on the American stake abroad to assist the military authorities and the civilian governments on the fighting fronts and to bring about sound solutions of the post-war problems.

Report forms, known at TFR-500, may be obtained through commercial banks, or from the nearest Federal Reserve Bank, the postmaster states. Penalties are provided for those who willfully fail to file reports.

MAN HAD BRICK IN HIS STOMACH FOR 10 YRS.
One man recently stated that for 10 years he felt like he had a brick in his stomach. This feeling was due to the lump of undigested food he always had inside of him. He was weak, worn out, headachy, swollen with gas and terribly constipated. Recently he started taking ERB-HELP and says the feeling like a brick in his stomach disapeared the second day, Bowels are regular now, gas and headaches are gone and he feels like a new man.
ERB-HELP contains 12 Great Herbs; they cleanse bowels, clear gas from stomach, act on sluggish liver and kidneys. Miserable people soon feel different all over. So don't go on suffering. Get ERB-HELP. Jones Drug Store.

BLOCKS--READY MIXED CONCRETE--ROOFING

From where I sit . . .

by Joe Marsh

Went by Will Dudley's farm a week or so ago and found him stripping his tobacco.

It was mighty cold in that stripping room, and Bert looked dog tired. His son's gone in the army and he needed help.

But he was whistling at his work and his face lit up when he saw me. "Just be a few minutes," he said, "and I'm through."

Will's a typical Kentuckian. You can't get him down. He's doing the work of three men on that farm of his.

But Kentuckians aren't afraid to pitch into a hard job and see it through, whether it's fighting or farming.

And after the work's done, they like a bit of sociability for relaxing. To sit with neighbors and argue crops and politics—especially politics! And maybe drink a moderate glass of cool beer.

From where I sit, it looks like most Kentuckians know that moderation in living is pleasant and worth-while.

---REGISTERED JERSEYS---

SELECTIVE REGISTRATION FOR BREED IMPROVEMENT

is simple in its operation, far reaching in its promise of benefits to the man making a living out of Jerseys. In the days when it was first proposed (this came from Jersey breeders as many as ten years ago) there were some who were dubious as to how it would effect registrations, the small breeder, or the large breeder. Research into the records set aside these fears and Selective Registration went into effect on January 1, 1942.

Income Tax Man To Visit County Dec. 13 Thru 15

Collector of Internal Revenue, S. R. Glenn, announces that a deputy from his office will visit Burlington Dec. 13 thru 15, 1943, for the purpose of assisting farmers in preparing their December 15th declaration returns. Mr. Glenn says that the new Revenue Act is in many particulars different from the laws previously in effect. Special attention is called to farmers who will be required to file their declaration returns by December 15th, if 80% or more of their gross income is from farming activities and their income is sufficient from this source to require the filing of an income tax return.

The Collector says that the many changes made cannot be explained in a short notice, but that his deputy is familiar with the law and is being sent here to be of real service to the taxpaying public. The service is absolutely free. Collector Glenn urges the taxpayers of this county to see the deputy and let him help them with their income tax problems.

Advertiser Published Day Early On Account Of Holiday.

Association Bulls Cost $816.00

The Boone County Jersey Bull Association last Thursday Purchased four carefully selected herd sires at a total cost of $816.00 or an average cost of $204.00 per head. The bulls were carefully selected both as to type and production pedigrees. Their herd improvement value will be proven thru a long time cooperative breeding program.

Members of the Boone County Jersey Bull Association No. 1 are Robert Youell, Jesse Wilson, Grant Maddox and Walter Scott. Robert Youell was elected chairman and Jesse Wilson secretary and treasure of the Association.

County Labor Committee Recommends Program.

The Boone County Farm Labor Committee in a meeting at Burlington last Wednesday evening approved the progress of the labor program to date and recommended the program continue to be of all service possible to farmers according to H. R. Forkner, County Agent.

The farm labor program has been one of the most difficult to carry out. Many phases of it have been practically impossible. The committee however felt that the farm labor problem the coming year would be more serious and any help at all toward solving the farm labor problem was worthy of further trial. A total of 137 local farmers have been assisted in securing help under the farm labor program in the county during the past six months.

Annual Christmas Seal Sale Begins

The Tuberculosis Christmas Seal Sale will begin this week according to R. V. Lents, Exec. Sec'y. of the Boone County Tuberculosis Association. Mr. Lents stated that blocks of 200 seals are being mailed this week to many Boone County citizens. The school children are also selling the seals. Mr. Lents stated that it dosen't make any difference from whom you get the seals, buy from him through the mail or the school children because the money goes into the same treasury.

Prizes are given to the school children selling the most seals, and by purchasing through the mail be sure to state the school and child that gets credit for the sale.

Tuberculosis is a difficult disease to control; is easily communicable. Its ravages have sapped strength and lives of millions of persons. Since its early stages are difficult to recognize expensive diagnosis often is necessary. Since it is so sweeping in character, all casses are susceptible, a broad program of prevention and treatment is needed.

It is to assure and to help in that broad program that the Christmas Seals are sold each year. Buy as many of the seals that you can afford. The Christmas Seal sale is the only means that the Tuberculosis Association has to raise funds to carry on its work.

Dr. Charlie Jones Dies

As we go to press, we learn the sad news of the death of Dr. Charlie Jones, eye, nose and throat specialist of Cincinnati. He died of pneumonia Monday night.

Dr. Jones was a former resident of Walton and has a host of friends in this community.

Tobacco Sales Open Dec. 6th

The tobacco sales begin in Lexington December 6th, Carrollton Warehouses, and Kenton Wareouse, Covington December 7th. Most of the warehouses in the state have been receiving tobacco during the past week. It is thought the weight will be heavier than that of last year.

Circle No. 2 W. S. C. S. Entertained.

Mrs. C. C. Pruett enertained on Tuesday afternoon for the members of Circle No. 2 of Women's Society of Christian Service. There were but two who were able to attend, Mrs. C. O. Carlisle and Miss Emma Jane Miller. A lovely salad course was served by he hostess.

Missionary and Ladies Aid Society Entertained.

The Missionary and Ladies Aid Socity of the Walton Christian Church met at the home of Mrs. Irene Bush on Thursday, November 18th for an all day meeting. After a bountiful covered dish dinner and social hour the meetings were called to order by the president of the Missionary Society, Mrs. Ada Moore. Mrs. Elizabeth Caroland had charge of the devotional, Mrs. Katie Ransler reviewed the second chapter of the book, "We Who Are Americans."

Those who enjoyed the day were: Rev. and Mrs. Caroland, Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Franks, Mrs. Mamie Simpson, Mrs. Susie Norman, Mrs. Grace Jones, Mrs. Mary Alice Conrad, Miss Mary Ransler, Mrs. Lotta Powers, Mrs. Katie Ransler, Mrs. Mabel Groger, Mrs. Ada Moore, Mrs. Bessie Moore, Miss Elica Neumeister, Mrs. Marie Pennington, Mrs. Harry Bird, Mrs. Lyda Vanlandingham, Mrs. Ethleen Whitson, Mrs. Bertha Fisher, Mrs. Madleen Gault, Mrs. Lula Howard, Mrs. Anna Mae Bush, Mrs. Kattie Welsh and Mr. Berry Johnson.

Correction—

As some of the names of those attending the class meeting of the "Willing Workers" held last week at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Bush were omited, we are reprinting the article.

The Willing Workers Class of the Walton Christian Church met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Bush. Mrs. Florence Norman and Helen Ruth Gardner were co-hostess.

Those present were: Rev. and Mrs. Caroland, Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Ransler, Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Ashcraft, Mr. and Mrs. Russell Hall, Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Jones, Mr. and Mrs. Loule Schawb, Mr. and Mrs. Otta Watson, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Lee Stephenson, Mr. and Mrs. Powers Conrad, Mr. and Mrs. Windell Rouse, Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Groger, Mrs. Madleen Gault, Mrs. Neil Campbell, Mrs. Luca Doan, Mrs. Martha Jane Carpenter, Mrs Etheleen Whitson, Mrs. Minnie Moore Crouse, Mrs. Mary Stephens, Mrs. Aleen Conner, Mrs. Elizabeth Gross, Mrs. Margaret Gordon, Mrs. Barbara Dotson, Mrs. Lois Maze, Mrs. Mary Humphrey, Miss Mary Ransler, Miss Lara Mae Whitson, Miss Nora B. Gross, Miss Joice Ann Schwab, Miss Jenie Lou Schwab, Miss Patty Jones, Mrs. Ada Cowell, Mr. Buddie Rouse and Mrs. Vernon James.

In an article printed last month we had the name, Mrs. Mary Lee Hance as Treasurer of the Willing Workers Class, which should have been Mrs. Mabel Groger.

DHIA Record Of Kenton County Herd High

The herd of Charles A. (Gus) Richardson of Kenton County which is composed of four Registered Holsteins, two Grade Holsteins and two Pure Bred Jerseys had led the Northern Kentucky Dairy Herd Improvement Association in production for three successive months according to Wilson A. Scott, D. H. I. A. Supervisor.

The herd average per cow in September was 804 pounds of milk with 35.5 pounds butterfat. The returns for each dollar expended for feed was $3.96. The herd average per cow in October was 756 pounds milk with 37.6 pounds butterfat. The returns for each dollar expended for feed was $2.86. November the herd average per cow was 1081 pounds milk with 45.4 pounds butterfat. The returns for each dollar expended for feed was $2.56.

An outstanding Jersey in the herd has produced in 271 days, 9852 pounds milk with 520.4 pounds butterfat and still is going strong in production.

Mr. Richardson's high production is due to careful selection of his cows, good dairy management practices and the careful feeding of a balance grain ration.

The herd sire is a Registered Holsteine Bull that was purchased from the Kentucky House of Reform Dairy Herd at Greendale. This bull is backed up by high production records as well as type to help his breeding ability in Mr. Richardson's herd.

Feed Meeting To Be Held November 30th

The Colonial Coal and Supply Co. of Erlanger, distributors of Wayne Feeds for Northern Kentucky, are holding a feed meeting for their coustomers and friends at 7:45 Tuesday evening, November 30th in their office.

The highlights of the meeting is to be an address by Mr. I. E. Harrod. Mr. Harrod is in charge of the distribution of Wayne Feeds in Kentucky, Indiana, Ilinois and Missouri. He is one of the best qualified individuals in the Mid-West to discuss "Reasons for the Feed Shortage in 43 and the outlook for 44."

Movies will complete the program. All Wayne constomers are cordially invited to attend.

40 Farmers Attend Tobacco Meetings Last Friday

Forty farmers attended the two tobacco stripping and grading demonstrations held in the county last Friday according to H. R. Forkner, County Agent. The meetings were held at the farms of Hubert E. White of Burlington and Joseph A. Huey of Union.

John Y. Steele, Federal Grader recommended to growers that they use more care in stripping their tobacco more closely this year to grades than in former years. Price ceilings according to government grades means that including mixed grades will force the tobacco to take the lower grade out therefore lower price. The crop should have five distinct grades, Flyings (granulated) Trash (cigarette, lugs (cigerettes) bright leaf (pipe) and red leaf and tips (chewing). The non descript damaged leaves on small crops may be grouped into two or three classes namely cigarette, pipe and chewing grades or flyings, trash, and lugs in one grade, bright leaf in another and the heavy red tobacco in another. Greatest care in stripping the entire crop should be not to mix bright leaf and lugs.

Mr. Steele at the conclusion of his demonstration recommended that growers keep their grades separate when loading for market and under no conditions allow the warehouse to mix grades on baskets when putting the crop on the floor. Following such a program will enable the grower to get the high dollar for his crop.

4-H Club Achievement Meetings Near Completion.

Eight 4-H club achievement meetings have been held in the county during the past two weeks, according to O. D. Perkinson, assistant County Agent.

Certificates of achievement or victory stickers were awarded to all 4-H club members completing a project. These meetings were held as general chapel program in the school and were well attended by leaders and members. A very attractive program was rendered by 4-H club members. Reports on projects were given by one boy and one girl at each meeting and the girls put on a style show, exhibiting the dresses made as 4-H club projects.

The 4-H club in Boone County is to be complimented on it's very excellent record of 97% completion of all projects undertaken.

Farmers Urged To Treat Sheep

All sheepmen are urged to treat their flocks for intestional parasites during the last part of November or early part of December according to H. R. Forkner, County Agent. Phenothiazine drench is the treatment recommended at this time.

This new treatment and parasite program has given excellent results and has gained wide favor among sheep raisers. The special drench form of Phenothiazine should be used as the ordinary form will not go into solution. General recommendations on the treatment are available at the county office. Local viterinarians have been using the Phenothiazine treatment for some time.

John Neier Taylor Taking Navy Air Training At St. Louis.

St. Louis, Mo.,—In the ranks of the St. Louis Naval Air Station "tarmacs," those neophyte cadets who today are dungaree clad and who tomorrow will wear the gold-braid of a Naval flight officer, is John Neier Taylor of Union, K.

Young Taylor, the son of Mr. and Mrs. George K. Taylor of R. R. 1, arrived at this station in a draft of young men who have been called to active duty by the Navy to serve at Naval Air Stations as seamen, second class, for a period of about three months before entering pre-flight school as Naval Aviation Cadets.

During this three months, the "tarmacs" receive indoctrination and work with the airplanes that they soon will be learning to fly.

From this station they will be transferred to a Navy Pre-Flight school and later into actual flight training leading to a commission as Ensign in the Naval Reserve or 2nd Lieutenant in the Marine Corps Reserve.

Holiday Employers Must Have Social Security Numbers

Persons expecting to be employed during the holiday season to help take care of the rush in business must have social security account numbers, W. Leonard Eley, acting manager of the Covington field office of the Social Security Board, announced today.

"One reason this is so essential is that an account number and card assure the worker that all wages he receives, whether he works part time or full time, will be credited to his old-age and survivors insurance account," said. "His account is kept by the Board according to the social security account number issued to him.

"Unless the worker has a job in view, however, he should not apply for a number. As soon as he is certain of going to work at an early date, he should go to the nearest Social Security Board office and put in his application for his account number.

"If he lives some distance from the field office, he may go to the nearest post office and secure Form SS-5, fill in the blanks, and send it to the Social Security Board. He will then receive the account number by mail.

"If he has lost an account number card, he should use the same form to apply for duplicate.

"The account number is necessary because it should be presented to the employer before the worker goes onto a job."

The social security field office in this area is at 18 Post Office Building, Covington, Kentucky.

Four Barely Escape as Lindsay Home Burns.

Paging Santa Claus

by Jane Corby

McCLURE SYNDICATE - WNU FEATURES

Jan Payson lives in a small apartment with her invalid sister, Dora. Hurrying to her job at the Devon Arms hotel she steps in front of a car and is thrown down. The driver steps out to help her. There are some words, and then Jan disappears in the hotel, where her manager, Paul Harris, fires her for being late. Jan thinks the man behind the wheel is a chauffeur, but Paul recognizes him as Tony Deverest, a social lion, as he stands talking to Molly, the telephone operator, shortly after the accident. Deverest is angry when he hears Jan has been fired, so Paul gives Jan the lead part in the hotel floor show, and gets Mary Elizabeth Howard, a smart dressmaker, to outfit Jan.

CHAPTER II

"That's just it," broke in Jan eagerly. "This seems such an expensive dress. I don't know that I can afford . . ."

"Oh, you're not paying for it yourself. Didn't Paul Harris tell you?"

Jan turned back to the mirror to hide her expression. There it was again! That secret, knowing look that she had surprised on Paul's face more than once since that incredible moment on Thanksgiving afternoon when he had told her she was to have a part in the floor show.

In the days that followed Jan found herself far too busy to follow any clues to the mystery that surrounded her. She and Dora lived in a kind of ecstasy.

Jan knew that Paul Harris was disappointed in the crowd that had turned out for the opening, but she had no idea of the extent of that disappointment. A week later his bitterness had grown to such proportions that he had decided to do something about it.

But—and he hated to admit it—he could not bring himself to ask the fragile Dora to go back to that miserable hovel from which he had rescued her. It must be that he was getting soft-hearted, and Paul had not been troubled that way in years. There was a flowerlike quality in Dora's white face and her pain-widened blue eyes that reminded him—yes, it did—of Helen.

The situation was complicated. It made his manner all the more hrusque now that a crisis in the form of Mary Elizabeth Howard had arrived. She would have to be paid in some way for Jan's outfit.

"I didn't act hastily," he now told the dress designer, "because sometimes these things take a few days to straighten themselves out. But I've finished waiting. This is the end."

"And what about me?" Mary Elizabeth inquired smoothly.

"You won't lose by it," Paul assured her. "I'm the one who has lost. Her salary—that suite they have." He broke off as Jan, with a laughing remark to the operator, stepped out of the elevator.

"Miss Payson!" Paul called to her, reproof for her untimely laughter in every syllable.

Mary Elizabeth eyed the girl as she approached and almost forgot the annoyance the whole incident had caused her, in admiration of her own handiwork. The girl—in the mid-winter costume Mary Elizabeth Howard, Inc., had designed—was lovely. What a pity she hadn't made good!

Jan, who had been ready to dance across the lobby for delight when she first stepped out of the elevator, felt a sudden chill at Paul's tone. She had been on her way to buy a brand new kitten for Dora.

The uniformed man at the hotel entrance, reaching out a gloved hand at this precise moment, set the revolving door spinning, and it spun William Anthony Deverest, correctly hatted and coated, into the lobby. There he paused, glancing involuntarily toward the magazine stand. The dark girl there, who looked up with obvious interest, made him turn quickly the other way. And then he saw her!

Or was that the girl he had last seen breathless, mud-stained and reproachful? Why, she was beautiful! Seen from the side this way, she seemed, standing still as she was, to be poised for flight, her face uptilted, her lips parted eagerly. Then she turned toward him so that he saw her face. She was in trouble!

Paul was saying, indeed, that he "was disappointed, greatly disappointed, Miss Payson. After all, William Anthony Deverest might have found it impossible to be present on the opening night, but a whole week had gone by and had never even looked in at the roof garden!"

Jan, dazedly trying to figure out why she should be held accountable for Mr. Deverest's absence, looked away from Paul, seeking enlightenment from her surroundings. Her eyes encountered the gaze of the tall young man near the magazine counter who was staring as if he knew her. And she had certainly seen him somewhere! Oh, yes, that careless chauffeur who got her into difficulties on Thanksgiving Day!

She smiled faintly and Paul, waiting for her reply, caught the smile and followed her glance. Further caustic words died in his throat and he seized Miss Howard firmly by the elbow and propelled her rapidly toward the office.

"What—what's the matter?" Mary Elizabeth protested.

Paul put his lips close to her ear. "William Anthony Deverest," he whispered.

And Miss Howard, looking over her shoulder, departed docilely enough.

"You are Jan, aren't you?" he inquired. How tall he was! Jan raised her golden eyes for a brief instant to his interested gray ones and nodded.

"But how did you know my name?"

"It's quite a long story. I found it out when I came to ask you to dinner as a sort of apology for my clumsiness, that day. Though it's a little late, I still owe you that apology. Will you . . .?"

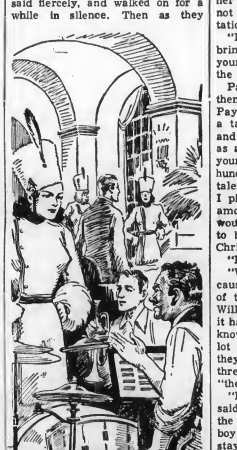
"I was on my way to buy a kitten," Jan demurred, walking toward the door. "And I haven't much time for dinner. I have to get ready for the show."

Jan laughed and he suddenly decided she looked even more irresistible than when she was sad. "You had your chauffeur's cap with you on Thanksgiving, of course. But you weren't in uniform that day, either. You must have a pretty nice boss."

"He—he's abroad," Deverest said absently. He led the way to the car, but Jan shook her head.

"The shop is only around the corner. My, that's a beautiful car!" she said appreciatively. "W-A-D—initials are so funny when they spell a word!"

"William Anthony Deverest," she repeated aloud, turning a frightened face to the man beside her.



"Y-yes," he agreed hesitantly.

"You know—?" Jan gazed at him wide-eyed. "He's your boss!"

When he did not answer, she went on bitterly: "I hate him!"

Jan turned away so abruptly Deverest had to hurry to catch up. "He's not so bad," he said defensively. "If he knew you were in trouble . . ."

"He'll never know it!" the girl said fiercely, and walked on for a while in silence. Then as they reached the corner, "Here's the pet shop. Isn't that the most adorable kitten you ever saw? By the way, what's your name?"

"Mr. Harris very displeased," he observed deliberately.

"My—my name?" the man stammered. "Oh! Tony — Tony Williams. Say, don't hold my boss against me. That dinner date means a lot to me."

Jan, gurgling at the kitten, missed his intent pleading glance. "You can have a sandwich with me in the cafeteria," she promised, "if you like the kitten. But if you complain about a flea or two, the party's off."

She walked ahead of him through the door and, grinning, Tony followed.

There was a question in Dora's blue eyes as she raised them from the calendar which she had been marking on her knee.

"Only a few more days to Christmas, Jan!" she said absently, her gaze following Jan's movements as she took another evening dress from the closet

Jan smiled at her sister. She smiled a great deal nowadays, and Dora thought she looked happy even when she was not smiling. Well, if it made Jan happy to go out all the time, Dora put it to herself, with this wonderful Tony Williams, she would be happy about it too.

"Has Paul been to see you lately?" inquired Jan with elaborate unconcern.

The delicate wild-rose color that tinted Dora's pale cheeks gave her her answer even before her sister said: "Well, he was here yesterday. He could only stay a few minutes."

"And wasn't he here the day before?"

"Well, yes," said Dora. "I believe he was."

"And what about the day before yesterday—and don't you expect him today?'

"You're teasing me," Dora protested, pretending to be annoyed.

Zambrini, when he had dismissed the chorus and turned his attention to her, had no fault to find with Jan's rendition of the cute Jingle Bells song which she had been assigned. She was drawing a deep breath of relief after the song was over when the orchestra leader looked at her sharply.

"Mr. Harris very displeased," he observed deliberately. "He say to me—What's wrong with the show, Zambrini? Why we no get big society parties, lots of crowd?' I tell him it's my business to put on a good show; it's not my business to bring in customers."

"I should think not," said Jan uncertainly, "that's all any of us can do—put on as good a show as possible."

Zambrini shook his head. "Mr. Harris—maybe he's wrong," he continued as if Jan had not spoken. "But Mr. Harris, he still the boss. He thinks we should have more customers. Maybe he thinks we should bring them in ourselves."

"Why—" began Jan.

"You know this Mr. Demares'?" said Zambrini. "The giris gossip—they say you know him. Well, why does not Mr. Demares' come to see the show? He like it, he bring his friends. He has plenty friends. The show a big success then. I pleased, you pleased, Mr. Harris pleased."

Jan had listened, bewildered, to this sudden attack. What could Zambrini mean? What did everybody mean? Linking her constantly with this unknown William Anthony Deverest! She stared at Zambrini for a moment, noting the anxious expression in the little round dark eyes. Then she impulsively laid her hand on his arm.

"I'll see Paul right now," she promised, and turned away.

Slowly as she walked, she arrived at Paul Harris' office at last and her sudden wild hope that he would not be there was dashed by his invitation to enter.

"Paul, I've been talking to Zambrini. He—he said something about your being disappointed in the way the show was pulling."

Paul stared at her a minute and then said crisply: "Sit down, Miss Payson. I've been wanting to have a talk with you for quite a while and I think this is as good a time as any. You are a fair dancer and your voice is good. But there are a hundred other girls who are just as talented, or perhaps more so. Yet I picked you without a trial from among the hundreds of girls who would have considered it an honor to be a star in the Devon Arms' Christmas show. Why did I do it?"

"I—I don't know, Paul."

"Well, I'll tell you. I did it because of your friendship with one of the best known men in town—William Anthony Deverest. I've seen it happen before—a girl in the show knows a man like him, he brings a lot of his friends in to see her; they bring their friends and," he threw up his hands in a gesture, "there you are."

"But what happens to me?" Paul said. "I hire the girl, I put her in the show and she never asks her boy friend to come in even once. He stays away; his friends stay away; everybody stays away."

Paul threw down the paper cutter with which he had been toying and walked over to the window in disgust. Jan dared raise her eyes finally and studied his slim back in its faultlessly tailored morning coat. She was trying, in the space of a few seconds, to make a decision that would most certainly affect not only her own life, but Dora's.

She could not do it! At whatever cost to herself, she must encourage Paul to believe this fairy story a little while longer.

"I'm sorry, Paul," she said hesitantly. "Mr.—Mr. Deverest hasn't been feeling very well."

It sounded lame, even to herself, but Paul accepted it and turned to her with new eagerness. "Then you'll see that he comes in?"

"Why, yes. At least I'll try."

Paul beamed with delight and escorted her to the door with a flourish. At another time she would have been amused at his sudden transition to the perfect maitre d'hotel, but now she was too miserable to see anything funny about it.

By the time the show was over and she was dressing to meet Tony she had arrived at only one clear decision. She would tell him the whole story and perhaps he would think of some way in which they could manage to satisfy Paul.

"We're stepping out tonight," Tony said, offering her his arm. "I have the car outside and we're going over to the little dance place across the river. Ever been there?"

Jan shook her head and fell in step beside him, her heart heavy again.

"But, Tony, can you afford this?" As he turned a startled face to hers she colored and added, "I mean I would be just as satisfied to—to go to a movie or something."

"Why, you funny little thing." His hand touched hers briefly and reassuringly and then pressed a button and started the car purring softly. "Don't you worry about me and don't you worry about us taking this car, either. In spite of the way you feel about him, my boss is fairly decent and he wouldn't mind this sort of thing at all."

TRUTHFULNESS AT ALL TIMES

LESSON TEXT—Exodus 20:16; 23:1, 7; Matthew 5:33-37; John 8:42-45.

GOLDEN TEXT—Wherefore putting away lying, speak every man truth with his neighbor: for we are members one of another.—Ephesians 4:25.

God hates all kinds of dishonesty—a fact which is emphasized by the additional commandment regarding truthfulness which is before us in this lesson.

God is truth, that is, the very essence of His nature is truth. In Him is no darkness at all (I John 1:5). Lying or false witness therefore reveals a character opposite to God. Hence we are not surprised to find in our lesson that Satan is a liar and the father of lies, and that liars are his children.

I. The Nature of a Lie (Exod. 20:16; 23:1, 7).

The commandment against false witness brings before us one form of lying—for it has to do with perjury, that is, the telling of an untruth in court.

This is one of the worst forms of lying, because it may result in the one against whom it is practiced losing his liberty, his life or his property. It may mean the destruction of his good reputation.

It is obvious, however, that the commandment covers all forms of lying, whether in business, in social contacts, in the home, or in the church. We might do well to consider what the Bible has to say about whisperers, talebearers, backbiters, and others (see Lev. 19:6; II Cor. 12:20). A man's reputation may be as easily ruined by a whispered lie over the back fence or the luncheon table as by formal perjury in the courtroom. "Thou shalt not bear false witness" at any time, anywhere, or in any way.

II. The Practice of Lying (Matt. 5:33-37).

The people of our Lord's day (and who can say that the custom has stopped) were in the habit of telling lies and then trying to make others believe them by an oath.

They would swear by heaven, or the throne of God, or some other sacred thing, and thus try to enforce their false word by some great authority.

The liar is always under necessity of doing something—perhaps telling another lie—to cover his falsehood. When his comfort or advantage seems to be endangered because he is not believed, he brings an oath to bear upon his statement.

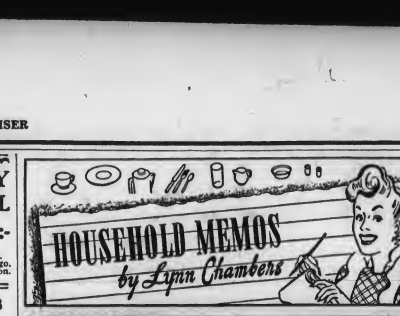
Jesus taught the great virtue of simple living and simple speech. A plain "yes" or "no" is usually sufficient for the situation. Qualifying words are apt to lead us astray. The life of a Christian should be so true and above board that no oath should be needed to assure one of his sincerity and honesty.

Since not all are Christians, it is a necessity that men be placed under some kind of oath or affirmation in judicial matters. Hence we need not interpret this Scripture as forbidding an oath in court.

It may be well to say a word about swearing in general. It is all too common among men, women and children. No Christian should ever be guilty of it, or that which sounds like it. We need admonition and correction at that point.

III. The Source of All Lies (John 8:42-45).

The devil is a liar, and the father of lies. Liars are members of his family. Jesus said it, "Ye are of your father the devil."



Liars had better consider their "family tree" and see how they like their spiritual father. He is lustful, murderous, and there is no truth in him (v. 44). If you belong to that family would you not like to change families and be born again into God's family?

Sadly enough the constant lying of the world seems to have infected the minds and hearts of Christians. Instead of being cleansed from this worldly defilement they carry its awful tendencies into the church. Is it not too true that gossip (which is almost always lying), false witness, the tearing down of someone's good name, is all too common in the church?

The great lie within the church, and one of Satan's prize exhibits, is the falsehood of modern religious liberalism (so-called) which is essentially a denial of real New Testament Christianity. Jesus said (v. 42) that if God is our Father we will accept Him as the Christ. The one who speaks sweet words about the example, the manhood, the leadership of the Master and who denies Him His place as God is clearly in mind here as a follower of the father of lies.

Note that in verses 45-47 Jesus challenges His enemies to convict Him of sin or of falsehood. No one has ever been able to meet that challenge.

The claims He made for Himself as the Son of God and the Saviour of the world are plain and unmistakable. If we deny them we either make Jesus a liar, or we lie ourselves, and it is obvious that the latter is the case.

Thanksgiving!

Traditional Thanksgiving turkey may this year give way to roast chicken, but the feast can have all the spirit of those you have had in former years. Though your meal may be less elaborate, every food can be done to a turn, the frills may be just as interesting, and your thanks can rise to a new height.

Let the charm of your dinner lie in its simplicity. Get the most out of your food and prepare it to deliciousness. The same vegetables that you had with turkey can go with chicken—if turnip puffs or corn pudding or squash or sweet potato and apples are a tradition in your family.

Prepare your chicken with the same care you would give turkey and it will look as nice and taste just wonderful. It's easy enough to truss chicken properly so that it will look nice. Here's one way of doing it:

Trussing Chicken.

Insert trussing needle through body of chicken below knee joint and pull cord through; continue cord through wings. Tie tightly to hold wings close to body. Stuff neck opening of chicken with stuffing and tuck neck skin under cord. Use another piece of cord, and insert needle through legs' rear joint. Stuff body cavity and truss opening with toothpicks pins or cord. Draw cord from legs around tail piece and tie legs down close to body.

The stuffing is just as important as the chicken itself. Have it not too soggy, not too dry, and well seasoned:

Celery Stuffing.

1 cup finely chopped celery
1 tablespoon minced onion
1 tablespoon minced parsley
1 tablespoon butter or fat
½ teaspoon marjoram
½ teaspoon celery seed
Salt and pepper
Water or stock
2½ cups bread crumbs

Cook celery onion and parsley in fat for a few minutes. Add other ingredients with enough liquid to hold together and make dressing slightly moist.

Roast Chicken.

4 to 5 pound roasting chicken
Salt (½ to ¾ teaspoon per pound)
Stuffing
Melted fat

Singe chicken, clean, wash and dry. Rub inside with salt. Stuff lightly with celery stuffing and truss. Rub surface with unsalted fat. Place on rack in an uncovered roaster, breast up. Cover with layer of fat from body of chicken, then with a clean cloth dipped into melted, unsalted fat. Roast, uncovered, in a slow oven (300 degrees) until tender, basting occasionally with drippings. Season with additional salt when half done.

Remove cloth near end of roasting period and allow to brown. A chicken weighing 4 to 5 pounds requires 30 to 35 minutes per pound to roast. A smaller chicken 40 to 45 minutes per pound.

Cranberry Sauce has a place with all fowl, and especially in the Conserving Fuel: You'll not only he saving on your own fuel bills but also co-operating with government requests if you save on cooking heat. Here's how:

When using oven, plan to cook several items in it at once. Meat and vegetables, and even hot bread and dessert can all be cooked in oven. It's poor economy to use both oven and surface heat to get a dinner together.

Food should be ready for oven at the same time oven is correct temperature. Do not keep opening oven door to see "how things are coming along."

Thanksgiving dinner:

Cranberry Sauce.
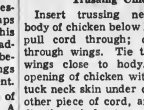
3 cups cranberries
1½ cups sugar
1 cup hot water



Put berries, sugar and water into a saucepan and let stand for 5 minutes. Then cook 5 minutes. Remove from range and let stand 5 minutes, then cook for another 5 minutes. Cool and serve with roast fowl.

Now, for the vegetables. You will probably have several kinds in mind such as:

Baked Sweet Potatoes and Apples.
(Serves 4)

2 large tart apples
2 large cold cooked sweet potatoes
½ teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons margarine
¼ cup corn or maple syrup

Core, pare and cut apples in slices. Saute each slice in margarine until nearly soft, browning the pieces thoroughly. Cut potatoes into rather thick slices, sprinkle with salt and place a slice of fried apple on the side of each potato. Arrange in a shallow baking dish, pour syrup over all, dot with butter. Bake ½ hour in a moderate oven until potato absorbs syrup.

Two-Hour Rolls.
(Makes 12 to 16 rolls)

1 yeast cake
½ cup lukewarm water
3 cups all-purpose flour, sifted
1 level tablespoon sugar
1 teaspoon salt
2 heaping tablespoons lard
½ cup milk

Dissolve yeast cake in lukewarm water. Mix dry ingredients, working in lard as for pie crust. Add milk and yeast mixture to make dough. Turn onto a floured board and knead well. Roll and cut into any shape. Let rise 2 hours. Bake 20 minutes in a hot oven (425 degrees).

Your choice for dessert may be a pumpkin pie, or perhaps an old-fashioned steamed pudding with lemon sauce:

Steamed Pudding.
(Serves 6)

1 cup bread crumbs
½ cup sour milk
¾ cup shortening
½ cup sugar
½ teaspoon vanilla
1 egg
½ cup sifted flour
½ teaspoon baking soda
½ teaspoon nutmeg
½ teaspoon cinnamon
½ cup raisins
½ cup chopped nuts

Soften bread crumbs in sour milk. Cream shortening and sugar until fluffy. Add vanilla and blend. Beat egg and combine with milk and crumbs, then add to first mixture. Sift dry ingredients and spices, add raisins and nuts and combine with first mixture. Steam for 1 hour in a greased mold.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

It was not until almost 300 years after Columbus that first commercial use was made of rubber. Native rubber articles — play balls, bowls, bottles, hats, capes and shoes—were brought to Spain and Portugal from various parts of Central and Northern South America years before the commercial merits of rubber were realized.

A rapidly growing army of more than 500 rubber-growing specialists from the U. S. is now in the Amazon rubber district expediting the collection of crude rubber and conquering the leaf disease that has taken severe toll of the jungle trees.

PETER RABBIT TRIES TO HELP

PETER RABBIT is one of the most kind-hearted little people of the Green Forest or the Green Meadows. He is happy-go-lucky and his dreadful curiosity is forever getting him into all kinds of trouble. Perhaps it is because he has been in so many scrapes himself that he always feels sorry for others who get into trouble. So, just as soon as he found out for himself that Sammy Jay had told the truth about Chatterer the Red Squirrel he began to think and think of some way to help Chatterer.

Now, of course, Peter didn't know what kind of a prison Chatterer was in. He remembered right away how Prickly Porky the Porcupine had gnawed a great hole in the box in which Johnny Chuck's lost baby was kept by Farmer Brown's Boy. Why shouldn't Prickly Porky do as much for Chatterer? He would go see him at once. The trouble with Peter is that he doesn't think of all sides of a question. So now he scampered down into the Green Forest as fast as his long legs would carry him to hunt for Prickly Porky. It was no trouble at all to find him, for he had only to follow the line of trees that had been stripped of their bark.

"Good afternoon, Prickly Porky. Have you heard the news about Chatterer?" said Peter, talking very fast, for he was quite out of breath.

"Yes," replied Prickly Porky. "Serves him right, I hope it will teach him a lesson."

Peter's heart sank. "Don't you think it is dreadful?" he asked. "Just think, he will never, never be able to run and play in the Green Forest again unless we can get him out."

"Have you heard the news about Chatterer?"

"So much the better," grunted Prickly Porky. "So much the better. He always was a nuisance. Never did see such a fellow for making trouble for other people. No, sir, I never did. The rest of us can have some peace now. Serves him right." Prickly Porky went on chewing bark as if Chatterer's trouble was no concern of his.

Peter's heart sank lower still. He scratched one long ear slowly with a long hind foot, which is a way he has when he is thinking very hard. He was so busy thinking that he didn't see the twinkle in the dull little eyes of Prickly Porky, who really was not so hard-hearted as his words sounded. After a long while, during which Peter thought and thought and Prickly Porky ate and ate, the latter spoke again.

"What have you got on your mind, Peter?" he asked.

"I—I was just thinking how perfectly splendid it would be if you would go up there and gnaw a way out of his prison for Chatterer," replied Peter timidly.

"Huh!" grunted Prickly Porky. "Huh! Some folks think my wits are pretty slow, but even I know better than that. Put on your thinking cap again, Peter Rabbit."

"Why can't you? You are not afraid of Bowser the Hound or Farmer Brown's Boy, and everybody else is, excepting Jimmy Skunk," persisted Peter.

"For the very good reason that if I could gnaw into his prison Chatterer could gnaw out. If he can't gnaw his way out with those sharp teeth of his, I certainly can't gnaw in. Where's your common sense, Peter Rabbit?"

"That's so. I hadn't thought of that," replied Peter slowly and sorrowfully. "I must think of some other way to help Chatterer."

"I'd be willing to try if it was of any use, but it isn't," said Prickly Porky, who didn't want Peter to think that he really was as hard-hearted as he had seemed at first.

So Peter bade Prickly Porky good-by and started for the dear old Briar Patch to try to think of some other way to help Chatterer.

Groceryman Was Just Standing True to Form

The village groceryman—who was also an air-raid warden of long standing—was very proud of the fact that his photograph had been published in the local newspaper.

While he was showing it to one of his customers, a rather formidable old lady, he detected a certain lack of enthusiasm on her part, and said apologetically: "Of course, it's not a very good photo. I'm out of focus."

"Yes," the old lady replied with a grim smile, "you're always out of something. You were out of string beans yesterday."

When armored knights met, it was customary for each knight to raise the visor of his helmet as a means of identification. This gesture has come down through all armies in the form of the salute. Traditional, too, is the Army man's preference for Camel cigarettes. With men in the Army, Navy, Marines, and Coast Guard, actual sales records in their service stores show that Camel is the favorite. It's one of the favorite gifts with service men. And though there are Post Office restrictions on packages to overseas Army men, you can still send Camels to soldiers in the U. S., and to men in the Navy, Marines, and Coast Guard wherever they are.—Adv.

From where I sit . . .

by Joe Marsh

Been hearing a lot about the Civil Air Patrol lately. A lot of fellows—and girls, too—helping out in the war here at home, flying the army's errands.

Many of 'em f their own plane and they all pay their own expenses. What they're doing is mighty important, seems to me.

Saw one bucking a strong headwind in a storm here a while back. Gave me a thrill to watch that little plane scudding through on its war work.

Real patriots, cooperating like that together, is what wins.

And talking about cooperation, it looks to me like Kentucky brewers are doing a mighty fine job, through the Army and Navy Cooperation Program of the Brewing Industry Foundation.

They're seeing to it that every licensed retail beer dealer near a military camp maintains the highest standards of operation.

From where I sit, the military authorities have every right to their enthusiasm over the brewers' cooperation program.

The American Spirit Fostered TWO GREAT REVOLUTIONS!

The First Revolution
The Revolution for Independence in 1776 was for individual freedom from oppression—from taxation without representation—it was for freedom of speech, of worship, to work when, how and where one pleased. This was before steam, electricity or other power lightened the burden of human toil.

The Second Revolution
Then came the Industrial Revolution. Man's energy through machinery and enormous investment was multiplied a thousandfold. His courage—ability—energy—initiative—thrift—investment—were rewarded with personal profit and accomplishment. Free Enterprise flourished—greater employment ensued—wages increased—living standards improved—new wants were created and satisfied—and our country became the envy of the world.

What Next?
War has further speeded science and invention. Progress is marking time until the war ends. Individual Freedom and Free Enterprise await the go-ahead signal to move forward to greater accomplishment.

The Interests of Capital and Labor are Inseparable
The businessman's profit and the working man's wages and living standards are inter-dependent. Serving co-operatively, under a representative democracy and a constitutional government, a better world is in the making.

This Railroad's Part
If granted equal freedom by law, regulation, and taxation, as applied to competitive forms of transportation, the "Old Reliable" and its employees will do the same fine job in peacetime for their Southland as they are now doing in war for the Nation.

J. B. Hill President
LOUISVILLE & NASHVILLE RAILROAD

Higher wages, increased production, greater prosperity, always follow the investment of Capital. They can be assured in no other way. Capital is entitled to a fair return for its investment and risk. Labor is entitled to an appropriate wage. The public benefits from increased production.
The Louisville & Nashville Railroad, with its half billion dollar investment, is regulated enterprise at work. It looks confidently forward to a continued share in developing the South.

WARTIME SAVINGS SUGGESTIONS for Electric Appliance Users

Six Ways to Avoid Waste in the Use of Your Electric Washer and Iron

- Disconnect iron at wall outlet when called to door or telephone or whenever ironing is interrupted by other duties.
- Sprinkle clothes lightly — just enough to permit easy ironing out of wrinkles. Excessive dampening wastes heat and electricity.
- Set heat control of iron at correct temperature for each type of fabric and avoid using higher temperature than necessary.
- Plan washing so full capacity of washer is used once rather than partial capacity a number of times. But be careful not to overload. Overloading wastes electricity and results in a loss of efficiency.
- Turn off washer completely when not in use. Do not let it continue to run while you prepare next load.

Uncle Sam Says:
Waste of anything in wartime is a crime. Do not waste electricity just because it isn't rationed. Wasting electricity involves a waste of fuel, transportation facilities, manpower and critical materials needed elsewhere in the war effort. Use all the electricity you need but need what you use.

South Pacific—This picture shows some of the devastation U. S. bombers have caused in Japan's big shipping and air base of Rabaul, feeder point for enemy forces operating in New Guinea and the Solomons. In a recent attack, fighter planes from aircraft carriers protected land-based bombers in their assaults on Rabaul.

Their footing on the southwest shore of Bougainville secure, U. S. troops were being re-enforced for their push inland against the 40,000 Japs reportedly clinging to their last major stronghold in the Solomons. The U. S. brought fighter planes into the action to bomb and machine gun enemy positions hewn into the jungle.

Since Pearl Harbor, a naval spokesman reported 67 U. S. warships sunk: one battleship, four aircraft carriers, nine cruisers, 39 destroyers and 14 submarines.

ITALY:
Fighting See-Saws

Fighting in the mountains see-sawed in southern Italy as the Germans cleared sections of the west coast to the north in anticipation of Allied landings from fleets which they reported were massed in Naples.

Bitter fighting marked the mountain warfare in the Mignano region, where the Germans were guarding the pass leading into the level plain stretching approximately 80 miles to the north to Rome.

One U. S. company alone used 500 hand grenades in the close, rough encounters along the rocky slopes. Anchored in six-foot-deep tunnels securely thatched with heavy timbers and sand bags, the Nazis held strong positions, relatively secure from dive-bombings or artillery fire, but sometimes open to attacks from the side or rear.

SUBSIDIES: Fight On

With other branches of agriculture, representatives of the livestock trade spesrheaded the attack against the administration's subsidy program before the senate agriculture committee. On November 1, President Roosevelt had called on congress to continue government payments to encourage production and reduce consumer costs through retail price reductions, announcing the program now runs the U. S. 800 million dollars annually.

Frank Boice of the American Livestock association told the senate committee subsidies for reducing retail meat prices will save the consumer barely $2 annually. P. O. Wilson of the joint livestock committee declared cattle producers were never consulted on establishment of meat price ceilings.

Opposition to subsidies also was registered by the Grocery Manufacturers of America, representative of 85 per cent of the nation's processed food producers. The organization stated that price control of its products on a subsidy basis was unsound because the cost would have to be repaid in taxation, plus administration expense of the program.

RUSSIA:
Near Poland

Slowly, Russian troops were bending the center of the Nazi battle line back to the pre-war Polish border, with the Reds no less than 50 miles distant from the old boundary at two points west of Kiev.

In addition, the Russ were snapping important rail lines hooking up Nazi forces in the north and south.

To the south, the Germans reported 500,000 Russ attacking at Krivoi Rog, hig mine center where the Nazis stopped the Reds' surge through the Ukraine when it threatened to trap huge forces in the Dnieper river bend.

In Washington, D. C., it was announced Russian armies had been aided by the lend-lease of 6,500 planes and more than 3,000 tanks in the two years ended September 30.

WHISKY BUSINESS:
Senate to Investigate

Charged with hoarding whisky stocks to evade taxation and raise prices, big distillers were to be called to Washington, D. C., before a senate subcommittee to explain alleged shortages despite reported inventories of five or six years.

Frederick Van Nuys

Said Senator Frederick Van Nuys, Indiana: "We know that some of the big corporations, which have been buying up little distilleries, are keeping liquor in the warehouses eight or ten years, when most liquor does not age perceptibly after four years."

Senator Van Nuys said other phases of the investigation will concern the practice of distilleries selling inventories to stockholders, and the alleged mixture of straight whisky with 70 per cent neutral spirits for sale under strange brand names to evade price ceilings.

AGRICULTURE:
Assured of Fertilizer

As manufacturers, the army and Tennessee Valley authority have entered into an agreement with the War Production board to supply 625,000 tons of nitrogen for agriculture for the 1943-'44 season.

Under the agreement, the army will realize $47.50 per ton on the nitrogen on an f.o.b. basis, with TVA selling the fertilizer. In certain southern states, Associated Cooperatives, Inc., will act as distributors, and in all other states east of the Rocky mountains, TVA will sell the product through brokers designated by WPB.

To manufacture the nitrogen, the army will operate its marginal facilities for ammonium nitrate, and TVA will furnish specifications for the conditioning materials necessary for a fertilizer nitrate.

Hog Marketing

With a 1943 spring pig crop of 74,050,000, the government is making every effort to assure an orderly marketing of hogs and prevent heavy runs in December and January. To achieve this end, industry representatives have banded into committees at 14 key terminal centers to advise producers on shipments. As a further aid, the War Food administration will release marketing instructions through press and radio.

Complicating the marketing situation is the fact that the record pig crop must be handled in the face of strained transportation facilities and manpower shortages. Storage of the pork and by-products for civilian, military and lend-lease use also will tax refrigerator capacity.

It is pointed out that orderly marketing will assure producers of 200 to 270-pound weights of the minimum government support price of $13.75, Chicago basis.

Farm Speculation

To prevent "destructive speculation," Senator Guy Gillette, Iowa, has introduced legislation under which a seller would pay a 10 per cent resale transfer tax on the purchase price of farm land, when the property has been acquired after the passage of the act and reseld within a year. The legislation would expire two years after the war. Under another plan, Gillette said, profit on a transaction would be absorbed by a tax ranging up to 100 per cent.

NATIONAL GRANGE:
Goss Re-elected

Meeting in Grand Rapids, Mich., for its 77th annual convention, the National Grange re-elected Albert Goss, Washington, D. C., as master.

Goss highlighted the convention by calling for congressional revision of the present parity formula, which, he asserted, fails to include farm labor costs; wrongly assumes that farm income for the base period of 1909-'14 was in proper proportion to non-farm income; is based upon price rather than income, and is obsolete because the relative value of commodities has changed greatly in recent years.

Also elected were David Agans, Three Bridges, N. H., overseer; W. G. Armstrong, Niles, Mich., treasurer; Harry C. Caton, Coshocton, Ohio, secretary; and Mrs. Bessie Seebert, Chichako, Okla.; Mrs. Blanche D. Newsom, Columbus, Ind.; Mrs. Alice Pearson, Miami, Fla.; and Eugene A. Eckert, Mascoutah, Ill., national committeemen.

WORLD RELIEF:
Study Financing

While President Roosevelt called upon congress to authorize appropriations to finance America's share of the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation administration, the UNRRA considered various proposals for raising funds to carry out the program during its meetings in Atlantic City, N. J.

Saying it is hoped "a small fraction of the national income" of the contributing member nations of the UNRRA will be sufficient for its work, President Roosevelt defined the organization's purpose as an endeavor "to help the liberated peoples to help themselves, so that they may have the strength to undertake the task of rebuilding their destroyed homes, their ruined factories, and their plundered farms."

UNRRA studied three proposals for raising funds: 1. Assessment of member nations on the basis of per capita income; 2. Member national contributions of 1 per cent of their national income; 3. Assessments against foreign trade figures of the member nations.

U. S. PLANES:
'Wings on Guns'

So well are U. S. fighting planes armed, that it can be said American engineers are designing guns and putting wings on them.

With that statement, Army Air Force Technician Col. Frank C. Wolfe listed 19 reasons for U. S. planes' tremendous firepower.

Among the reasons were hydraulic and electrically operated gun turrets with multiple gun installations; increased firepower for nose and tail positions of all types of bombers; improved computing sights for all gun positions; fighter gun sights which extend present sighting ranges; improvements in armor plate and bullet resistant glass; remote control and fire control systems.

No less than 70 types of aircraft are being tested at army fields, Colonel Wolfe said, with approved types sent to battle zones for additional tryouts before being finally put into production.

Hat in Ring

Three times governor of Ohio, John W. Bricker formally announced his candidacy for the Republican nomination for President. During his tenure as Ohio's chief executive, the state's debt has been cut 22 million dollars, and a 24 million dollar postwar building and highway fund has been set up from surplus. Announcing his candidacy, Bricker said: "We must keep ourselves strong, liberty-loving, self-governing and use that power and influence throughout the world to bring about better international relations and to prevent the deadly destruction of war."

He is 16 months old. A cow sold for $10,000, next highest price at the sale. An average of $3,280 was established after the first 20 head were sold.

GOOD WORD ON EGGS

If you like eggs—fried, scrambled, or Easter—this may interest you.

The high price of eggs will soon come tumbling down. This Humpty-Dumpty event will be brought about by the sale of five million cases of government eggs.

War Food administration, responding to the prodding of critics, admits that it was putting too many eggs in one basket, for military and Lend-Lease requirements, at the expense of civilian requirements.

Release of this tremendous quantity of eggs won't alarm the housewife, but worries War Food experts because it might discourage production for next year.

Meantime, War Food and OPA are rowing over the price to be paid for these five million cans of cold storage eggs. WFA officials, protecting the producers, want a higher price for cold storage eggs than fresh eggs.

OPA, thinking of the housewife, says: "This is the first time we ever heard that eggs become more valuable as they get older!"

But War Food stands firm on the principle that the old eggs should bring more money. Their reason is that the old eggs were stored by dealers who were playing the usual seasonal game of holding for a rise in price, without realizing that the government was going to step in and take over at the fixed price.

In other words, War Food experts are trying to hand dealers some of the speculative profit they might have gotten, while OPA—trying to protect the consumer—wants to hold the price down.

The inside government egg debate is still raging.

COLD WINTER AHEAD

Whatever you burn this winter—oil or coal—it is still going to be cold.

The public has the impression that it is only coal which is short now. Actually, oil is even shorter, rations for this winter being based on a 34 per cent cut below pre-war consumption.

The fuel situation is so bad that OPA experts several months ago recommended coupon rationing of coal. A warm debate followed between OPA and the Solid Fuel Coordinator, in which Ickes, supported by the coal industry, opposed rationing.

But OPA experts believed coal would be short this winter and, during the summer, laid plans for coupon rationing. In August, they were all ready to go to press with millions of coupon books.

Finally, however, the coal co-ordinator vetoed the plan. Now it is too late to impose coupon rationing—partly because there is not sufficient time to print the coupons and give out instructions to local boards; also because some coal is already supposed to be distributed—inequitably—to consumers.

Thus we shall have to rely on "dealer rationing." This does not limit consumption—only strings out the supply in driblets, making a greater delivery task without decreasing consumption.

The public believes that oil is bountiful compared with coal, and OPA is now besieged with applications for reconversion from coal to oil. These applications are being resisted, since the impression of abundance of oil is merely an illusion.

FEWER TIRES FOR ALLIES

One thing not discussed at the Moscow conference was rubber tires. If the question had been raised, Russia would have been told that tires on Lend-Lease will have to be reduced sharply.

Reason is that U. S. trucks and buses are wearing their tires down to the fabric, and Jesse Jones' long ballyhooed synthetic tires are falling behind schedule. There is plenty of new rubber, but a dire lag in tire production.

Meanwhile, bus and truck transportation has never been more vital. Last year inter-city buses carried more passengers than the railroads (680 million compared with 669 million), though they travelled fewer miles.

If they are crippled, the weight would be thrown back on the already struggling railroads. Also, many places would be without transportation, since 54,000 communities have no rail service.

The army, OPA, ODT and the rubber director's office are putting their heads together to find a way out. One solution will be a reduction of tires shipped on Lend-Lease, Russia alone was promised 500,000 this year, in addition to 2,000,000 already delivered.

U. S. Office of Air Safety Guards Cadets in Training

Accident Statistics Prove Value of Regional Safety Officers' Work; Program Has Three Main Divisions.

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, Union Trust Building, Washington, D. C.

The army air force has been around the world 134,078 times! That is what air miles add up to—three billion, three hundred and fifty-two million in the fiscal year 1943.

Just how safe is the job of a pilot?

Not the job where you have to count on the enemy fighters and the ack-ack, but the job of learning to be a pilot.

"Ninety-five out of every hundred army air force cadets are going through their flight training program with no personal injury of any kind," says Col. Sam Harris, chief, army air force office of flying safety.

The office of air safety is the institution which has built safety into training programs as a highly emphasized part of the whole regime. It has three main principles.

Initial Phase

The first is "prevention and investigation," and the keynote here is experience. The 54 officers who take care of this end of the work have a total air experience of 33 years, 318 days in the air. These men, known as regional safety officers (RSOs) are assigned to each air force and command in the United States.

Here is an example of how the RSO works. He goes to a certain field. He meets some cadets who say they haven't had any breakfast. He puts that down in his notes. He looks the place over, notes a ditch parallel to a runway. He orders the ditch filled, talks with the mess officer and has breakfast served earlier. Then he tackles the boys themselves. He gives them a talk on the importance of instruments. Three separate moves and the accidents are cut down there.

The second principle is "flight control." Here is where the flight control officer, traffic cop of the air, comes in. For traffic control is as important in the air as on the street. The men of this force offer a Pilot's Advisory Counsel. This service leads pilots through or around dangerous traffic or weather conditions.

Suppose the flight control officer in the Seattle center knows Lieutenant Smith is headed in that direction. He also knows that a "cold front" is moving across his path. So he radios Smith, tells him to make for an alternate airport.

No. 3 on the list of safeties is "safety education."

Safety Education

Most of the accidents in training in the United States are due to personnel error—the fault of the human being, not the ship or the machine. This education comes through special movies, through manuals, through cartoons and posters.

Here are some of the slogans that help:

"Hitler and Hirohito cheer . . . when you forget your maps . . . when you pay no attention to telephone wires . . . when you jam on your brakes . . . when you don't check your gas . . ."

Other points are driven home with a little sardonic humor such as "when a pilot thinks he's pretty hot, he's usually close to burning." "To grow old in the natural way, a pilot has to use his luck sparingly . . ."

The first six months of 1943 compared with all of 1942, show these percentages of reduction of accidents:

In primary schools	2.3%
In basic schools	5.5%
In advanced schools	11%

And just see the table for accidents as miles flown go up!

1921-30—Miles flown, 155,818,000—accident rate, 2.11.

1943—Miles flown, 3,351,940,000—accident rate, .716.

That's how America is learning safety in the skyways.

War Brings Recognition To Psychiatry

There will be so many changes after the war that a lot of words will not even have the same meanings. New things and new thinking will appear and people will have to learn the new words in order to think the new thoughts.

Already the war has caused psychiatry to be "adequately recognized," according to Dr. Richard Hutchings, who is the author of "A psychiatric Word Book" published by the New York State Department of Mental Hygiene and now in its seventh edition.

This is not a book for laymen but it is exceedingly interesting to scan its pages just to see how ordinary words can achieve new meanings as new thoughts about new things develop. The word book is invaluable to the doctor and many others who will be more and more concerned with this important study of interpersonal relations—psychiatry.

Let's take a layman's look at the pages of the little pocket volume.

Starting at the beginning with "a—an." Not the simple articles they look! The definition is not new in this case but shows the special meaning the person who reads psychiatry must know. The definition reads:

"Prefixes derived from the Greek and having the same meaning as the prefix un- or the suffix -less. Without; absence of; not. Cf. amentia, anosmia."

That takes us to amentia which means (1) absence of intellect; (2) a state of mind bordering on stupor; (3) feeblemindedness.

You have heard of behavior but what is behaviorism? It is "the psychological theory which holds that correct conclusions in psychology must rest upon objective study and interpretation of behavior."

You have also heard of conversion. Here is the psychistrist's meaning of it. "The process by which an emotional trauma (that is an emotional 'wound') after repression becomes converted into a physical symptom in hysteria."

Practical Application

If you think that sounds too highbrow, just recall the remark: "He's had that squint ever since he saw that terrible accident."

There are a lot more interesting new meanings clear over to the last word "zoopsia" which you know all about if you ever saw "Ten Nights in a Barroom," the great prohibition play. "Zoopsia" is what we (incorrectly) call "D.T.'s." The definition is "a visual hallucination of animals or insects."

The little book also has an appendix in which there are careful and more detailed descriptions of the emotions—anxiety, fear, pride, vanity, etc., which we now know are as dangerous to our mental health when they get out of control as a flock of flu germs are to our bodily welfare.

I'll give you a definition of the one emotion which is highly important because when it gets the upper hand in politics, it can do as much harm to a form of government as to an individual.

"Egoism and egotism are not synonyms. Egoism is a self-seeking desire to gain advantages at the expense of the rights, convenience or possessions of others. It is essentially antisocial. Egotism is overvaluation of self, one's opinions, ability or cleverness and corresponding undervaluation of others."

Now, just apply that definition of egoism to blocs, political parties, nations and you'll see why psychiatry is important in the new world. The more people who understand it, the more people will understand each other.

The words in "A Psychiatric Word Book" are important words.

Popular Questions

Here are answers to three questions I was asked most frequently on a recent trip to the Middle West:

(1) When will the war be over?

I don't know. I wouldn't be surprised if Germany cracked inside this winter. At least another year to clean up Japan.

(2) What about international cooperation afterward?

I don't know. The feeling I get in Washington is that there will be an honest attempt to form an international league, just as it is suggested in the Moscow conference.

(3) Will President Roosevelt run for a Fourth Term?

I douht if even he knows that either. He probably will unless the war is done and over.

Speaking of Sports

EVEN while Coach Frank Leahy of Notre Dame was somberly forecasting that the Irish-Northwestern tilt could "go either way," 91 of the nation's top grid experts were casting 91 first-place ballots for Notre Dame in the weekly poll to determine the country's best football team.

And that, by the way, was the first time any football team ever received unanimous backing.

Notre Dame's football status was summed up very clearly by Lieut. Comdr. Edgar ("Rip") Miller, Navy line coach, who said that the 1943 lineup is the best of all Notre Dame teams . . . "probably the greatest in collegiate or professional history."

Miller, as may be remembered, was one of the Seven Mules who cleared the way for the Four Horsemen in 1924. So his words carry weight.

"We took a fine team to Cleveland," Miller remarked recently, "and Notre Dame beat us although we had a fine line and a good set of backs. The team I saw that day was the greatest in the school's history. I believe it could have beaten any college or professional team put together.

Topping Them All

"It has weight, speed, precision and has mastered the fundamentals of pass defense, downfield blocking, ball handling, tackling—everything. It tops them all."

A great deal more will be heard of Coach Frank Leahy in years to come. It is our opinion that the future will have him remembered along with Knute Rockne as a great Notre Dame institution.

Leahy views each game with gloomy forebodings. His pre-game outlook is dark and melancholy. When things are beginning to look too bright for his team he begins remembering what Holy Cross did to Boston College last year. He remembers, too, that bleak day in 1935 when a thrice-beaten Northwestern came through to whip an undefeated Notre Dame team which was on its way to a national championship.

Leahy doesn't have to remind himself not to grow too optimistic. His sad thoughts are for the benefit of others who are overly cheerful.

Just as we think Leahy is the coach of the year, so we believe Angelo Bertelli is the player of the year. Though he didn't have the opportunity to finish out the season, Bertelli proved himself to be one of the most brilliant players in Notre Dame history.

In our opinion, Notre Dame, with its superb line, its greater backfield and its dazzling speed, stood out as the best college team we've ever seen.

The Possibilities

Bill Alexander, Georgia Tech coach, whose team played both Notre Dame and Navy, declared that the Irish could beat any team he had seen this season 50 to 0 if Notre Dame kept the pressure on.

Veteran football writers of the Midwest have expressed the belief that Notre Dame, with Bertelli in action, could beat the Bears and Bedakins, Unquestionably the South Bend school is very well equipped with the elements of the T-formation demands at its best. But to beat the Bears would be asking a great deal from any college team. We wouldn't know about that.

Another thing—Johnny Lujack, the young man who replaced Bertelli, is more than a fair ball player. As an 18-year-old, even Bertelli was probably no more promising. There isn't much that Bertelli did that Lujack can't do. He can pass, run and tackle. In the Army game he answered the question of how he would react in the clutch. The answer was favorable.

Lone Yank Patrol Licks Jap Patrol

Fails to Receive Order to Retire; He Fights On.

WASHINGTON.—The marine corps captain who answered a French order to retreat in 1918 with the immortal words: "Retreat hell. We just got here," has a worthy successor in Corp. George K. Henderson of the United States army.

Failing to receive an order to withdraw while attached to a marine raider ambush party in the Solomon Islands, Henderson stood up singlehanded to an eight-man Japanese patrol and killed five of them.

When the marine group returned to its lines, Henderson's absence was discovered and a patrol searched for him without result. He was reported missing, but walked in for breakfast the next morning.

Henderson, whose home is at Cannonville, Utah, is 26 years old.

The story of his adventure reached Washington from New Georgia island in a dispatch from Marine Corps Combat Correspondent Sergt. Jim Lucas of 2531 E. 14th street, Tulsa, Okla.

"I figured they were still with me," Henderson told Lucas, referring to his marine companions, "so when the Japs came in sight I opened up with my tommy. I got a couple, and the rest kept coming. Two Japs started setting up a light machine gun. I got them and the gun with a hand grenade. I shot a fifth with my tommy. The other three ran.

"Then I found out I was alone. I felt a bit shaky—those Japs had had at least two machine guns. But it was easy.

"I made my way back through the jungle and spent the night. I found out in the morning that I was within 50 yards of my own lines."

Cupid Asks for Gasoline; Denied by Ration Board

MONTCLAIR, N. J.—Cupid got around fairly well before the automobile came, the Montclair ration board ruled in denying the application of an aging swain who pleaded for extra gasoline rations to woo the lady of his heart.

"I have never been out with a woman," the applicant wrote to the board, "and now there is a lady at the shop where I work with whom, because of my age, I feel I have my first and last chance at love. Because she lives in Pine Brook (about ten miles from Montclair) I need a few gallons of gas, so I may see her twice a week.

"I trust you will give love a lift."

The board rejected the request in the usual formal letter to which Chairman John Errico appended:

"We heartily sympathize with your situation. Youth and love should be served, but love is not new to this world. It is as old as time. It came to man in prehistoric ages.

"However, the automobile is comparatively new—a matter of 30 years. Long before this, Cupid flourished without gasoline and auto car with much success."

The applicant's name was not made public.

Flier Wakes Up Strapped To Plane on Channel Bed

LONDON.—Flight Lieut. Charles Ellis Bradshaw of Stratford-on-Avon has the doubtful pleasure of knowing what it is like to wake up and find himself strapped in the cockpit of a Typhoon fighter-bomber on the bottom of the English channel.

His aircraft was flying low over the water a short distance off the south coast when the engine cut out. Lieutenant Bradshaw had no alternative to "ditching" the machine. It plunged to the bottom, the violence of the crash causing the pilot to strike his head and lose consciousness.

All this happened in the middle of a fishing fleet. The crews considered the airman killed, but presently Lieutenant Bradshaw popped up and was saved. He said later that it was "unhealthy" on the bed of the channel and he lost no time freeing himself from his straps.

Conroy, 20, Dorchester, Mass., crashed into a sleeve target during gunnery practice at 8,000 feet, bailed out, broke an arm as he fell in the sea, was rescued and back at his base—all in 70 minutes. A navy spokesman said that another flier radioed the El Toro marine air station that Conroy had bailed out. Maj. Loren D. Everton took off in an amphibian plane, landed in the ocean beside Conroy, and flew him to the base. His arm was set an hour and 10 minutes after he had bailed out.

GALL BLADDER

If an individual does considerable belching, has occasional sharp pains in upper right hand side of abdomen, and at times his skin shows a yellow tinge, his, or more often her, physician suspects liver and gall bladder disturbance. He may have tests made of the ability of the liver to filter out poisons or harmful substances from the blood, and an X-ray of the gall bladder to show its shape, presence of stones, and ability to empty its bile into the small intestine.

Dr. Barton

The liver is the largest organ in the body and can lose many of its cells and be damaged to a considerable extent without endangering the life of the individual.

The gall bladder which holds about two ounces of concentrated bile can be distended so that it holds almost a pint of bile diluted with a saline or salt solution.

Generally speaking, as practically two of every three middle-aged or elderly individuals have some disturbance of liver and gall bladder, the need for operation of any kind does not include a large percentage of this number. It is severe pain in the region of the gall bladder, or the intense pain of gall stone colic, caused by a gall stone trying to pass through a small tube or duct, that calls for consideration as to the need for operation.

In the Canadian Medical Association Journal, Dr. L. C. McCabe, Windsor, Ontario, states:

"While I would urge most emphatically the importance of operating early in the course of chronic gall bladder disease, I should like to sound a warning against operating for 'indefinite' symptoms. The individual who has flatulent dyspepsia (indigestion with much gas formation) but gives no history of gall stone colic, or of any attack of pain that might be an acutely obstructed gall bladder, and gives no history of jaundice, is better carried along by medical treatment, not surgery. Even if his gall bladder does not empty or fill completely as shown by X-rays, I would let him go on belching and perform no operation. The belching will rarely be changed by removal of gall bladder because this belching is usually due to overeating, over-drinking, or to emotional disturbances."

The thought then is that belching and pain in the region of the gall bladder should be investigated.

Emotional Factor in Rheumatic Children

Rheumatism receives intensive study in Great Britain because such a large percentage of the population is afflicted. Although the damp climate has much to do with causing and aggravating the symptoms of rheumatism, British physicians give perhaps more thought to the "nervous" or emotional factor in rheumatism than we do here. Of course, all physicians are aware of this factor and of the relation of that nervous ailment chorea (St. Vitus' Dance) to rheumatism.

In the British Medical Journal, Dr. D. Hubble states that there are two parts to the rheumatic state in childhood—nervousness and infection. Both are present in differing amounts so that it may be impossible in one child to distinguish any nervous instability (or lack of nervous balance) or in another to detect any evidence of infection. In one the emotional factor is most pronounced and infection apparently not present or occurs after the emotional factor is apparently entirely absent.

As to "growing pains," Dr. Hubble points out that these pains result not from growth of the body but because of some difficulty attending the growth of the personality of the individual, and it is easier to find evidence of nervous instability than of infection in these cases.

Although many physicians believe that infection is present first and causes the rheumatism with emotional instability following, Dr. Hubble states that there is more evidence to prove that the emotional or nervous excitability occurs before infection and "probably even prepares the ground for the infection."

How can these symptoms be treated? This is done by removing the stresses of the child's home and school life, and by adjusting him to the surroundings best suited to his personality.

QUESTION BOX

Q.—Is surgery commonly resorted to in correction of defective eye muscles?

A.—Surgery is commonly resorted to if other methods — exercise, prisms—fail, as they often do.

Q.—Can I get into any branch of the service with a perforated ear drum?

A.—The perforated ear drum would likely prevent you joining an overseas unit, but home service would be all right.

IT'S one of the tales that people of the entertainment world will be telling years from now—that Abbott and Costello story. Last March, when Costello was stricken with rheumatic fever, and doctors said that he would never walk again, Abbott was urged to get himself a new partner. He refused. He went off the air, stopped all picture work. He and Lou had been partners in pictures and radio for 13 years, he was sure that Lou would recover, and he'd wait. His faith was justified last September, when Lou took 60 steps, one for each year of the birthday anniversary his mother was celebrating. They're back on the air now, start a picture late this month. But Fate again has dealt cruelly with the roly-poly comic, for his infant son, Lou Costello Jr., was drowned in the family swimming pool three hours before his adoring dad went on the air, brushed the tears aside and laughed as loud as he could on a coast-to-coast hookup.

"Youth in Crisis," the latest March of Time release, is going to startle a lot of complacent people. Dramatically, movingly, it tells the story of what is happening to our young people because of the disruptions and excitement of war. Dealing with the same problem, RKO Radio is making "Are These Our Children?" Ruth Clifton, 18-year-old high school girl who originated the famous Moline Plan, has been brought to Hollywood to confer with California officials and to act as technical advisor on the film.

When "Vox Pop" transferred from the sidewalks of Houston, Texas, to those of New York, in 1935, Variety, the theatrical paper, predicted that "This show ought to last indefinitely." Recently Parks Johnson celebrated "Vox Pop's" 12th birthday, so the prediction may come true.

If you haven't formed the habit of listening to those delightful sketches done on the Dinah Shore program by Cornelia Otis Skinner and Roland Young, better do something about it right away. Many an effort has been made to do exactly this sort of thing on the air, and many an effort has failed. Comes along on CBS right after the Bing Crosby program on NBC on Thursday evenings.

Maurice Murphy's playing a fighting pilot in Paramount's "Submarine Alert," doing all right, but he has one deep regret. As a small child he portrayed the star, John Gilbert, as a child in "Flesh and the Devil," and the leading lady often held him on her lap. The leading lady was Greta Garbo. "And when it happened," says he, "I was too young to appreciate it!"

Carlton E. Morse, writer and producer of "I Love a Mystery" and "One Man's Family," has signed to put the latter on the screen. Morse will write an original story for the film, which will be produced by Charles Rogers for United Artists release.

ODDS AND ENDS—Although Sidney Lanfield has never directed her, he manages to weave a gag around Dorothy Lamour into each of his pictures; the latest is in "Standing Room Early," with Paulette Goddard and Fred MacMurray . . . Hedy Lamarr has been selected as the army magazine Yank's Pin-Up Girl of the Week for the second time . . . Elmo Lincoln, the original "Tarzan," has a role in "The Bridge of San Luis Rey" . . . Amos 'n' Andy have been deluged with fan mail proclaiming their new show to be a success . . . Pat O'Brien has been booked to appear on the air's Radio Theater on November 29th, in "The Iron Major,"

Aid From Switzerland

For months, Switzerland has been sending materials needed in the war effort to the United States in exchange for food, all of these exports and imports being transported on vessels of Swiss registry through the port of Genoa, says Collier's. Axis countries have not been able to stop the practice because of Switzerland's threat to blow up her three tunnels, whose rail facilities are the life lines between Germany and Italy.

WE HAVE MUCH TO BE THANKFUL FOR

There was a pioneer Thanksgiving, when men and women rejoiced that the land was fruitful, the harvest was good.

There was a Civil War Thanksgiving, when a President first asked this nation to pause and count its blessings.

There was a Thanksgiving in 1918, when the whole world rejoiced at the ending of bitterness and bloodshed.

There was even a Thanksgiving in 1942 when the news, at long last, was good, and our own troops were sweeping the emeny before them.

This year we have more reason to be thankful!

Thankful that in a half-slave world, we are wholly free—in mind, in spirit, in deed.

Thankful that in a famished world, our land is still fruitful, our harvests are good.

Thankful that in a world of dictatorships, ours is still a government of, by and for the people.

Thankful that we can look back on a long string of successes—and look forward to the final victory we shall inevitably win.

Thankful above all, that we are Americans

Lieut. Darlington Prisoner Of War.

According to word received here this week, First Lieutenant Julian Darlington, son of Bishop U. V. W. Darlington of the Kentucky Diocese of the Methodist Episcopal church and Mrs. Darlington, is a prisoner of war in Bulgaria. A previous report stated that he had been killed in action.

Miss Mabel Cook, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Cook of Walton and Nicholson Highway left Friday for San Antonia, Texas where she has accepted the position as telephone operator for the Air Corps.

New Haven Homemakers

New Haven Homemakers met with Mr. and Mrs. Jake Cleek Tuesday. The lesson on "Keeping Tools Fit" was given by Mrs. Pennington, Miss Gillaspie and Mrs. Moore. We are to meet with Mrs. George Baker next month at which time we will have our Christmas Party and exchange of gifts. Those present at the meeting Tuesday were: Mrs. Alice Johnson and son Sam, Mrs. Walter Pennington, Mrs. Hazel Sandlin Miss Cora Aylor, Mrs. J. L. Fagan and daughters Judy and Joy, Mrs. Kittie Taylor, Mrs. G. Ransom, Mrs. Harry Moore and Miss Gillaspie.

John Meier Taylor Moved To Naval Flight Preparatory School at Murray, Ky.

St. Louis, Mo.,—Among the 130 "Tarmacs" being transferred from U. S. Naval Air Station, Lambert Field, St. Louis, Mo., to Naval Flight Preparatory School, Murray, Kentucky, is John Meier Taylor son of Mr. and Mrs. George Kenneth Taylor of R. R. 1, Union, Kentucky.

Taylor spent three months at Lambert Field as a seaman, second class, under a new program of the Navy, here he received indoctrination training, military drill, and worked with airplanes on the line.

Following completion of his course at Flight Preparatory School, he will be sent to Pre-Flight School, then to Primary Flight School, and finally to Intermediate School before receiving a commission. The whole program takes from 16 to 18 months.

Private D. E. Weber and Mrs. Weber who have spent several weeks at Wake Forest, N. C. are now at the home of Mrs. Weber's parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Vallandingham on the 3 L Highway. Rev. and Mrs. Geo. S. Caroland were dinner guest of the family Sunday.

Walton Homemakers

The November meeting of the Walton Homemakers was held at the home of Mrs. Ora Fry of south Walton. It was a most satisfactory meeting in every respect. Attendance was good and three new names were added to the membership, making a total of thirty-four.

The president, Mrs. H. F. Mann opened the meeting with the reading of a beautiful poem on "Thanksgiving", which was followed by the singing of "Star Spangled Banner" and the pledge of allegiance. Miss Gillaspie conducted a clinic on "Meat Canning" in which several members took part. The major project, "Conservation of Tools" was well presented by Mrs. J. C. Bedinger. Suggestions for Christmas gifts offered by Miss Gillaspie and by some of the members proved to be a very interesting feature.

An especially appreciated part of the days program was an inspiring talk on "Graditude", by Rev. George S. Caroland, and the reading of Thanksgiving poems by Mrs. Caroland.

The December meeting of the Homemakers will be at the home of Mrs. Alan Gaines on Friday, December 10th.

Farm Slaughtering Important Home Food Supply

The farm slaughtered home meat supply is one of the most important parts of the "Live at Home" or "Make the Farm Feed the Family" program recommended to all farm families last spring according to H. R. Forkner County Agent.

Those farm families who have not grown their own meat supply should buy their animals for slaughter now while the markets are over supplied and prices are relatively low.

Every farm slaughter should use every means to see that meat products are not wasted. Food is important to the war effort. Those who have surplus meat products of any kind should sell them. OPA ration points are to be collected when meat is sold.

The College of Agriculture Circular No. 261, On Killing, Cutting and Curing Pork is available a the County Agent's Office on request.

Farmers Urged To Sell Timber

Farmers with timber suitable for lumber and pulpwood can make a valuable contribution to the war effort this winter by cutting and selling usable trees, says G. C. Ransom Secy of the Boone Sounty Soil Conservation Service District.

War needs for wood are daily becoming more and more pressing. However, if farm woodland owners would cut and sell their marketable trees this winter it would go a long way toward helping relieve the critical wood situation.

It is estimated that in the South 45 percent of the sawlog production comes from farms. Likewise, a survey by the War Production Board indicates that Farm Woodland produce 38 percent of the supply of pulpwood.

With the timber industry hampered by labor and equipment shorages, farm woodlands will have to produce a large part of the growing needs for wood and wood products.

However, Mr. Ransom cautions against ruthless clear cutting of woodland. Woodland owners are being asked to cut and sell their timber now while the need is urgent, he says, but they are also being asked to observe good forestry practices while cutting it.

The Boone County Soil Conservation District urges farmers to cut their trees on a selective basis, removing only mature trees, and diseased, limby, and knotty ones. Such a cutting system will leave ample growing stock for future timber crops.

Farmers no doubt are concerned about the sale of lumber, listed below are a number of log dealers that the Boone County Soil Conservation District have catalouged; Black Walnut—Cincinnati Veneer Co., Cincinnati, Ohio; Acme Veneer Lumber Co., Cincinnati, Ohio; Ohio Veneer Co., 2624 Colerain Ave., Cincinnati, Ohio; The Shoe Boehn Walnut Co., Cincinnati, Ohio; Woods Mosair Co., Louisville, Ky. General Buyers—C. C. Dunlap & Son, Deleware, Ohio; Piqua Handle Co., Piqua, Ohio; Lawrence Thomas, Lebanon, Ohio and E. E. Blottler, Clearing, Ohio.

The Conservation Office also has a list of buyers of White Oak, White Ash, and other general buyers.

No doubt there will never be a time during this generation more profitable to sell your timber, if it is ready for sale. It would be good business to contact some of these buyers. Recently a farmer had some Walnut timber sawed so he could make some gates. Walnut makes fair gates alright, but no doubt the logs would have brought him enough to purchase several ready made gates.

William C. Doane Member Of Marine Photographic Unit

Somewhere in the South Pacific (Delayed)Unsung Heroes! That's the phrase that fits members of the Marine Aviation photographic units in combat areas.

A member of one such outfit is Pharmacist's Mate Second Class William C. Doane, USN, son of Mr. and Mrs. John W. Doane, Route No. 2, Walton, Kentucky. His wife, Mrs. Elizabeth Graves Doane, resides in Frankfort. He has two brothers, Robert and Russel, in the U. S. Army, and a sister, Lucille, is a member of the Women's Army Corps.

A photographic unit is charged with the aerial-mapping of all areas, both ours and the enemy's. The purpose of Doane's unit has been to get the film back to headquarters for study and help in planning attacks on the enemy. Without the aid of films taken by the protographic outfits, many of our victories might have resulted in defeats, or in lives and equipment needlessly sacrificed.

Pharmacist's Mate Second Class Doane was graduated from Union High School, Union. He enlisted March 18, 1942 at Louisville, and received his recruit training at the Naval Training Station, San Diego, Calif. Later he served at the Naval Hospital, San Diego.

Pharmacist's Mate Second Class Doane's unit has had its planes in the air continually since November 5, 1942. It has logged 5499 hours in the air, of which 2514 were in combat.

(The above story was written by Sergeant Benjamin W. Roscoe, III, Los Angles, Calif., a Marine Corps Combat Correspondent).

Mr. and Mrs. Powers Conrad were dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. R. M. Hall Thanksgiving Day.

Union Services Held at Baptist Church Thanksgiving Day.

Union Services were held Thanksgiving morning at the Walton Baptist Church. Rev. C. G. Dearing, pastor of the Methodist Church delivered a very impressive sermon to a very attentive audiance.

Mrs. Sam Hudson presided at the piano and Rev. and Mrs. Geo. Caroland sang a beautiful solo.

We all should be thankful for the many blessings of our Christian County.

Mr. and Mrs. D. K. Johnson entertained with a family dinner Thanksgiving Day. Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Johnson and son Jerry and Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Johnson and Shelia and Susanne of Ft. Mitchell; Mr. and Mrs. William Craycraft and son Robert Clark of Price Hill, Cincinnati; Mrs. Nell Youell and daughters, Rosanne and Jane of Avondale.

Fifty Farm Reservoirs Built In Boone Co.

There have been approximately fifty farm reservoirs or lakes built in the County with bull dozers or power equipment the past month according to H. R. Forkner, County Agent. Eighteen of these ponds were built in Florence and Burlington Communities by the W. L. Harper Construction Company of Cincinnati. The John G. Exterkamp Company of Covington and Vest of Cincinnati have also been operating in Verona, Walton and Union communities. Large numbers of applications of pond building work in Hebron, Constance and Petersburg communities are on file.

Farm Reservoirs, lakes or ponds have proven the cheapest and most practical source of livestock water. All lakes should be constructed with a water tight clay core and should take care of not less than seven feet of water. Small deep lakes are usually more economical than large lakes. A bulletin on farm reservoir construction is available at the county agent's office.

Muskrats have been found damaging a number of lakes in the county. Great damage to the dam will result unless these rodents are elimated.

Paging Santa Claus

by Jane Corby

McCLURE SYNDICATE - W.N.U. FEATURES

Jan Payson sings in the floor show at the Devon Arms. She used to sell magazines there to support her invalid sister, Dora, but Paul Harris discharged her when she was late for work on Thanksgiving. Later, when he found out that the rich William Anthony Deverest knew her, he gave her the leading part in the floor show, thinking that Deverest's interest would bring patronage. Jan, however, thinks Deverest is his own chauffeur, Tony Williams, and he does not dare enlighten her, because she tells him she hates Deverest because of his wealth. Harris is disappointed because the show is not a success, and places the blame on Jan. She decides to ease her mind by telling Tony her troubles.

CHAPTER III

It was the opening she had been waiting for and Jan forced herself to seize it. In halting phrases she told him something of the life she and Dora had led at Mrs. Mallord's. She described Paul's sudden interest in her and her bewilderment as to the cause of it.

But as she reached the point in her narrative where Paul had referred to William Anthony Deverest, she felt him stiffen with new interest. She made herself go on, giving him a complete picture of all that had happened to her that day.

"So you've got to produce William Anthony in person, eh?"

"Oh, Tony, I know that's impossible. But if there was some other way—maybe I could meet somebody else—" she floundered and stopped.

"No, that wouldn't be so good. If they want Deverest, they should have him."

Jan sighed. "Well, I guess Dora and I will just have to forget all about it. I can get a job somewhere else."

"But why," Tony demanded. "You know my boss isn't like a lot of these playboys — he's always avoided publicity like poison. Why, many's the time I've gone to a banquet or a dinner and said I was he. I got away with it, too."

"Tony, you didn't!" Jan could scarcely believe her ears.

"Sure I did. And I'll do it again."

There had been a hundred things to see to before Tony could appear at the Devon Arms. Jan had had a talk with Paul Harris and made it clear to him that there must be no publicity about the appearance of Mr. Deverest. "He absolutely forbids it," she told the hotel manager.

Jan hoped that the fatal night when Tony was to show up at the Devon Arms would never arrive. But it did. If Tony was at the table agreed upon she would die, she knew, and if he wasn't there she would die, too, even more suddenly!

For a moment, as the spotlight caught and held her, she was dazzled and could see nobody. But as the song went on and the other girls took up the chorus, the light shifted, and she could see Tony at the ringside table.

It was because she was staring at him so hard that Jan did not see a girl who was approaching his table until she was suddenly at his side, laughing down at him. Tony pushed back his chair and rose instantly, catching both the hands the girl extended to him in his big brown ones.

It was with an effort that Jan took the solo part again as the voices of the other girls came to a stop. She felt as if she could not make a sound. Her throat was constricted with terror, and she was surprised to hear herself singing the mournful notes of the "blues" song that was Zambrini's special pride.

"Why you stay back here?" inquired Zambrini solemnly. "Go out see Mr. Deverest. Mr. Harris like that. Go on—go on . . . out now." He urged her hastily toward the entrance to the supper room. Mechanically Jan obeyed. This was what their plan had been. She might as well go through with it.

Before Jan was halfway across the room to Tony's table he was on his feet and coming toward her. "You were gorgeous," he whispered, pulling Jan's hand through his arm. He settled her in a chair at the table and sat down in his own, hitching it around so that it would be closer to hers.

"I've ordered supper for you," he said briskly, "we don't have to waste any time over that."

"Oh, Tony," said Jan with a little catch in her voice, "will you lose your job?"

"Why should I?"

"That girl—that girl, half buried in silver fox—won't she tell who you are?"

"You mean Marcia? Did you see her stop here?" said Tony comfortably. "That's Marcia Mayfield, very much Social Register, just out this year. She knows—my boss. Just stopped to ask me when he'll be back in town."

"But won't she tell somebody, maybe Paul Harris, who you are?"

"Oh, no, not Marcia! She's too dizzy, wouldn't waste time gossiping to hotel managers. That girl has enough on her hands trying to marry money her first season. You can forget her. We have just time for once around the floor before the waiter comes. Please . . . it's heavenly dancing with you," he coaxed.

Paul Harris was as nearly effusive as was possible for a man of his habitual restraint to be when he saw Jan in the doorway.

"Come in, come in," he invited. Then as Jan obeyed, "Off to see—somebody?"

"I'm going to see Mr. Deverest off," Jan said, trying to appear casual.

"He's not going away again!" exclaimed Paul.

"Yes, he is." This was harder than she had expected. There was a brief but chilling silence. Jan forced herself to meet the suddenly alert gaze that the manager turned on her. There was disbelief in his penetrating stare which changed, as Jan watched him in fascinated distress, to a sort of icy anger. But when he spoke his voice was controlled as ever.

"Will Mr. Deverest be gone long?" Paul inquired.

"Indefinitely," said Jan. She might as well get this thing settled once and for all.

"You wouldn't by any chance have had a quarrel with Mr. Deverest?" Paul began.

"Well, it wasn't exactly a quarrel," said Jan hastily. "It was a sort of—of disagreement."

"Perhaps there is a new—what the columnists call 'heart throb?' "

Jan colored at his tone. "I don't know," she said shortly. "Really, Mr. Harris . . ."

"Come, come, Miss Payson," Paul was suddenly the practical man of the world. "I don't have to explain to you again that your value to the show is chiefly as a drawing card for Mr. Deverest and his friends. I could have hired a girl who could sing and dance as well, perhaps better than you, at less

"You have a fine boy there, Mrs. Mallord."

salary than I am paying you. I need never have mentioned supplying her with a room in this hotel, much less a whole suite."

Jan hoped she would not cry. She took a firmer grip on the edge of the desk, staring down at the bright blue blotter which covered the top.

"What do you want me to do now?" she asked in a hushed tone.

Paul was silent. When he finally spoke, she felt the icy fingers that clutched her heart beginning slowly to relax.

She and Dora would stay on in the suite they now occupied.

The wardrobe Mary Elizabeth Howard had already provided for her would see Jan through the season, the manager went on. They would also take their meals as before. And in return, Jan was to receive a nominal salary while continuing her work in the floor show.

Jan, stammering a little, managed to thank Mr. Harris and escaped to the street where Tony Williams was waiting, the car drawn up to the curb.

Together they sat in silence, staring gloomily at the people passing on the sidewalk. Then Jan managed to tell him, a little incoherently, about her interview with Paul Harris.

Tony listened with growing interest as Jan outlined the trouble Jack had been in when he and a group of boys broke into the Y.M.C.A. and went swimming in the pool. She was not looking at him as she spoke softly, and did not notice how the man's jaw tightened and his eyes narrowed at her vivid description of Jack's home life and his companions.

"I'd like to see Jack," Tony said, bringing the car to an abrupt halt, "where does he live?"

"Would you really like to go there?" asked Jan doubtfully.

"I think we ought to see what's going on," said Tony. "Sometimes it helps a kid to talk things over with a man who understands his problems."

Jan, vaguely distrustful of the experiment, directed him through the narrow streets that led to her former rooming house. She was still more hesitant when a crowd of boys gathered around the car as they stopped in front of the door.

"Gee, that's Jan Payson!" she heard a voice from the rear of the group say with awe.

"Jack!" she called, as she stepped to the curb. Importantly Jack Mallord shouldered a couple of boys out of his way and sidled forward.

"Jack, is your mother home?" The boy grinned, and made some unintelligible sound that Jan took for an affirmative.

"Well, you tell your mother that I've brought a friend to see her and we want to talk to her and you."

"Aw . . . gee!" Jack protested, his freckled face reflecting his anguish. "You can ankle in there yourself. She ain't doin' nuttin' now. An' I wanna look at de bus."

Tony signaled to Jan to go ahead and invitingly threw open the door of the car to Jack. "All right, fella, hop in!"

Mrs. Mallord, graciously forgetting the troublesome times when Jan and her sister had lived in the apartment upstairs, was delighted to see her visitor. She hastily wiped off a chair and admired Jan's Dary Elizabeth Howard outfit with extravagant but sincere praise.

"Sure, and it's grand to see you looking so well, Miss Payson, and how is your dear sweet sister?"

Jan told her the latest news about Dr. Curtis, and then went on to explain, growing slightly hesitant in face of Mrs. Mallord's undoubted independence, that she had brought Tony over to talk to Jack.

"It's a fine thing to have a smart young man talking to the boys," Mrs. Mallord agreed, to Jan's relief, "but you mustn't be thinking, Miss Payson, that because Jackie got into that little scrape he's a bad boy. A finer boy never lived, though it is my own I'm talking of."

Jan hastened to assure her that Jack would be doing Tony a favor in accepting anything her young man might do. With this view of the matter Mrs. Mallord was more receptive to the idea, and she went back to her original plaint that being in trouble with the law took so much time she had missed attending her uncle's funeral.

Jan, her purpose accomplished, took Mrs. Mallord out to meet Tony. She found him just driving back the expensive car jammed with dirty, gamin faces that were strangely wistful and frankly awed by the perfection of the machine in which they rode. They were a subdued group as they tumbled out of the car and stood in an unmoving circle about it, their eyes fastened fixedly on Tony. He looked pleased and happy and, Jan thought, almost as young as the boys around him.

"You have a fine boy there, Mrs. Mallord. He and I are going to the hockey game tomorrow night if you will let me take him."

Mrs. Mallord, since she did not have to defend her offspring, began apologizing for him. She went on to explain Jackie's goodness of heart as an excuse for his evident lack of polish, and this led to relating how it was that Jackie had had trouble with the law, and the funeral she had missed attending. Jan, worried for fear she would be late, tried to interfere, but Tony seemed strangely interested in the recital, and asked for all sorts of details such as the deceased uncle's name and where he had lived.

"Well, I didn't mean to let you in for all that," Jan said with a little laugh when they finally drove away, "but when Mrs. Mallord starts, it's like a steam roller . . ."

"I enjoyed it."

It didn't seem to Jan that the day was any different from any of the others since her talk with Paul Harris. The morning sunlight, streaming across the deep blue of the sitting room carpet, lay in the same pattern; Dora's smile was just as contented as ever as Jan settled her among the pillows of her chaise longue.

Oh, the blessed relief of these quiet work-filled days! Now that Jan had made it clear that she was not going to be responsible for William Anthony Deverest's appearance at the floor show she felt that life was much brighter.

Making conversation, she remembered to tell her sister what she had heard about the suite being one of the most difficult to rent. Dora's eyes were round with amazement and her definite opinion was that anyone who did not like such a heavenly place must be out of his or her mind. As she spoke, she was lifting her breakfast tray from the table to her knees. Jan watched her in silence, and then commented on it.

"Dora! You lifted that tray so easily. Do you really feel—"

"Oh, I'm well enough—my doctor man has been giving me all sorts of little things to do that I never did before. It was going to be a great surprise for you some day to see me go through my daily dozen all at one time. But I forgot and lifted the tray. I've spoiled the surprise," Dora said sadly.

Jan hugged her so hard that the orange juice and coffee were in grave danger of falling to the floor. She could not speak; her heart was too full for words. But she resolved that if there was ever anything she could do for kindly Dr. Curtis she would never count the cost to herself.

HOUSEHOLD MEMOS... by Lynn Chambers

Leftovers Used With Care Give Tempting Results

Mushrooms, rich in minerals and the B complex vitamins, combine with beef and give a tasty, nutritionally satisfying casserole.

One of the common ways of making meat points stretch their furthest is the habit of buying a large piece of meat and making it do for several meals. In this way, the family can have the pleasure of a roast from a large piece of meat done to succulence, then the homemaker can easily fashion meat dishes for at least 2 or 3 meals out of that which is left.

Unfortunately foods do not taste as good the second day as the first. Flavors seem to fall asleep, the meat becomes dry and insipid, and the family becomes tired of what they sniffingly refer to as leftovers. This needn't be the case if you spend a little time and effort waking up the leftovers and making them just as appetizing as the food in its first form.

Chicken is first-rate when served in these ways:

Country Chicken Loaf.
(Serves 6)
2 cups diced cooked chicken
½ cup chopped cooked carrots
1 cup cooked peas
½ cup chopped celery
1 tablespoon minced pepper
1 cup bread crumbs
¼ cup milk
2 egg yolks, beaten
1 teaspoon lemon juice
1 teaspoon onion juice
1 teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon pepper

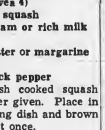
Force chicken, carrots and peas through a food chopper. Add remaining ingredients and place in a greased loaf pan or a ring mold. Bake about 40 minutes in a moderate oven until firm. Serve with cream of mushroom sauce.

Chicken Yorkshire.
(Serves 6)
2 cups diced, cooked chicken
2 eggs
½ cup drippings, melted
1 cup milk
1 cup sifted flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
Leftover gravy

Place chicken in bottom of greased casserole with gravy. Set in oven to heat. Beat eggs, drippings and milk together. Sift dry ingredients together, add to liquid ingredients and beat until free from all lumps. The batter will be quite thin. Pour over chicken and bake at once in moderate (350-degree) oven. Serve from baking dish with gravy.

Meat leftovers, even if they are few, can give a rich meaty taste if they're used in this way:

Meat and Rice au Gratin.
(Serves 6)
2 cups leftover meat, diced
Milk or soup stock
2 cups boiled rice
2 tablespoons fat
½ cup grated cheese
1 teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper

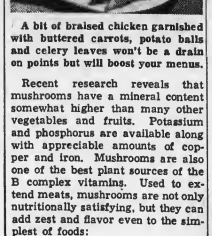


Cut meat into small pieces and moisten with stock or milk. Spread a layer of rice in greased baking dish. Place several pieces of small fat on top and sprinkle with grated cheese. Season with salt and pepper. Add a layer of chopped meat, fat and salt and pepper. Repeat with rice, cheese, etc. Bake in a moderate (350-degree) oven.

Spanish Potatoes.
(Serves 4)
1 tablespoon minced onion
2 tablespoons chopped green pepper
2 tablespoons chopped pimiento
4 tablespoons fat
2 cups diced boiled potatoes
½ cup chopped cooked ham
1 teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon paprika

Saute onion and pepper in fat until cooked soft. Add potatoes, pimiento, ham and seasonings and cook until heated through.

Lamb and Spaghetti Casserole.
(Serves 4)
¼ package spaghetti
1 cup diced cooked lamb
3 tablespoons fat
1½ cups cooked peas, or peas and carrots
½ cup water or stock
1 tablespoon parsley
1½ teaspoons salt
½ teaspoon thyme
½ teaspoon curry powder
1 tablespoon worcestershire sauce
½ cup fine bread crumbs
2 teaspoons butter



Boil spaghetti until half cooked. Brown meat in fat. Line baking dish with half the spaghetti and fill with meat and peas. Combine broth with parsley, thyme and salt, sauce and curry powder and pour over meat. Cover with spaghetti and top with crumbs. Bake ½ hour in moderate oven (350 degrees) and garnish top with lemon slices and parsley.

Squash Puff.
(Serves 4)
2 cups mashed squash
½ cup light cream or rich milk
1 egg, beaten
1 tablespoon butter or margarine
1 teaspoon salt
Few grains black pepper

Drain and mash cooked squash well. Mix in order given. Place in well-greased baking dish and brown in oven. Serve at once.

Note: Use well-drained, thoroughly mashed pumpkin, turnip or sweet potato in place of squash.

A bit of braised chicken garnished with buttered carrots, potato balls and celery leaves won't be a drain on points but will boost your menus.

Recent research reveals that mushrooms have a mineral content somewhat higher than many other vegetables and fruits. Potassium and phosphorus are available along with appreciable amounts of copper and iron. Mushrooms are also one of the best plant sources of the B complex vitamins. Used to extend meats, mushrooms are not only nutritionally satisfying, but they can add zest and flavor even to the simplest of foods:

Casserole of Beef and Mushrooms.
(Serves 6)
1½ to 2 pounds short ribs of beef
Flour, seasoned with salt and pepper
¼ teaspoon thyme
1 tablespoon vinegar
1 cup water
2 stalks celery, chopped
6 scallions
1 8-ounce can mushrooms
1 small onion sliced
2 to 3 carrots, sliced
3 medium-sized potatoes, quartered

Cut short ribs in individual squares and flour them. Brown in a small amount of fat in heavy skillet. Remove to casserole. Add sliced onion, vinegar, thyme, water and drippings in skillet, stirring until well blended; pour over meat. Cover and roast in slow oven (300 degrees) until tender, about 2 hours. Add vegetables and mushrooms with liquid and continue cooking 30 to 40 minutes. Add more water if necessary.

Lynn Says:

Fats Are Important: Fats produce glycerine needed to make munitions. Take home all fat and bone trimmings you pay for with your meat. Fats that you don't use will be bought by some markets.

Accumulated sausage and bacon fat can be used for frying potatoes, eggs, fish, hash, chicken, or even in waffles, cornbread or gravy.

Fats from roasts, chops and steaks can be clarified by heating 4 slices of potato with 1 quart of fat over low heat until fat bubbles. Strain through several thicknesses of cheesecloth and store in light-proof, tightly covered container. Use this clarified fat for making spice and chocolate cakes and cookies.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Group riding is a rubber-saving precedent which is rapidly gaining acceptance. The average number of persons per car throughout the country prior to July 1, 1942, was 2. In six months it jumped to 2.44, and at the beginning of May it had increased to 2.66. The greatest gain has been in rural industrial areas, where the average is now 3.17 persons per car.

Bottled air may be a regular accessory in the postwar automobile, making the car owner independent of roadside stations when emergency tire inflation is necessary. The air bottles, now used by the Army, can be refilled at any air line.

Household Hints

When washing, if a handful of salt is added to the last rinse water, it keeps the clothes from freezing fast to the line.

Change the flavor of gravy by adding a sprinkle of dried dill. Stir vigorously. Will give a tempting and unusual flavor.

A low, firm stool or a hassock placed near the washbowl, enables little children to reach the bowl to wash hands before meals and after toilet.

When washing delicate lace, wrap it around a milk bottle, fasten the end, and dip it up and down in soapy water. Rinse the same way in clear water.

When the word went out that soldiers overseas wanted packages from home—the response was so overwhelming that Uncle Sam reluctantly had to call a halt. Today, due to shipping space, there are Post Office restrictions on packages to overseas Army men—but you can still send packages to soldiers in the U. S., and to Sailors, Marines, and Coast Guardsmen wherever they are. When you do, remember—one of their favorite gifts is cigarettes, and the favorite brand is Camel. Sales records in Post Exchanges and Canteens show that Camel is first choice with men in all the services. So send him that carton of Camels today.—Adv.

THE DIABETIC

Now that it is known that the great majority of diabetics can live for many years, that by watching their diet many with a tendency to diabetes may never need to use insulin, and that diabetes can often be prevented by not allowing oneself to become overweight, it might be thought that we would not hear much more about diabetes.

Dr. Barton

As a matter of fact, the number of diabetics is not decreasing because there are still many individuals overeating and underexercising so that some words of advice from Dr. E. P. Joslin, Boston, should be carefully considered at this time. Dr. Joslin has been the outstanding United States authority on diabetes for many years. Last February he gave the Second Memorial Banting lecture at the University of Toronto, and stated:

"The creation of an individual responsibility in the diabetic has been and remains the keynote of treatment. If the diabetic is not imbued with the necessity, the desire, and the duty to maintain his health, there is little that a doctor can do for him. To a certain degree I welcome this fact because it will mean that the diabetics who live are the desirable diabetics, the good citizens. To a large degree doctors and nurses can do much for careless, ignorant and despondent diabetics but over and above all, the development of the soul of the diabetic and his zeal to be helpful goes along with the treatment of the body."

The diabetic is not accepted for any form of war service, as the need for special diets and the scrupulousness of even slight injuries may cause them to be a liability instead of an asset, but it is pointed out that he can obtain enough food of the kinds he requires—fats and meats—if he does a little thinking and planning. For each ounce of meat he lacks to make up his needs he can substitute fish, cheese, nuts, or an egg, and fowl.

"Moreover, a diabetic should be able among his friends to exchange his sugar ration for a fat ration."

From Dr. Joslin's many cases and from figures of insurance companies, diabetics are "superior" people, more intelligent than the average citizen. They will be needed for present and future planning.

Endurance to Pain Varies in Individuals

The captain of our university football team was brought into my office with an "injured" arm. It was broken and I told him to get into my car and we'd set it under an anaesthetic and X-rays at the hospital.

"Why bother with that, Doctor, you can set it right here."

This player was our intercollegiate boxing champion and an effective defense man in basketball. I told him I admired his pluck but I wanted the X-ray at least.

"Do you know I'm not so plucky; I don't think I feel pain as much as others."

This was true; he was less sensitive to pain than the average individual.

It is only fair, then, as we think about the ability to stand pain to remember that some feel pain sooner and more than others.

In the Canadian Medical Association Journal Dr. E. David Sherman speaks of the various methods of testing individuals to see how soon and how much they feel pain. A series of 450 cases to gauge or measure their sensitivity to pain was tested.

There are three classes of individuals: (a) those who do not feel pain early, (b) those who do feel pain early, and (c) the normal who is neither late nor early in feeling pain.

In those who do not feel pain early (hyposensitive) no wincing or objection to the test occurs even when the high limit of the mercury column is reached. In those who do feel pain early (hypersensitive) pain is felt below 110 points pressure. In the normal group the sensitivity level or first feeling of pain ranges between 110 to 200 points pressure.

1. Women feel pain sooner than men. 2. Seventy-two per cent of women are hypersensitive (feel pain early) and 90 per cent of men are hyposensitive (feel pain late). 3. A group of coal miners and a group of Micmac Indians felt pain much later than other groups.

THE SIN OF COVETOUSNESS

LESSON TEXT—Exodus 20:17; Luke 12:13-25.

GOLDEN TEXT—Thou shalt not covet . . . anything that is thy neighbor's.—Exodus 20:17.

The Ten Commandments (the last one of which we study today) are characterized by their brevity, their comprehensive touch with all of life, and fidelity to the right. But they are also unique and different from all other laws in that they reach into the inner recesses of a man's heart, a realm where only God can judge and act.

This last commandment (against covetousness) emphasizes that point, for it does not expressly require or forbid any act, but deals with the motive of man's action. Man can judge another man's acts, but he cannot judge his motives, desires, or thoughts. God must do that.

But man can, by the grace of God, control his motives; and hence we have this commandment and its interpretation.

I. The Sin—Covetousness (Ex. 20:17).

It may be a surprise to many to learn that coveting—or desiring what belongs to another—is a sin. It has become one of the "respectable sins" accepted in the best circles and practiced by many church people.

As a matter of fact, this sin underlies all the other sins against which the commandments speak. He who has a love for money and an evil desire to have his neighbor's possessions will hate, lie, steal, cheat, kill, in fact, as Dr. Morgan says, "The whole realm of human interrelations is disorganized and broken up by the dishonoring of the tenth commandment."

If you have become a lover of money, or one who longs to have what your friends own, beware. You are in real danger.

II. The Result — A Ruined Life (Luke 12: 13-21).

To have such a spirit makes a man greedy (v. 13), callous and selfish (vv. 17-19), and foolish (v. 20), both regarding this life and that which is to come.

The yardstick of success in the world—for an individual, an organization, or a nation; yes, even for many a church—is the possession of wealth, or property, or other "things." Write it in large letters on the hearts and minds of our boys and girls, "A man's life consisteth not in the abundance of the things which he possesseth" (v. 15).

The one who was known to his friends (and to himself) as "a rich man" (v. 16), but whom God knew as a "fool" (v. 20), had more than he could use for himself. He had to build new and bigger barns, and could not see the "barns" that were already prepared, for, as Ambrose says, "Thou hast barns—the bosoms of the needy, the houses of widows, the mouths of orphans and infants."

He was a fool who loved money for himself. One wonders what he had to say for himself when that very night he was called into the presence of God to give an account of his stewardship (v. 20). If you are similarly situated and have the same attitude, what will you say in that day?

An important point which we must note is that Jesus expressly repudiated the connecting of His name with the so-called "social gospel" in His reply (v. 14).

III. The Cure—Trust in God (Luke 12:22-25).

Because covetousness destroys the best in life, we ought to shun it like poison. The best antidote (or cure) if we have been poisoned by it is to go all-out in our trust and confidence in God.

We who are children of God are to take no anxious thought for the morrow. This does not forbid proper preparation and forethought, but it does rule out fretful anxiety. The reasons are very clear and cogent.

First of all, while food and clothing are important, they are not of first importance. The vital thing is that one have life. Otherwise things are useless (v. 23). We must keep our sense of proportion, of relative values.

Then too, God is the One who must care for every one of us. And He does care for us! Why not trust Him? He cares for all creation; can He not care for you? If then you trust the all-powerful One, what occasion is there for worry, or covetousness?

And finally comes the devastating argument. Worry never accomplished anything. Anxiety does not help anyone, anytime, anywhere. So why be anxious?

It is clear then that a desire for that which belongs to others is a sin which destroys man's happiness and usefulness. It is needless—as is all anxiety—because only God can provide, and He will provide if we trust Him.

Life becomes simple, pleasant, useful, confident, yes, really Christian, when we get our eyes off things and on the Lord.

The Japs were wrong

Let's keep them wrong!

The Japs were wrong.

Cutting off our rubber supply in the Pacific didn't take us out of the war—or even slow us up.

For Government, the Rubber Director, the rubber industry, and the petroleum, chemical, and alcohol industries pooled their patents and ideas, worked together, and accomplished the seemingly impossible.

Today, there is no shadow of a doubt that our planes will continue to fly, our ships to sail, our tanks to roll.

For America now has nearly enough rubber to meet our essential needs!

But our tire worries are still here!

The American people saw the new synthetic rubber plants spring up like mushrooms. They heard of large-scale production of synthetic rubber. And they applauded. Unfortunately, they also jumped to the conclusion that they could stop worrying about tires!

It is true that the RUBBER supply crisis is past. But the long-expected TIRE shortage is with us!

"But," you may say, "how can this be when thousands of tons of Government synthetic rubber are being made . . . when such a tremendous tonnage of rubber products is being turned out, as well as more airplane and truck tires than ever before."

One reason is that—as the Baruch Committee foresaw—few tires could be manufactured until our synthetic rubber supply was well on the way. This resulted in millions of tires going out of use at a time when there were no replacements. Meanwhile, tires left in service have less mileage in them, and prewar inventories are gone.

Another reason is that our military needs are far greater than anyone anticipated.

Also, the rubber companies are using a lot of their machinery and manpower to turn out life rafts, bullet-sealing fuel tanks, and hundreds of other urgently-needed army and navy products, in addition to tires.

And you should know that half of today's requirements are for large-size, heavy-duty bus, truck, artillery, airplane, and combat tires, requiring much more labor and materials than peacetime products.

Finally, the tire industry, like every industry today, is feeling the manpower shortage, and there just aren't enough hands for the job.

Face up on the table!

These problems will be overcome when our enemies are overcome. Meanwhile, we want to put our cards face up on the table.

We've told you frankly why there is a serious tire shortage. Now we want you, and every other American who owns a set of tires, to know that this country's transportation system can still suffer a serious blow . . . unless you make it your personal duty to take care of the tires you now own.

How to make tires last longer

Do no unnecessary driving.

Live up to the Government regulation—don't exceed 35 miles an hour.

Keep your tires inflated up to recommended pressure, and check them every week.

Avoid hitting holes in the road, or bruising your tires on curbs or stones. Don't start or stop suddenly. Slow down for sharp corners.

See that your wheels and axles are in line.

Switch your tires from wheel to wheel every five thousand miles, and have them inspected regularly for removal of foreign objects and repair of cuts.

And . . . most important of all . . . recap your tires as soon as they become smooth.

HOW GOOD ARE PASSENGER CAR TIRES OF SYNTHETIC RUBBER?

It may be a long time before all civilians can get synthetic rubber tires. Meanwhile, if you should be one of the few who do get them, you will want this information:

Synthetic rubber tires for passenger cars are good tires, and will give you satisfactory service if you take care of them.

You should not think of synthetic rubber tires as improved tires . . . but as emergency tires. And remember that they have not yet had time to prove what they can do.

It is beside the point to theorize on how they would react to the phenomenally high speeds of prewar days. Every patriotic American knows that tire treads . . . all tire treads . . . wear out faster at high speeds, and so drives at today's recommended speed of 35 miles an hour.

As time goes on, we will learn more about the effects of under-inflation of rough roads, and of other abuses. They damage all tires. Indications are that they do proportionately more harm to synthetic rubber tires.

Meanwhile, all tires are rationed to you in trust for the nation, and it is your duty to take every possible care of them, to avoid misuse and prevent abuse.

As experience teaches us more and more about synthetic rubber tires, we will pass the information along to you. Meantime, play safe. Be careful!

If you use synthetic rubber tubes, be sure they are properly installed. They should be put into the tire, then inflated, deflated, and inflated again. And they should never be mounted on rusty rims.

TRUCK AND BUS TIRES ARE A DIFFERENT STORY

Truck and bus tires, being larger and heavier, generate more heat. They are given long, hard usage on all kinds of highways. They are all too frequently overloaded.

Frankly, today's synthetic rubber bus and truck tires will not stand the abuse that prewar tires would stand, especially overloading. Progress is being made daily—but overloading which would have damaged a prewar tire can ruin today's synthetic tire.

The Tire Industry is doing its utmost to solve the serious problem of providing the nation's trucks and buses with satisfactory tires in sufficient quantities.

But until this problem is solved, a dangerous threat exists to America's most vital transportation.

Therefore, while treads of present truck and bus tires are immensely important . . . the carcasses of these tires have a value beyond all price to America, and to America's truck and bus operators!

Unless tires now in use are made to last, these two essential services will almost certainly break down!

These tires . . . every one of them . . . must be recapped the instant the tread wears smooth . . . before any damage is done to the carcass.

They must be recapped not once, but again and again! High speeds must be done away with . . . especially on hot roads. Overloads must be avoided. Tires must be properly inflated at all times.

The responsibility to take care of these tires . . . to make them last as long as possible . . . is a vital necessity! It must be shouldered by all operators, by all drivers, by all garage men!

No American can fail to heed this warning! The situation is so serious that it is recognized in a new tire warranty. But the real job is to conserve all tires now in use!

A new warranty—

With conditions as they are, and synthetic rubber in its present stage of development, a new tire warranty has become necessary and has been adopted. It applies to all tires. Under its terms, injuries such as bruises, body breaks, cuts, snags, and heat failures as well as tread wear are not subject to adjustment consideration.

Nor are injuries or failures which result from improper tire care or misuse or abuse. This includes failure as a result of overload, excess speed, improper inflation, or other non-defective conditions. Or when tires are used on rims not conforming to Tire and Rim Association Standards.

Don't forget that everyone . . . the Tire Industry, the Rubber Director, and many others, are working together with all their energy, as they have worked from the beginning, to keep America rolling.

And remember that, while the Japs were wrong ...you must help keep them wrong! Take care of the tires you now have!

STAFFORDSBURG

Having received word that her sister, Mrs. Nora Ervin had been paralyzed, Mrs. W. E. Hanna went to see her on Thursday. She found her slighlly improved and a phone call Sunday evening told that she is regaining many of her faculties.

The many friends and relatives of Mrs. Margaret Mills, formerly of this community were saddened by her passing away at her home in Latonia on Friday night. She had suffered much, having been an invalid for many years. She was tenderly cared for by her only daughter, Mrs. Urban Powers. Many friends visited on Sunday at the funeral home where she lay in state. Funeral services were held at Holy Cross Church Monday at 9 o'clock.

She had a cheerful and friendly disposition, she counted her friends by the score and will be missed by them all, but none would stay her from passing to the land where pain and sorrow never come. She leaves besides her daughter, four brothers and one sister.

Mr. and Mrs. L. J. Rapp had as guests on Sunday, Mr. and Mrs. Chester Rapp and son, Chester Stephens.

Mr. and Mrs. L. M. Denser attended the broadcast of "The Lutheran Hour" from Netherland Plaza on Sunday afternoon after which they visited a relative in Madisonville.

Mr. and Mrs. Dawson Ballinger had as guest on Sunday evening Mrs Daisy Richardson, Miss Helen Richardson, Mr. and Mrs. Chester Ballinger, Mrs. Morris Wharton, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Kenney and Donald Keeney.

Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Keeney had as guests on Thanksgiving, her mother and sisters, Mrs. J. N. Stephens and Misses Alma and Mary Stephens.

Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Hanna were guests on Sunday of Mr. and Mrs. Harley Hann, celebratig Harley's birthday.

Some of the "regulars" were missed from Sunday School. We missed you, don't stay away.

Preaching services Sunday evening, December 5th, at 7 p. m.

Mrs. Daisy Richardson and daughter, Helen visited on Sunday afternoon, Mr. and Mrs. Earl Richardson who had also as a guest, Mr. Gilbert Richardson who is now at Falmouth on some special work.

STEPHENSON MILL ROAD

"Enter into His gates with thanksgiving, and into his courts with praise: be thankful unto him and bless his name." Psalm 100:4.

Mrs. Levi Pennington and daughter, Lucy are spending a few day with relatives in Dayton, Ohio.

Julia Ann the small daughter of Mr. and Mrs. "Buster" Day has been ill but is improved at this writing.

The family of Mr. and Mrs. Levi Pennington again spent an enjoyable time together on Thanksgiving Day. A delicious dinner was served at the noon hour and those present were: Mr. and Mrs. Curtiss Pennington and daughters, Joanne and Vickie Sue, Mr. and Mrs. Amos Pennington and daughter Julia Carroll of Dayton, Ohio, Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Pennington and sons, David and Raymond Jr. of Alexandria; Leon, Lucy and Jimmie Pennington, Mr. and Mrs. H. G. Pennington and daughter Virgie and Miss Virgie Martin of Norwood, Ohio, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Ferguson and sons, Junior and Ray of Crittenden and the host and hostess, Mr. and Mrs. Levi Pennington.

NICHOLSON

"If any man thirst let him come unto me and drink." Turn to the Lord and know the sweetness of sins forgiven. Simple faith in Him is God's plan for the redemption of mankind. Eternity lies beyond where each of us must face God and give an account of our stewardship.

On Thanksgiving evening Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Rankin and daughter, Mrs. Bryson Fisk enjoyed a lovely turkey dinner with relatives near Walton.

Mrs. John Klein paid a pleasant call Wednesday morning, and heartiest thanks are extended for her kindness.

Mrs. John Riggs was a recent pleasant caller and her kind thoughtfulness is deeply appreciated.

Mrs. Joseph Maddox plesantly called last week. Most heartily do we thank her for lovely gifts, including luscious California grapes.

Mr Bolen was called to Parkersburg, West Va., last week by the death of his father. Deepest sympathy of many friends is extended in the bereavement that has befallen him.

Mrs. J. L. Pickett, Mrs. Thomas McClure, Miss Dotty Settle and Junior Weldon were dinner guests of Mrs. C. O. Morgan and family Thursday evening.

WE MUST ALL PULL TOGETHER!

Never before have American farmers had so many millions of human beings directly dependent upon them for vital foodstuffs.

Whatever the production obstacles, more food will be produced and more hungry mouths will be fed if we all pull together.

Cooperating, conserving, sharing . . . fighting to get 100% results . . . that is how we can pull together toward the success on the home front that brings VICTORY on the fighting front.

Remember that your WAYNE Feed Dealer is a friend pledged to pull with you whole-heartedly, and supply you with every possible pound of needed protective and supplemental feed.

The Present for The Future

HERE'S ONE GIFT that won't be returned or exchanged, one gift that's "just what everyone wants."

It says "Well done" to your secretary, "I miss you" to your mother, and "I love you" to your wife. It's as sentimental as moonlight, as practical as a pillow, as well-bred as a calling card.

It takes only a minute to buy . . . and we always have plenty in stock. And if someone else thinks of the same thing, that's fine. Everyone collects them.

There is a size to fit everyone . . . a price for every purse. Its color is a cheerful Christmas-y green . . . universally becoming to young and old. It will be especially engraved with name and address (at no extra charge), and is made from the finest materials . . . guaranteed to last ten years . . .and much longer.

It is one of those rare gifts that grow more valuable with the passing years.

Best of all, it helps pay for a soldier's Christmas . . . for the ships that bring him food and clothing and weapons, for the planes that watch over him, for the science and skill that guard his life. It's the gift that will bring peace on earth, good will to men . . . sooner.

Yes, this Christmas, there's no finer present than a War Bond for every one on your list!

POST WAR PLANS

" Man proposes and God disposes." Fellow citizens of this dear old commonwealth of ours. We know this is a war between Christian ideals and pagan forces. We must plan now with God's guidance to make our homes what our boys and girls want them to be when they win the victory. You know and I know the greatest evil in our midst is alcoholic beverages. Listen to the voice of "Temperence" over WHAS every a. m. at 6:30, Sam Morris. Will revenue from this destroying curse in our Nation, pay you for the destruction of our precious boys and girls? Thing on these things and act quickly.

Join our W. C. T. U. and help us to do our part to gain Victory over this deadly evil.

WARTIME SAVINGS SUGGESTIONS for Electric Appliance Users

Seven Ways to Eliminate Waste in Home Lighting

- Turn off lights in unoccupied rooms. Wasting light not only wastes electricity but critical materials used in manufacturing lamp bulbs as well.
- Watch lights in closets, attic, porches, basement and garage. It's easy to forget and leave them burning.
- Rearrange furniture so one reading lamp can serve two or more people at the same time. But be sure lamp is not too far away from either person.
- Eliminate use of wall brackets and other strictly ornamental lighting.
- Switch three-light lamps to lowest level when not being used for reading, sewing or other close visual tasks.
- Use low-wattage bulbs in closets, halls and other places where bright light is not needed.
- Keep bulbs, shades and diffusing bowls clean. Dust and dirt waste light.

Uncle Sam Says:
Waste of anything in wartime is a crime. Don't waste electricity just because it isn't rationed. Wasting electricity involves a waste of fuel, transportation facilities, manpower and critical materials needed elsewhere in the war effort. Use all the electricity you need—but need what you use.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

First U. S. Landings on Gilbert Islands Reveal New Strategy in Jap Campaign; Diplomacy Claims European Spotlight; Chinese Battle for Provincial Capital

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

Gilberts—Landing under cover of the booming guns of American warships, U. S. army and marine forces swarmed ashore on Tarawa, Makin and Apamama in the Gilbert islands and pushed back the Japs in stiff fighting, amid coconut palms and jungle brush.

Midway between Hawaii and Australia, the Gilberts lie astride U. S. communication lines to the South Pacific area. Consisting of numerous islets, Tarawa, Makin and Apamama are fronted on their western sides with sunken reefs, sandsplits and coral patches; but on the east, ships can approach within a half-mile or mile from shore.

As U. S. troops poured ashore, Japanese artillery sought to break up landing formations. On the islets themselves, Jap machine gunners operated from pill box defenses hidden in the dense foliage against advancing U. S. infantry.

DADS' DRAFT:
Slowed Again

To President Roosevelt's desk for signature went a senate-house bill which would put all fathers in the U. S. at the bottom of the draft list by requiring the induction of all eligible single men first.

Approved by voice votes of both legislative chambers, the bill also would abolish the present practice of drafting men according to their employment in essential and non-essential industry classifications set up by the War Manpower commission.

The bill provides for the review of any occupational deferments by the appeals board within the district where the person works, and would establish a special medical commission to study the possibility of lowering physical standards of the services.

WHEAT:
Loan Stocks Down

Through the second week of November, 117,677,380 bushels of 1943 wheat were under government loan, as the feed situation remained tight with many areas in the corn belt unable to produce sufficient stocks to meet needs.

The loan figures compared with 312,884,567 bushels held by the government at the same time last year. Of the current stocks, 37,339,271 bushels were on farms. With market prices at practically all terminals favorable for redemption, more than 2½ million bushels of 1943 loans have been liquidated.

To counter the tight feed situation, an Iowa State college bulletin suggested marketing pigs at 200 to 220 pounds this fall instead of 270 pounds to assure maintenance of hog numbers next spring.

INDEPENDENCE:
For Lebanon, Syria

Under League of Nations mandate, France was entrusted with supervision over the small countries of Lebanon and Syria, to the north of the Holy Land.

When Gen. Charles de Gaulle's Free French took over these territories in 1941 with British aid, they promised their people they would grant them independence. But when the Lebanese took matters into their own hands recently and revised their constitution to accomplish their freedom, the Free French's resident supervisor disbanded the government and placed the president and premier under arrest.

Gen. Georges Catroux

Rioting ensued, and to Lebanon's ancient capital of Beirut flew Free France's No. 1 trouble-shooter, Gen. Georges Catroux, Lebanon's officials were released, and not only Lebanon, but also Syria, was told that Free France would enter into negotiations for their independence.

MEDITERRANEAN:
Turkey in Picture

As the Allied attack slowed before the Nazis' strong mountain line some 85 miles south of Rome, attention in the Mediterranean area was focused on the diplomatic front, where Turkey maintained its delicate relations with both sides.

Following conversations between representatives of the two governments in Cairo, Turkey reaffirmed her military alliance with Great Britain, calling on either nation to help the other in case of attack in the Mediterranean area. Turkey's entrance into the war would give the Allies a stepping stone into eastern Greece and eliminate complex sea operations against the country, but the question appeared to be whether the wily Turks would consider an Allied offensive as a protection of their interests, putting the alliance into effect.

In Jugoslavia, guerrillas continued vexing operations against German communication lines and industries supplying the Nazis with war materials.

On the Continent, 1,000 RAF heavy bombers struck at Berlin, firing every section of the German capital of 5,000,000, and disrupting gas, electricity and street car facilities.

CHINA:
Japs Attack

Toward Hunan province's capital of Changsha, two columns of a Japanese force of 80,000 men launched a determined attack, making progress in early fighting.

The attack marked the Japs' fourth major effort to take Changsha, the other campaigns failing when wily Chinese commanders struck at the enemy's extended lines in the Siang valley to the north.

This time, however, the Japs made every attempt to bull their way through, massing men and material and using bombers to smash at Chinese defensive positions.

To counter the Jap attack, the Chinese sprung a drive through the mountains to the rear of the fighting, designed to relieve pressure on their main front.

WAR PRODUCTION:
Experience Counts

Because of better management, greater effort by labor and more trained workers, U. S. arms output in October registered its biggest gain since last April, the War Production board said.

Stimulated by its experience, U. S. industry can now be expected to function at peak efficiency, WPB declared, with this efficiency mostly accounting for increases in production, since a limit has been practically reached on material and manpower.

During October, WPB said, stress was laid on output of aircraft, which showed a 10 per cent increase over September; ships, up 5 per cent; ammunition, up 11 per cent, and communications equipment, including radar, up 9 per cent.

MORAL STANDARDS:
Demand High Level

To molders of public opinion, the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America appealed for leadership in maintaining the highest sex standards and impressing the dignity with which men and women are endowed as custodians of the home.

Protesting against the exploitation of material in newspapers and magazines which degrades thought and emotion, the council lashed against the portrayal of the human body in ways detractive to the reverence in which men and women should be held as creators of homes and guardians of the sacredness of family life.

Demanding strict enforcement of laws against sexual promiscuity and commercialized prostitution, the council said venereal diseases have rendered "millions of American men and women unable to serve their country as they ought."

The desert's warm, shifting sands have covered historic battlefields of World War II in North Africa, with only faint traces of tank and artillery tracks remaining, and these mostly in scarred green vegetation.

OIL:
U. S. Offers Leases

To capitalize on the 17,000,000 barrels of oil and gas underlying the Cerritos channel between Los Angeles and Long Beach, Calif., the U. S. government invited private operators to submit bids for leasing privileges to develop the properties.

Besides obtaining a bonus for use of the land, the U. S. will also receive a royalty of 16⅔ per cent on production from the area. Under terms, 10 wells must be drilled to production within 12 months, and six more within 18 months of delivery of the lease.

Highest bonus ever paid for drilling oil on federal lands was $1,407,500 for 262½ acres in the Elk basin field in Wyoming.

U. S. PAYROLL:
Lop Off 131,058

During the period from June to September of this year, 131,058 employees were lopped off the federal payroll, Senator Harry F. Byrd, Va., revealed as chairman of the joint economy committee. This left 2,964,405 still at work for Uncle Sam.

Senator Harry Byrd

The total discharged amounted to 157,997, but the figure was brought down by the navy's employment of 15,314 new workers, and an increase of 7,920 in the post office's personnel.

The war department trimmed its payroll by 139,968; the War Manpower commission by 11,931; the Panama canal by 3,548, and the agriculture department by 2,550.

RUSSIA:
Nazis Hit Back

Duplicating their tactics used at Kharkov last winter, the Nazis struck at the Reds' extended positions at the important rail junction of Zhitomir and hurled them back 20 miles to the east in heavy fighting.

As Field Marshal Fritz von Manstein's 150,000 troops attacked near Zhitomir, the Russ sought to ease pressure on their lines in this sector by intensifying their drive to the north near Gomel, within 100 miles of the old Polish border.

As the Nazi forces held fast to the iron and manganese centers of Krivoi Rog and Nikopol in the south, the Reds probed the enemy's lines on either side of these strongholds, in an effort to find a weak spot for a break-through.

Fighting Russian units on the east coast, the Nazis clung to the Crimea, which dominates the Black sea.

WAR LOAN:
To Begin 4th Drive

With the third war loan drive well over its goal of 15 billion dollars, the U. S. treasury announced plans for a fourth drive beginning January 18.

Although the 14 billion dollar goal of the new drive is below the last mark, individual investors will be asked to contribute 5¼ billion dollars, more than they were requested to do during the third campaign.

To meet investment requirements, savings deposit departments of commercial banks will be allowed to purchase limited quantities of a 2½ per cent issue maturing in 1970, and a 2¼ per cent security due in 1959.

To sell as many securities as possible with current purchasing power, the government will ask banks to refrain from loaning money for speculative purchases.

PROFITEERING

Almost two-thirds of the nation's farmers believe that manufacturing companies are making "excessive profits" on war orders, a survey taken by the Association of National Advertisers reveals. Results of interviews of 2,800 typical farmers, divided into seven classes, showed that 60 per cent think that profiteering is going on, although 75 per cent of the group are of the opinion that industry is doing a "reasonably good job." Seventy per cent stated that labor could do better.

International Unity Aided By Moscow Conference

Results of Famed Tripartite Meeting Continue to Grow; Spirit of Compromise Achieved in Moscow.

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, Union Trust Building Washington, D. C.

Some weeks before Secretary Hull left for his Mission to Moscow, I interviewed him in his office in the state department. Shortly after he returned, he received a number of us in that same office and gave us an informal talk about his trip.

One of the things which impressed me greatly as I heard the secretary in the course of the hour-long meeting, telling us sidelights on his remarkable experience, was the way one word which he had used in his talk with me kept cropping up again and again. It was the word "understanding." He applied it to personal relationships and exchanges between the members of the tripartite meeting and to the whole discussion and the decisions which grew out of it.

It seemed to be a case of progressive understanding.

In our first conversation, the secretary, indicating the papers which covered his great desk, said they all dealt with Russia. I did not know then that there was to be a Moscow meeting. And he made the point with considerable emphasis, that there was so much suspicion on the part of persons discussing the Russian situation that it was exceedingly hard to work toward an agreement.

Open Discussion

Then, in his talk on his return, he repeated this thought, saying that many people, because of their deep prejudices, had made it hard to bring about an understanding between the three nations. He said that when he left for Moscow, he felt that much of the misunderstanding was due to misinformation which all the parties shared concerning the others. In order to correct that, every effort was made at frank and open discussion and, as a result, questions which had been considered most difficult to solve automatically disappeared.

And the secretary pointed out that as the conference progressed many points immediately developed where what might be called the "selfish interests" of each nation were discovered to be common interests.

He explained how military co-operation had been achieved as the need for it grew and how, with this development, it became clear that similar co-operation must be established along political and economic lines, especially regarding an international organization to preserve peace.

The secretary set off for Moscow under a hail of attack from one section of the press which labeled him "anti-Russian." If there ever was justice in such a charge, which Mr. Hull emphatically denied, he came back with no such feeling. In fact, he made it clear that he was now convinced that few countries had more in common and less in conflict, especially in the economic field.

Unconvinced

Although all of the official statements issued in Moscow and in London and Washington after the delegates had returned to their respective homes, stressed the accomplishments of the conference, their importance and the probability of their effect on future negotiations, still there were those who chose to see great gaps yawning and unbridged between the three nations.

Of course, only time can tell how thorough the common understanding really is and how far the respective nations will be able to go to hold to a unity of purpose through the stormy times ahead. But there have already been evidences that a spirit of compromise was achieved which did bear actual fruit.

This was true in the case of Italy. Some time ago, a magazine article appeared which purported to outline the plan by which the countries liberated from Axis domination would be governed by the successful Allies. The plan was a pretty rigid one, with the AMG (Allied Military Government) seeming to be rooted deeply into the governmental fabric of the liberated nations. There was criticism here to the effect that the United States was taking on the responsibility of running the world and it was predicted that there could never be an agreement between three victors, one with a hereditary monarch, Britain; one with a communistic form of government, Russia; and one, a democratic republic, the United States.

The test came in Italy. After the parleys at Moscow, the AMG was limited in its functions, taking over only the districts nearest the front. An Allied military commission was formed which is making maximum use of the local native civilian officials.

Italian Government

But what about the government which the Allies would accept as satisfactorily representing the will of the Italian people? Surely Britain would demand that monarchy be given a chance to remain in power. Surely Russia would have no traffic with kings and would instead demand a strong left-wing set-up.

The supposed American compromise was a temporary regency, that is, a liberal regent such as Count Carlo Sforza who was in exile from the Fascist regime and who left America shortly after the surrender of Italy. The little son of the crown prince would remain the symbolic head of the state. Many said that neither Russia nor Britain would accept this suggestion.

However, although no definite step has been taken, semi-official sources have indicated that when Rome is recaptured and Marshal Badoglio, now premier, steps out, there will be virtual agreement on the part of the three victor nations on the American compromise. All that remains will be an agreement on the part of the Italian people. Even if the latter is not achieved, there is evidence enough already of tripartite compromise and unity to seem to confirm the success of the Mission to Moscow.

Economic Questions

The ways and means committee of the house has only been able to agree on methods of raising one-fifth of the money which the government says it is necessary to have to continue the war. Not only has it been unwilling to tax the higher brackets further but it also is afraid to recommend the sales tax because that affects the largest group of voters—everybody.

Naturally the first thing that a citizen leaps to defend is his pocketbook. The administration has attempted to lay down as a goal a maximum net income of $25,000 in wartime, perhaps twice as much in peacetime. Now perhaps the American people don't want to put any limit whatever on incentive. Nevertheless, there is always an outcry against the accumulation of wealth and we know that when wealth becomes concentrated, panics result.

If the various influences resisting taxation which will bring down their ceiling on incomes succeed in forcing congress to defeat such laws, and granted, the rest of the people accept the defeat, democracy is not to blame. The selfish group has won—but it has won, not because congress wants to please a few voters but because congress has been convinced that the special interests are represented by a majority of voters—in other words, the majority wins.

Another current issue which is very much before congress is the threat to little business. Right now, 70 per cent of the war contracts are held by about 100 firms.

Senator O'Mahoney is proposing a measure which would produce an incentive on the part of the investors, that is, those with large capitals to spend, to invest in small rather than large business; that would be done by making taxes on big business so heavy that the profits resulting to the investor would not be as large as if he had his money in small business.

Small business has to be protected, it is admitted, if free enterprise in America is to continue. If any single group or groups manage to convince the elected officials of the country that they can muster enough votes to defeat the people who are responsible for such a tax plan, it is obvious that the majority's will will be frustrated. There again it goes back to the individual. Individuals who do not vote destroy the democratic processes by permitting a minority of the people to become the majority of the voters.

BRIEFS . . . by Baukhage

Declaring that the German regime in Austria is opposed by practically everybody, the Swedish newspaper Nya Dagligt Allehanda reports that Austrians are now greeting each other with the salute "K D F," a pun on the German expression "Kraft Durch Freude" ("Strength Through Joy"). "K D F," the paper said, stands for "Kaputt Durch Fuehrer" ("Defeat Through the Fuehrer").

WPB has directed manufacturers of flashlight batteries to distribute approximately 20 per cent of their fourth-quarter production to farmers to assist them in the care of young stock during the winter months.

Even under joint rationing, American kitchens will use enough tin cans in one year to provide steel for almost 23,000 medium tanks or 900 destroyers.

Kidneys Must Work Well-

For You To Feel Well

24 hours every day, 7 days every week, never stopping, the kidneys filter waste matter from the blood.

If more people were aware of how the kidneys must constantly remove surplus fluid, excess acids and other waste matter that cannot stay in the blood without injury to health, there would be better understanding of why the whole system is upset when kidneys fail to function properly.

Burning, scanty or too frequent urination sometimes warns that something is wrong. You may suffer nagging backache, headaches, dizziness, rheumatic pains, swelling, getting up at nights, swelling.

Why not try Doan's Pills? You will be using a medicine recommended the country over. Doan's stimulate the function of the kidneys and help them to flush out poisonous waste from the blood. They contain nothing harmful. Get Doan's today. Use with confidence. At all drug stores.

DOAN'S PILLS

HELP REDUCE AMERICA'S WASTE LINE

It is obvious that a vigorous and concerted drive is needed to reduce this criminal wastage of food. The biggest objective of this food conservation campaign is to make every one of us realize the importance of the little bits and driblets of food we waste. Few families throw food away in pound or quart or bushel lots. Because our food waste is divided into such small quantities and is concealed in our food-management practices, we are likely to over-look our own share of responsibility for it. But our garbage cans tell the tale. Week after week they continue to fill up. And every family knows the problem that results if the garbage collection should be a day or so late. Only by preventing food waste in ounces can we save the millions of tons they cumulatively represent.

The over-all national drive against food waste is just getting under way. It will undoubtedly change, develop, and expand as it goes on. Since food conservation is something new on the American scene, the methods have to be worked out and refined as the problems are met. Every community will have its own problems of food waste, and it will be up to local leaders to devise solutions that will work. Meanwhile, there are various food conservation projects in which every local community has a part to play.

The Clean Plate Club

Test campaigns are being conducted in some sections of the country to develop a "clean plate pledge" campaign. Local clubs can lend their support by giving it publicity and by pledging their membership to clean up their plates at every meal. Essay contests and radio programs may become intergral parts of this campaign in many areas. These contests and programs will need to be organized and sponsored by responsible clubs.

School Food Conservation Program

Through the U. S. Office of Education and State department of education, elementary and high schools all over the country are being asked to introduce into the curriculum, wherever they properly can, studies of food wastage and food conservation measures. Elementary and high school pupils will be making food conservation posters, writing essays, and giving speeches on how to save food, and producing food conservation plays and programs. There will be many ways in which clubs can encourage and assist the schools in making these projects effective.

Rodent And Insect Control

Rats are estimated to destroy 189 million dollars' worth of food every year. They are also a constant threat as disease carriers. Insects are reported to damage growing crops and food in storage (including food in the pantries of homes) to the extent of well over a billion dollars a year. The poisons and insecticides with which these pests are commonly attacked are considerably reduced because of the war. For this reason there must be an intensification of trapping, rat-proofing, and sanitation efforts to deal with these meanaces to health and food supplies. Representatives of the United States Bureau of Entomology, Extension Service, Fish and Wild Life Service and Public Health Service have long waged war on these pests. How they are intensifying their program of eradication and are calling upon youth groups especially to aid them in reducing this cause of food loss to the minimum. Local clubs can support this work.

Adjustment Of Wasteful Eating Habits

Food prejudices, dislike of "left-overs," and even our table manners, result in much food waste. These problems are largely individual matters, but they are matters in which the individual needs to be supported by general agreement. Under present circumstances, in a public eating place, or as a guest in someone's home, it takes courage to squeeze your grapefruit, or tip your soup bowl to get the last drops, or pursue the last peas with a teaspoon, or mop up the meat juices with a piece of bread, or pick up a bone to gnaw off the last shreds of meat. Yet by a concerted attack upon he social prohibitions, such practices can become normal wartime table manners.

For Conservation Information

Many housewives need instruction in the best means of storing, preparing, and service food, in menu planning, and in wise buying. Increasingly such food conservation information is appearing in women's magazines, in the food columns of daily newspapers, and in the advertising of food compaines. Home economists and food demonstration agents are doing much to educate housewives along these lines. Many clubs may well make such food conservation topics the basis for study and discussion groups. Members may exchange information and economy tips. Lecturers may be invited to address public meetings. Clubs may sponsor demonstrations of proper methods of preparing nutritious meals and of storing, preparing, cooking, and serving food in order to prevent waste. Literature may be obtained from the Food Distribution Administration, War Food Administration Washington 25, D. C.

Harvesting Crops

The shortage of farm labor makes it virtually certain that some of our 1943 food production will go unharvested unless the problem is met vigourosly in every community. Local clubs can aid greatly by encouraging their members to enlist in this work for as many days or weeks as possible. Many will want to join the United States Crop Corps. Berries and fruits growing wild on vacant lots are another potential source of food which requires organized action to recover effectively. Clubs can take on this work. The School Lunch program is a worth-while outlet for crops that are in plentiful supply and which housewives can pick and preserve cooperatively. It is one way to assure the youngsters food for their lunches next year. In all these activities the general rule should be to see to it that every scrap of usable food is harvested and utilized.

We hope that these articles have been of some value and that perhaps a few leaders of clubs etc., in our county will take to heart some of the suggestions that have been made, in order that Boone County may do its share. If there is any way in which the Nutrition Committee can be of any help, please contact the Chairman. We are out to win this war!

Boone Co. Nutrition Committee
H. M. Hauter, Chairman.

Lady Nearly Choked While Lying In Bed—Due To Stomach Gas
One lady said a few days ago that she used to be afraid to go to bed at night. She was swollen with stomach gas, which always got worse when she went to bed, and the gas would rise up in her throat after she lay down and would nearly choke her. She couldn't lie flat. Had to prop herselfself up on pillows. Recently this lady got ERB-HELP and now says gas is gone, stomach feels fine, bowels are regular and she can go to bed and sleep soundly.

CONSERVATION NEWS
J. Casper Acree

One of the outstanding hill farms where Conservation farming has been practiced for years is the Gid Kite farm at Waterloo, operated by Purdy and Kite. It has been stated that if you want to build your farm, turn it into a dairy farm. That will help, but other factors such as mowing machines, a well kept sod made up of several grasses, and good judgement are very important. All of these factors have been used on this farm. A practice that Mssrs. Purdy & Kite state they expect to do more often is Pasture Rotation, changing stock from field to field at intervals during the pasture season. Of 7-year rotation is set up on the cropland area, consisting of one year row crop, one year grain and five years of meadow. Only enough ground will be plowed each year to set their tobacco acreage and enough corn to fill their silo. These row crops will be planted and set on the contour. Mr. Purdy plans on fencing off the eroded area above the reservoir, smoothing down the gullies, treating with lime and phosphate and seeding to grass. If available the Boone County District will furnish him several Kudzu Crowns to set in this area.

The prize Conservation story of the week goes to Rev. Nobel Lucas of Hebron. Rev. Lucas states that an American asked a Britisher, visiting this country, how it was that over in England they had such beautiful lawns, meadows and pastures. That is very simple, the Britisher replied; we prepare a good seed bed, sow a heavy seeding of grasses and let it lay for three hundred years.

Make it a thrifty CHRISTMAS—give WAR BONDS. Keep on BACKING THE ATTACK.

NOTICE

We will accept bids on 300 ft. 2½ inch fire hose. Bids to be opened December 10th. All bids subject to rejection.

---REGISTERED JERSEYS---

is simple in its operation, far reaching in its promise of benefits to the man making a living out of Jerseys. In the days when it was first proposed (this came from Jersey breeders as many as ten years ago) there were some who were dubious as to how it would effect registrations, the small breeder, or the large breeder. Research into the records set aside these fears and Selective Registration went into effect on January 1, 1942.

Farmers And Truckers Meeting Scheduled

The Cincinnati Area Livestock Transportation Committee is calling a meeting of all truck owners and livestock producers in the county for this coming Monday nite, December 13th at 7:30 P. M. according to H. R. Forkner county agent. The meeting will be held at the County Agent's office in Burlington.

The farm market truck situation looks particular bad for this coming year. The purpose of the meeting will be to explain the trucking situation and to develop plans for conservation of local truck facilities. A county committee of three truckmen and three farmers will be appointed to assist in working out a solution to the trucking problems that are developing.

Elmer Hinkle of the Cincinnati Livestock Yards is chairman of the Area Committee. He urges that all owners of trucks for hire and interested farmers to attend the meeting. Representative of the Area Committee, the Office Defense Transportation and the College will be present at the meeting.

Restaurant Prices Frozen

"Starting December 10, 1943, all restaurants, hotels, cafes, bars, delicatessens, soda fountains, boarding houses and other eating and drinking establishments are frozen at the highest prices charged for food items and meals served during the seven day period beginning April 4 and ending April 10, 1943, according to H. P. Baker, Chairman of the Boone County Price Panel.

The Maximum Price Regulation 3-10, which states the facts of this Restaurant Order, have been mailed to all establishments which it includes. This order does not include eating and drinking places operated by any school, college or university, which is a non-profit institution.

It is advisable for all restaurant operators, and etc. to familiarize themselves with this regulation and from time to time there will be a check-up made by the Price Panel or their assistants to help you with your problems."

Pointers On Meat Canning

Many farm families are planning to can meat this fall and winter. Meat canning requires more care than other canning according to Mary Hood Gillaspie, Home Demonstration Agent. One must remember that canned meat is thru cooked and will not be juicy freshly cooked meat.

Any meat for canning should be well aired and chilled. Can in pint and quart jars. Heat may not penetrate thoroughly in meat in a half gallon jar. One pound of meat is allowed per pint. Jars and lids used in canning should be sterlized 15 minutes in steam or boiling water. The U. S. Department of Agriculture recommends that all meat be precooked sufficiently to brown before placing in sterile jars. This precooking heats the meat (which makes it come to boiling point quicker in jar) and causing shrinkage. After adding 1 teaspoon of salt to each pint of meat the edge of jar should be cleaned thorough with a soft sterile cloth. No liquid is added to the meat in the jar. After leaving a heading of 1 to 1½ inches the jar should be sealed according to directions of the lid.

Meat should be processed according to directions of a pressure cooker or three and one-half hours in a hot water bath.

Ushers of home canned meat should always heat the meat uncovered 15 minutes at the boiling point to kill any possible botulinous poisoning before serving to members of the family.

A government meat canning bulletin or a bulletin published by a jar firm should always be used when canning meat.

Public Urged To Purchase Christmas Seals

Buy as many Tuberculosis Christmas Seals that you feel you can, because every cent of the proceeds of the sale is used for the prevention and cure of tuberculosis. This is the only means of collecting funds used for tuberculosis work.

Sixty-five per cent of the sales in Boone County will be used in the county. The remainder goes to the State and National organizations to carry on research work.

R. V. Lents, Executive Secretary of the Boone County Tuberculosis Association, reports that more than $140 was spent on two patients in the county and smaller amounts on several others in the past year. A clinic was held at Florence, and many x-rays were made at a greatly reduced rate. Several of these x-rays were financed by the Boone County Tuberculosis Association.

Mr. Lents also stated that there is now a patient in the county who needs an operation and hospital care that will cost more than $300. He refused to mention the patients name to avoid embrassment to the person, but said that the patient will receive all the aid the county organization can afford. There are other tuberculars in the county needing aid, and Mr. Lents has promised that everything possible will be done to aid them.

The amount of aid given to the cases mentioned will depend upon the amount of seals that you buy. Buy now!

Restrictions On Pressure Cookers Released

Rationing regulations on pressure cookers have been temporarily relaxed to facilitate quick distribution to individuals of pressure cookers which have accumulated according to the U. S. Dept. of Agriculture War Board in Kentucky. Pressure cookers are being shipped in larger quantities to all states. It is no longer necessary that a canner be located before issuing purchase certificate, neither is it necessary that canners be used by several families or organizations. Canners may be bought for individual home use.

Families in Boone County interested in purchasing pressure canners for meat canning and for next year are urged to send for an application soon from the Farm Rationing Committee in Burlington. After the application has been filled it should be returned to Burlington Board. When it is approved a purchase order will be sent the individual desiring the cooker. The Conrad Hardware Store of Walton report that they have fifteen pressure cookers on hand, both 7 and 14 quart size. Several stores in the city have pressure cookers on hand at the present time.

Anyone desiring information on pressure cookers may contact the Home Demonstration Agent, Burlington 412.

Abernathy—Ritter

The marriage of Miss Lucille Ritter, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William J. Ritter of Falmouth, Kentucky and Mr. Winston Prentice Abernathy, son of Dr. and Mrs. John W. Abernathy of Walton, Kentucky was solemnized recently in Panama at the Cristobal Union Church. The pastor, The Reverend Cecil L. Morgan officiated.

The bride wore a white gabardine suit with a small white turban and white accessories. Her flowers were a corsage of white orchids.

Kiger's Widow Charged With Murder

The Commonwealth of Kentucky charged Monday that Carl C. Kiger, 49-year-old Vice Mayor of Covington, was murdered last August 17 in a plot hatched by his wife, Jennie, 49, and his daughter, Joan, 16.

In a move which, officials said, had been planned almost from the day of the slaying near Devon, Ky., the widow was charged with murdering her husband and her son, Jerry, 6, and with conspiring to commit murder.

Sawyer A. Smith, Covington attorney who has been representing the daughter since she was charged with the crime, said he would represent the mother also. He expressed confidence that the Commonwealth did not have sufficient evidence to prove its charges.

BOND IS $25,000

It was Smith and Fred Williamson, 32 East Orchard Road, Fort Mitchell, Ky., brother-in-law of Mrs. Kiger, who signed the $25,000 bond which permitted the accused woman to remain at Williamson's home after the murder warrent was served upon her there.

Mrs. Kiger is to be arraigned before Judge Carroll Cropper in Boone County Court, Burlington, next Monday—the day on which the grand jury is to consider charges against Joan. Mrs. Kiger's case probably will be considered at the same time.

Judge Cropper said that Sheriff Jake Williams, Raymond L. Vincent, Commonwealth Attorney, and others interested in the prosecution had intended all along to accuse Mrs. Kiger in the double slaying.

He said they waited until almost time for the grand jury to meet because the widow was under subpoena as a witness anyway and the state could place her under arrest at any time.

Speculation as to a possible attempt by the prosecution to prove that the slaying August 17 of Carl C. Kiger, 49, vice mayor of Covington, was motivated by incidents in his private life, arose in Covington Tuesday. A number of prominent Kenton County residents were subpoenaed before the grand jury which will be asked to indict Kiger's wife, Mrs. Jenny Kiger, 49, and daughter, Joan, 17, for the slaying of Kiger and his son, Jerry, 6.

Eighty Nine Local Sheepmen Insure Sheep

Eighty nine farmers owning approximately 4000 sheep have taken membership since September 1st in the Boone County Sheep Protective Association according to J. W. Conley, secretary of the Association. This number is ahead of last years membership at this time. The membership year is from September 1st to August 31st.

H. E. White president of the Association advises that many of last year's members are not aware that all membership of the year closes on September 1st and the next year's membership dues are to be paid before October 1st The membership fees are 10 cents per head whether the sheep owner signs up on September the first and receives 12 months protection or signs up later in the year. The association protection to members however does not start until the new membership dues are paid.

The Association has successfully operated the past five years. It has built up a substantial reserve and is rendering a valuable insurance protection for farmers against sheep losses from dogs.

Conservation Officers October Report On Violations.

Frankfort, Ky., Dec.—The Conservation Officers of the Division of Game and Fish received 5 convictions for 5 cases tried on Oct. arrests during that month, S. A. Wakefield, Director of the Division, announced today.

The Officers made 24 arrests during the month and brought 5 of them to trial, receiving 5 convictions and losing no cases. Trials for the other 19 men arrested were held over for a future date. The officers received 3 convictions on arrests made prior to October. They also checked 1,018 hunting and fishing licenses and seized a large amount of contraband.

Good Cows Pay Best

"The good cow is the best in good times or bad." This statement has proved it's worth a number of times in the past. With the feed situation what it is, the cow will return a profit when fed properly, but the low producer is apt to loose money for the dairyman when fed liberaly on the present high priced feed, according to O. D. Perkinson, Assistant County Agent. When the supply of grain is limited it is good business to feed most of the grain while the cow is fresh and in flush production.

The dairy business cannot be profitable over a period of years in the presence of Bang's diseases, Mastitis, etc. and ever known practical method should be employed to keep the herd healthy.

Water is the dairymen's cheapest feed. A milking cow when allowed free access to water will drink from 9 to 14 gallons daily. Cows average 3.76 gallons of water for each gallon of milk produced.

Regularity of milking is important. Delaying milking for an hour or two lowers production for several days.

Shelter is necessary for high producing cows especially in cold and stormy weather. Elaborate equipment is not necessary, but cows housed and well bedded produce more.

Breed efficency is one of the most important factors affecting production. A ten month lactation a two month dry period and a calf every twelve months should be every dairymen's goal.

December Meeting of the Walton Woman's Literary Club.

The Christmas Season was in the atmosphere at the December meeting of the Walton Woman's Literary Club held in the home of Mrs. R. G. Moore just north of Walton.

The meeting was opened with a prayer by Mrs. G. S. Caroland, after which a brief business session was conducted by the president, Mrs. C. F. Blankenbeker. Mrs. John Boyer, of Verona was voted into the club as a new member.

A delightful and entertaining Christmas program followed, although early in the month, the members felt a feeling of friendship and Christmas cheer. Mrs. Grover C. Ransom opened the program with a piano selection of some old favorite Christmas music. "The Meaning of Christmas" was given by Mrs. Cloyd Johnson. Following this, two beautiful Christmas songs, "The Infant Jesus" and "A Christmas Lullabye" were sung by Rev. Geo. S. Caroland and Mrs. Caroland. They were accompanied by Mrs. Ransom at the piano. A reading, "At Christmas" was given by Mrs. W. W. Rouse. To close the program the club members joined in singing the favorite old carol "Joy to the World". Following the program was the customary exchange of Christmas gifts. This is always the highlight of the December meeting.

The hostess served delicious refreshments to the following guests: Rev. Geo. S. Caroland, Mrs. John Walton of Crittenden, and Mrs. Harris Moore. Members present were: Mrs. J. C. Bedinger, Mrs. C. F. Blankenbeker, Mrs. J. R. Conrad, Mrs. Geo. S. Caroland, Mrs C. S. Chambers, Mrs. E. E. Fry, Mrs. A. H. Gaines, Mrs. Edna B. Hamilton, Mrs. A. R. Johnson, Mrs. Clayton Jones, Mrs. Cloyd Johnson, Mrs. H. F. Mann, Miss Emma Jane Miller, Mrs. John Myers, Mrs. J. E. McCabe, Mrs. C. W. Hansler, Mrs. Grover C. Ransom, Mrs. W. O. Rouse, Mrs. W. W. Books Added To Homemakers Library

Thirteen modern books have been added to the Boone Homemakers library according to Mrs. Alexander Yelton, County reading chairman. Homemakers now have 108 books in the library purchased from collected dues or donated by friends.

Any one interested in reading may obtain books from the library located in the office of the Home Demonstration Agent. Homemakers may keep a book for a month for a five cent fee while non-homemakers may borrow a book for two weeks for the same fee.

Over one hundred books have been taken from the library and read since September 1st.

Mrs. Ann Steward, a Boone Countian has given an autographed copy of her new book "Take Nothing for your Journey" to the library. "Who Walk Alone" by Perry Burges was given by the Leonard Wood Memorial. Books recently purchased are: "Short Days Ago", Renee Brand; "Bombs Burst Once", Granville Church; "Thorn Apple Tree", Grace Campbell; "The Dam", Jerome Ellison; "Port Arthur", Pierre Frondaire; "The Barefoot Mailman", Theodore Pratt; "Old John", Olaf Sapledon; "Airing in a Closed Carriage", Joseph Shearing; "Tales Witness", Irving Stewart; "Rosscommon", Charles Allen Smart; "The Man Who Killed the Deer", Frank Waters; and "The Robe", Lloyd Douglas.

New Haven Defeats Florence 47-11.

The New Haven Tigers downed the Florence Knights in a double header on Friday Evening, Dec. 3, at New Haven. The Tigers forged ahead in the first quarter to run the score to 18 to 4. They held the lead throughout the game and piled up 47 points against 11 for their opponents before the final whistle sounded.

Good team work, fast passing, and accurate shooting were displayed by the winning team. The following boys represented New Haven: Judge, Moore, Wharton, Ferguson, L. Shields, Dickerson, and V. Shields. Florence was represented by Shields, Reynolds, Carpenter, Houston, Crouch, Grayson, Sebree, and Youell.

The New Haven "B" Team defeated the Florence "B" Team by a score of 22 to 15.

Growers Produce 1300 Bushel Hybrid Seed Corn

Two Boone County hybrid seed corn producers the past year have produced 1300 bushels of certified hybrid seed corn for planting in 1544. The varieties are Kentucky and Boone County adapted. This valuable local source of seed will be a great aid to the county's feed production program next year.

The local growers are Wilton Stephens of Burlington who has 300 bushels of certified U. S. 13 seed. Lloyd Siekman of Petersburg has 700 bushels of Ky. 103 (yellow) and 300 bushels of Kentucky white hybrids Nos. 201 and 212.

It is estimated that there were 11,900 acres of hybrid field corn grown in the county the past years. Many growers estimated that they got as high as fifty percent more bushels of corn as a result of adapted hybrid seed. An estimated 10 bushels per acre increase would equal 119,000 more bushels of corn valued at $119,000.00 more dollars or extra feed crops for the war effort.

Boone County farmers in all probability must raise more corn in 1944 to meet local livestock feed requirements. Growers are urged to plant only locally proven adapted hybrids. Orders for seed should be placed early to guarantee that the local supply will be adequate.

THIS WEEK IN WPB

Women's shoes that last longer constitute the War Production Board's big hope for civilians this week. Experiments have indicated that such shoes are possible and they soon will be tried out in large-scale operations.

The experiments were conducted with the use of oil and wax treated soles in "cement constructed" shoes. Soles of a great many shoes for women are "cement constructed" shoes. Soles of a great many shoes for women are cemented rather than sewed on, and, if the new method allows the use of oil and wax treated soles, wear will be increased from 15 to 40 per cent. This increase in durability is of great importance in the light of international shortage of hides and leather. Experiments indicate that the soles can be treated after the cementing has been done.

The WPB is digging further into the problem of women's, children's and infants' clothing and have decided to make a comprehensive survey of that industry's output, first of its kind since 1939. Specific information will be sought from several thousand firms on nearly 100 items of apparel.

You will be happy to know that the War Production Board has made it easier for repairmen to obtain materials. To get materials, the repairmen merely have to certify to their wholesalers that they need certain items. This will aid plumbers and heating contractors, farm machinery shops, electricians, radio, refrigerator, upholstery, bicycle and automotive repair places as well as blacksmiths and carpenters.

Production of umbrella frames will be stepped up 8 per cent. For your protection in rainy weather, about 5,000,000 frames and enough covering material will be available.

Donald M. Nelson, WPB chairman, has issued an urgent plea to retail stores to cut the frills from their Christmas wrapping and packaging. This will help conserve both labor and paper. The Critical Resources Conservation program also calls for the voluntary elimination of outdoor Christmas lighting and displays, and for the turning out of store window lights, signs, and display advertising lighting by 10 p. m. except in places that are doing buisness at a later hour. It is hoped, nationally, that display lighting can be reduced to a period of not more than two hours nightly.

On the war production front, Charles E. Wilson, WPB executive vice chairman, made it plain that the 1944 production job would be "at least 20 per cent bigger than the excellent job done this year," and he added: "we must get it out of people's heads that the war is finished. Our main job is to increase military supplies."

Possibility of producing lightweight newsprint is still under serious consideration as a part of the effort to spread the woodpulp supply. Publishers were warned that, while they might increase consumption in the first quarter of 1944 the amount that they had left over the end of 1943, they could not jump their inventories to that extent. Certain types of cedar logs and lumber were placed under strict allocation control; WPB has released for unrestricted use copper insect screening which the Coppery Recovry Corporation has refused to accept. WPB also released approximately 300 lbs. of fabricated copper and copper base alloy parts for use in manufacture of builders finishing hardware cabinet locks and padlocks.

Permission to produce 64,000 domestic electric ranges of a three burner apartment house type in 1944 is expected to be granted the manufacturers in areas where the labor and facilities are available. The ranges will be produced under an emergency program designed to meet the most essential needs of the armed services, hospitals, FPHA and FHA housing projects and to provide essential replacements for civilians who have been or are now using electric ranges. This production rate will be about 10 per cent of the 1941 rate and will be strictly controlled.

Records indicate that from 25 to 30 farmers in Robertson county will want tenants in 1944, principally tobacco growers.

Kentucky Hunting Season Opens With Varied Reports Of Success.

Frankfort, Ky.—The hunting season on rabbits and quail which opened in Kentucky on November 24, brought varied success reports in the different counties of the state. Some hunters reported getting the limit of quail or of rabbits while others reported near limits of both bird or cotton-tail. Some nimrods stated that they found the quail in the open fields while others said the birds were located in thickets and brush heaps. Others, who had spotted coveys of quail before the season opened, went back to that particular spot with their dogs to search in vain for the bob white quail. There has been hardly any rainfall in Kentucky since late summer and the earth and vegetation is so dry as to make it next to impossible for a dog to smell game. In many localities various species of game, including the rabbit and quail have migrated either short or long distances to water. Hunters are also complaining of losing crippled rabbits and birds because the dogs are unable to trail along the dry ground.

According to reports received by the Division of Game and Fish, some sportsmen estimated that the game crop was up 20 to 30 percent over last year. Others stated that they had more quail and rabbits in their counties this season than had been noted for the past 15 years.

Lack of ammunition has probably been the biggest factor in keeping hunters from the field thus far this season.

AMONG THE COUNTY AGENTS

Tobacco stripped this year in Clark county weighed considerably more per acre than that of last year and showed few signs of house burn.

Lucian White of Knox county made approximately $629 for his labor on his flock of 203 Rhode Island Red pullets started a year ago.

In Letcher county, 1,400,000 quarts of fruit and vegetables were canned, 38,000 pounds dried and 15,000 gallons of vegetables put in brine.

The Macoupin variety of soybeans yielded an average of 25 to 30 bushels per acre in Hopkins county; other varieties, 15 to 16 bushels.

Seed will be saved for local use in McCracken county by S. G. Lamond who sowed 30 acres of certified balbo rye, winter oats and Thorne wheat.

Green county farmers sowed 20,000 pounds of vetch, 15,000 pounds of crimson clover and a large acreage of wheat, balbo rye and other small grains.

Give The Kentucky Wildlife A Christmas Present In The Form Of Food.

Frankfort, Ky., Dec.—"When the people of Kentucky are passing Christmas presents to each other on December 25 they should not over-look presents for their 'wildlife' friends of forest and field," S. A. Wakefield, Director of the Division of Game and Fish, stated today.

"Many birds and animals require the help of humans to survive the rigors of winter," Wakefield pointed out, "and corn, wheat, rye, barley, sunflower heads, lespedeza and sorgum seeds and other game feeds should be made easily available to the wild animals."

Wakefield urged that every person, whether sportsman, student in school, land owner, farmer, or just a city dweller, resolve to include in his or her Christmas list of presents a package of feed for the wild birds and animals on Christmas day and to make certain the present is delivered in person on the 25th day of December. It every person would cooperate in this manner our wildlife friends would receive an abundance of food for which they would repay us in many, many ways.

The county game and fish clubs or nature clubs can organize a winter-feeding program by raising funds, soliciting labor, and obtaining the cooperation of hunters, Boy Scouts, Women's clubs, the local press, and others.

Arrangements can be made with local farmers for wholesale, systematic feeding of the wildlife. The farmers are the individuals who can best know where the game is to be found and his cooperation in this feeding program should be solicited by all means.

Increase Coal Prices

Anthracite coal ceiling prices have been raised by OPA an average of 62 cents a net top at the mine. Increases range from 35 to 70 cents a ton, depending on the size of the coal. On June 1, 1944, the new ceilings at the mine will be reduced by an average of 28 cents a ton, leaving net increases of about 34 cents a ton. The exact amount of these increases can be passed on to the consumer. Purpose of the approximately six months of higher ceilings is to compensate mine owners for the retroactive feature of recent wage increases.

Seed Potato Ceilings

Maximum prices for domestic and imported "certified" seed potatoes have been set by OPA at $1 above established ceilings for U. S. No. 1 tablestock potatoes, and for "war-approved" seed potatoes at 50 cents above tablestock potatoes.

Waits For Third Coffin

Sacha Guitry is a French actor who chose to collaborate with the Germans. A short time ago Guitry was working on a film. Between the shooting of two sets a small packet was handed to him. It contained a tiny model of a coffin. Guitry never completed the film. More recently he was performing in a comedy. At the end of the second act, when Guitry returned to his dressing room, he found on his make-up table the second model of a coffin, larger than the first. When the curtain was due to rise on the third act, it was explained that Mr. Guitry was suddenly indisposed. Mr. Guitry is suffering from heart trouble waiting for the third coffin. Receipt of a third coffin by a traitor in France indicates his coming doom.

Mutual Aid In New Zealand

While New Zealand furnishes hospital beds, buildings, meat, fruit, dairy products, eggs, flour, sugar, and vegetables to United States forces, the U. S. supplies ordance, ammunition, airplanes, steel, wire, tinplate, machinery, hardware, cotton, yarn, and thread to New Zealand.

Polish Women On Night Shift

In a Wuppertal (Germany) factory, 1,400 Polish women have been making arms for Germany since 1941. They have been on the night shift continually, and German women or other foreigners relieve them during the day when the raid danger is much less. Polish women are always quartered on top stories where the danger from bombs is the greatest.

U. S. Trained Dutch Flyers In Action

Many of the Netherlands airmen who received their wings or completed their advanced training at the Netherlands flying school at Jackson, Miss., are already in action from British bases. Several have joined the Netherlands naval air service Mitchell bomber squadron or have given assigments with Dutch fighter squadrons flying in British Royal Air Forces blue.

Record Wheat Crop Expected

A record wheat crop of about 2,500,000 bags of 200-pounds each is expected in the Orange Free State, Union of South Africa, compared with 700,000 bags last year, according to the U. S. Department of Commerce.

Sufferings Of Belgian Women

The Germans have imprisoned, deported to Germany, or executed numbers of Belgian women for sabotage, printing and distributing illegal papers, listening to BBC, or helping or hiding British soldiers.

Australian Manpower-Travel Curb

Australians will not be permited to travel interstate in cases where the local Manpower Authority considers the person's work essential in his locality. The Land Transport Authority may require a Manpower clearance before issuing a ticket.

"The Music Run"

American Liberator Bomber crews call some bombing flights into the Netherlands East Indies, "the music run" because on these flights they tune in on musical programs from Japanese radio stations. A special correspondent for Aneta, Dutch news agency, quotes an American captain: "We find some Jap station which is playing swing music and listen in. It makes the time pass more pleasantly particularly when you are on a long mission over the sea at night."

Dutch Feed Underground Armies

To feed the 300,000 Dutch ex-service men, students, and laborers who have gone into hiding rather than submit to forced labor in Germany is the biggest problem of the Dutch underground. Members of this army in hiding are being hunted by the German "Green Police" and are deprived of rationing coupons. The underground is solving the problem by increased thefts of food from freight cars and railway warehouses.

Britain's Food Production

Britain, which before the war imported almost 70 percent of its food, is now producing nearly one half of it. The increase has been brought about by plowing land not previously cultivated and by switching from production of meats and dairy products to the growing of grains and vegetables.

Brazil To Help Bomb Mosquitoes

Ten thousand pounds of pyrethrum seed has been flown from Africa to Natal, Brazil, to assist that country in growing plants that will help "bomb" malaria—bearing mosquitoes and other insects on the battlefronts of the world. Kenya, East Africa, formerly was the big source of pyrethrum. Grenade-like cases of black painted iron are used to hold the insecticide ready for instant use. More than a million of these bombs have been shipped to the battlefronts. One bomb will emit enough puffs to kill all mosquitoes in 10 rooms, each 10 feet high and 10 feet square, every day for 50 days.

88 Percent Without Bread

More than 88 percent of the people of Berehovo must do without bread, according to an official announcement quoted in a Hungarian newspaper. Berehovo, a city of 35,000 population which belongs to the Carpatho-Russian province of Czechoslovakia, suffers also from shortage of other food and clothing.

How Rubber Tapper Works

War has made business boom for Bolivian rubber tappers. When a rubber tapper starts his activities, he cuts out his route, covering 100-150 wild trees within two or three miles of a river. Usually a worker has three such routes, one of which he covers every three days. He collects latex in a cloth bag slung over his shoulder. Returning at night to his fire, he makes rubber balls by repeatedly dipping a stick in the liquid latex, then turning it over the fire until it dries, thus building up a ball at the end of the stick.

South Africa Seeks 15,000 Nurses

South Africa has begun a drive to enlist 15,000 more women for its nursing services.

Russian Factories Have Farms

Soviet Russian cities, industrial centers, and factories are supplementing their food supplies with meat, vegetables and dairy products from their own farms. Some grow vegetables, others breed pigs or poultry, and some even have fisheries.

"TOWN AND FARM IN WARTIME"

Prepared by the Rural Press Section of O. W. I.

Farmers' Tax Deadline, Dec. 15

Farmers are required to file declarations of estimated 1943 income and victory tax and make a payment by December 15. Farmers who elected to make declarations September 15 when most other persons made them, will need only to make an installment payment December 15. Persons who made declarations September 15 and wish to amend them or those who made no declarations but since have had a change in income to require them, also should file by December 15. Persons with tax installments due on that date will receive and have received bills from the local Collector of Internal Revenue.

Reduce Meat Point Value

The entire list of rationed beef items has been cut two or three ration points, making the most meat available to civilians since rationing began late last March. Many pork cuts remain at the reduced value set by OPA in mid-November, and point values of lamb, mutton, and all veal remain unchanged. This means an increase of approximately 30 per cent in the housewife's meat ration for December as compared with the ration set at the beginning of November.

Change Date On Cattle Program

The effective date of the cattle price stabilization program has changed from December 1, 1943, to the beginning of the first accounting period after December 15, 1943, for each slaughterer.

To Maintain Farm Structures

Farm building material makers, under sponsorship of the Farm Structures Institute and in cooperation with the War Food Administration, will hold a war conference in Chicago, December 10, on maintenance of farm structures, WFA announced recently. Keynote of the conference will be that the nation's ten and a half billion dollar investment in farm structures must be kept at top productive efficiency through adequate maintenance, with the necessary minimum of new construction. Only the value of agricultural land itself exceeds the amount of funds invested in buildings and structures on farms of the country.

Keep Draft Board Informed

A farm worker who fails to keep his local selective service board informed of a change of address or occupation may be reclassified or possibly inducted into the armed forces. Only the selective service board with who the individual has registered has authority to grant him a temporary release from non-farm work which will protect his deferred classification.

Consumers Advise OPA

The Consumer Advisory Committee appointed by OPA has recommended establishment of dollars-and-cents ceiling prices for as many commodities as possible and a price guide to be made available to housewives throughout the country. The committee also objected to use of "average store mark-up" as a basis for price control because "this method of establishing prices would be entirely unenforceable." The committee was set up to tell OPA how its programs are working and what can be done to improve them.

Coal Production and Prices

The highest weekly production record in more than 16 years was established by the U. S. Bituminous Coal Mines during the first full week of operation under the new wage contract between the Government and the miners, according to Harold L. Ickes, Solid Fuels Administrator for War. Production for the week ended November 20 was estimated at 12,700,000 tons. Bituminous coal price ceilings were raised an average of 17 cents a net ton to compensate operators to the extent required by recent increases in labor costs. An increase of 80 cents per net ton was made in ceiling prices for by-product blast furnace coke manufactured in the central west. A similar increase is expected to be announced shortly in maximum prices for industrial and domestic by-product coke produced in the central west.

Changes In Tire Regulations

Recent changes in tire rationing regulations annouced by OPA are: (1) Recapping of tires for commercial vehicles with truck-type camelback is no longer rationed; (2) Tires manufactured principally from reclaimed rubber (war tires) may now be brought by those persons previously eligible for used tires. Tire and tube rationing quotas for December are not greatly changed from those in November.

Change In Gasoline Coupons

Motorists are reminded by OPA that their old "B" and "C" gasoline coupons continue to have a value of two gallons each in the east and mid-west and three gallons in the far west. On December 1, however, all new "B" and "C" coupons issued to motorists whose supplementary gasoline rations expired became good for five gallons each throughout the country. Although each new coupon will be good for more gallons than before, motorists will not receive any aditional gasoline because ration books will have corresponding fewer coupons.

Citrus Marmalades Point Free

All marmalades made entirely of citrus fruits (principally oranges and lemons) may be bought point free, according to OPA. Marmalades made of citrus and noncitrus fruits in combination are rationed at the same point value as marmalades made wholly of non-citrus fruits.

Up Jam and Jelly Prices

Consumers will pay about two or three cents more per pound for jams, preserves, and jellies made from apples, apple products, and frozen grapes, under a recent OPA regulation. The increases reflect increases in 1943 fruit costs to the packer.

Frozen Fruits, Berries

Consumers will pay from ¾ cent a pound more for frozen California freestone peaches, Concord grapes, apples, and blackberries. According to OPA, these increases will allow the processors to pass increased raw material costs on to the ultimate consumer.

Copper Sulphate '44 Crops

Sufficient copper for production of copper sulphate to protect next year's food crops from bacterial and fungus diseases will be available. WFA said recently. It is necessary, however, that consumers and distributors order and accept delivery as soon as possible in adequate quantities of copper pesticides are to be available when needed next year.

ODT Asks Help For Santa Clause

Christmas shoppers have been asked by ODT to lend Santa Claus a helping hand by observing the following: (1) Shop now. Mail now. Do not wait until the "eleventh hour." (2) Carry your packages whenever possible. (3) Remember, War Bonds and Stamps make the best Christmas gifts. They are a good buy and they take minimum transportation space, ODT pointed out.

Owners Note License Numbers

Car owners themselves rather than ration boards or automobile registration officials must note new license numbers on their ration books and tire inspection records, under a recent OPA ruling. The action also provides that "T" coupons issued for use in 1944 by commercial vehicles and taxis will be in strips (similar to strips of motion picture tickets) rather than in book form and each coupon will be serially numbered.

Youth Week To Be Observed By More Than 2,000,000 Christian Youth.

CHICAGO—In rural and urban areas of the United States and Canada the period of January 30 to February 6, 1944, will be observed as Youth Week by more than 2,000,000 Christian youth of Protestant churches, it was announced today by the Rev. Roy G. Ross, general secretary of the International Council of Religious Education.

"One Faith, One Fellowship" will be the theme used by more than 50,000 youth groups across the two countries in the observance, which is sponsored by the United Christian Youth Movement. Constituent agencies of the Movement include 42 Protestant denominations and interdenominational agencies such as the Boy Scouts of America, YMCA, YWCA, and the International Society of Christian Endeavor.

"With fellowship among youth broken in so many parts of the world today," Dr. Ross stated in announcing plans for Youth Week "there is real hope for the future in a united observance among Christian youth. Through it an effective attack can be made on the crucial problems facing young people in American cities and rural areas today."

Christian faith "in friendly service" will be expressed during Youth Week in many communities through service projects conducted unitedly for the benefit of less fortunate people. The wartime service program of the United Christian Youth Movement will serve as a guide for such projects.

Plans for Youth Week observances are under the direction of the Rev. Isaac K. Becks, director of youth work for the International Council of Religious Education and executive secretary of the United Christian Youth Movement, who is recommending the following types of activities for youth groups on a community-wide basis;

Church worship services with emphasis upon youth in the sermons and participation of young people in the program; community-wide interdenominational youth services on an interracial and international basis where possible; church and community forums on youth problems and opportunities for service in Christian work; social activities in churches, sponsored by interchurch groups for developing fellowship among young people, and the taking of offerings from youth for relief and missionary programs around the world.

"Young people in village and country-side will find in Youth Week an opportunity to reaffirm their faith in the ideal of a Christian America," Mr. Beckes said in telling of the program. "The theme, 'One Faith, One Fellowship,' challenges young people with potentialities of Christian unity.

"Youth Week calls youth from town and country to reaffirm unitedly their faith in the triumph of justice and brotherhood. Every community needs the opportunity Youth Week affords to enlarge the vision, deepen the faith and strenghten the unity of its Christian young people."

Farmers in Hancock county have seeded about 12,000 pounds of vetch and 2,000 pounds of crimson clover.

A WALTON LADY SPIT UP ACID LIQUIDS FOR HOURS AFTER EATING

For hours after every meal, a Walton lady used to spit up a strong, acidulous liquid mixed with pieces of half-digested food. She says it was awful. At times she would nearly strangle. She had stomach bloat, daily headaches and constant irregular bowel action. Today, this lady eats her meals and enjoys them. And she says the change is due to taking ERB-HELP. Her food agrees with her. No gas, bloat or spitting up after eating. She is also free of headaches now, and bowels are regular, thanks to this Remarkable New Compound.

ERB-HELP contains 12 Great Herbs; they cleanse bowels, clear gas from stomach, act on sluggish liver and kidneys. Miserable people soon feel different all over. So don't go on suffering! Get ERB-HELP. Jones Drug Store.

KEEP ON Backing the Attack! WITH WAR BONDS

NICHOLSON

"Train up a child in the way he should go, and when he is old he will not depart from it." The very best example should be set by the parents, as every act is mirrowed by the children, and "travel is easy along the downhill road."

Heartiest thanks are extended to Mrs. Helen E. Collins for recent kindness.

The fifth birthday of little Miss Shirley Janes Collins was happily celebrated Sunday afternoon, November 21, 1943. After indulging in various games, delightful refreshments of ice cream, cake and candy were served to the merry little group surrounding the table sweetly singing "Happy Birthday To You." The table was adorned with the birthday cake, embossed with pink icing, aglow with five tiny tapers. Enjoying the little party were: Jackie Morgan, Bessie Morgan, Betty Jo Weldon, Kirtley Weldon, Nellie Fisk, Phyllis Williams, Genie Parker, Tommie Stephenson, Eve Stephenson, parents of the youthful hostess Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Collins, her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Elliott, Mrs. Virginia Rurr and Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Parker. Late callers were: Mrs. Harry Fisk, little Miss Janet Fisk and Mrs. Virginia Wagner. Many little tokens of affection were received, and all left wishing for her many, many more happy birthdays.

Program Announced For December Meetings.

Citizenship will be the major theme for the December meeting of Homemakers' Clubs in Boone County. Each of the twelve clubs have made plans to make at least one afghan for convalescent soldiers in hospitals. Homemakers under the guidance of their local citizenship chairmen will also plan to help the needy at Christmas and bring cheer to shut-ins.

An exchange of inexpensive gifts, preferably homemade, will be a feature of the Christmas program.

Homemakers and visitors attending December meetings are urged to bring scissors to be sharpened, clean and pressed old woolen scraps or new woolen scraps for afghan and crochet hook according to Mary Hood Gillaspie, Home Demonstration Agent.

Following is the schedule of December meetings: Dec. 10 Walton, Mrs. Allan Gaines, 10:30; Dec. 20 Verona, Mrs. Walter Renaker, 10:30; Dec. 14 Grant, Mrs. Leon Ryle, 2:00; Dec. 15 Taylorsport, Mrs. Oscar Fugate, 10:30; Dec. 16 Bullittsville, Mrs. Robt. Grant, 10:30; Dec. 17 Florence, Mrs. Gertie Fossett, 10:30; Dec. 21 New Haven, Mrs. Geo. Baker, 10:30; Dec. 22 Rabbit Hash Mrs. Ethel Wilson, 10:30; Dec. 15 Colored Club, Lucy Johnson, 8:00

Verona Homemakers Club

The Verona Homemakers held their regular monthly meeting Friday, Nov. 26th, at the home of Mrs. Walter Hon of Napoleon.

The roll call was answered by eight members, some giving a Thanksgiving thought. Members were asked to bring old woolen coats and dresses, already washed, to the December meeting, for squares to be used in making an afghan for the soldiers. These afghans are used in hospitals for soldiers who have been wounded.

Mrs. Frances McCormick brought a very interesting and instructive lesson, "Economy of Kitchen Tools". Sharpening of scissors and knives was demonstrated, and silver polish and polishing clothes were purchased by members. Mrs. Maude Wilson gave an interesting report on exterior beautification.

At the noon hour all engaged in disposing of a bountiful lunch served at a beautifully decorated Thanksgiving table, with Mrs. Joe Reffitt asking Grace.

The date of the December meeting was changed to the 20th instead of the fourth Friday to accomodate Miss Gillespie. The Program Committee asks the club to exchange inexpensive Christmas gifts at the next meeting, also to answer roll call with a Xmas poem.

The December meeting will be with Mrs. Grace Renaker.

Dad has put down his paper and gone to supper without turning off his reading lamp. In ordinary times this wouldn't matter much, but in wartime waste of any kind is a luxury that can well be dispensed with. Wasting light wastes electricity which in turn involves a waste of fuel, manpower, transportation and critical materials needed elsewhere in the war effort.

So here's a suggestion. Appoint yourself the light and power warden of your home. See that lights are turned off in unoccupied rooms and that the radio and other appliances are disconnected when not in actual use. There's ample electricity for all essential needs, but please don't waste it just because it's cheap and isn't rationed. Uncle Sam says use what you need, but need what you use.

Food Wasted Would Supply Many Soldiers

Boone County's 2,639 housewives could feed 744 soldiers for a year with the food wasted annually in homes of the county, an official of the country's leading food distributor estimated today.

This amazing figure is based on accurate government statistics which indicate that at least 1,427,699 pounds of food are wasted annually in Boone County homes, according to Harvey A. Baum, head of A & P Tea Company's produce-buying operations.

"Food is a munition of war and everyone must fight waste of it now," Baum pointed out. "Efficient food producers, processors and distributors have worked for years to reduce waste. Our company, for example, has cut waste and spoilage on perishable fruits and vegetables by 50 per cent during the past 20 years," he added. "Now the government is urging a similar war on food waste in the home."

Kitchen efficiency, Baum suggested, should include three points (1) Buy as nearly as possible just the required amount; (2) serve moderate helpings, and (3) use all left-overs.

Baum said that although housewives have eliminated much food waste since Pearl Harbor, over eight per cent of all food bought for home consumption is still wasted. While it is obvious that waste cannot be prevented entirely, he added, carefully planned conservation should cut the loss in half and thus 372 soldiers could be fed with the resulting savings in homes of this county.

Civilians eat about 1,514 pounds of food each year, he concluded, while the average soldier "puts away" 1,916 pounds annually.

Mrs. Clarence Ervin

The many friends from this community were grieved to learn of the death of Mrs. Clarence Ervin of Middletown, Ohio, but formerly of this community, she was born and reared at Staffordsburg, Ky.

She was married to Clarence Ervin about forty years ago. They resided in Latonia, Ky. several years, and then later moved to Middletown, Ohio where they have made many friends. Mrs. Ervin was a faithful member of the First Baptist Church. She had been in failing health for several years, three years ago she had a serious illness and had to have a limb amputated, but she bore it cheerfully and never complained of her affliction. Two weeks before her death she was tricken with a stroke and never regained consciousness.

Her funeral was held at her church in Middletown last Thursday, and was conducted by her pastor, Rev. Feldman with burial in Woodland Cemetery at Middletown beside her little daughter, who preceeded her several year ago.

She leaves to mourn her passing, her husband, one son, Kirtley; one sister, Mrs. Earl Hanna; one brother, John W. Cain of Walton; one sister-in-law, Mrs. Alice Ervin of Covington; eight nieces and nephews.

Mrs. Ervin will be sadly missed in her home and community.

Mr. and Mrs. L. M. Menefee were Wednesday guests of their sisters, Mrs. Lula Vest and Mrs. Kate Noell.

The many friends of Mrs. Omer Dudgeon will be glad to know she is able to return to her work at The Gidding Dept. Store in Cincinnati, Ohio where she is employed as a fitter, after being confined to her home the past three weeks with a throat infection.

Water For A Safe Christmas Tree

Families that have a Christmas tree are urged to be very careful of all fire hazards while the tree is in the house according to Mary Hood Gillaspie Home Demonstration Agent. Trees soon become very dry when in a heated room.

After testing the many different chemicals and methods that have been suggested for fireproofing the Christmas tree, wood experts of the Forest Service of U. S. Dept. of Agriculture conclude that keeping the tree standing in water is still the most practical and convenient way to make it fire resistant and also to prevent the needles from discoloring or falling.

The fresher the tree, the more easily it takes up water, so the experts advise getting it in water as soon as possible after cutting. Cut off the end of the trunk diagonally at least an inch above the orginal cut end. Stand the tree at once in a container of water and keep the level of water above the cut surface during the entire time the tree is in the house. If the tree is not to be set up for several days, keep it in water in a cool place while it waits.

Statement Of The American Fat Salvage Committee, Inc.

Government has taken a most constructive step in authorizing meat dealers to give two meat ration points in addition to four cents for each pound of used household fat turned in for salvage. Joint action by the Office of Price Administration, the War Food Administration, and the War Production Board was necessary to meet the war need for more fats in this manner. The war agencies are to be congratulated upon this evidence of their cooperation with each other in meeting an essential requirement.

In spite of the importance of fats and oils as foodstuffs and for industrial use, comparatively few people in this country are aware of the importance of these raw materials. Fats are basic foodstuffs, and they are also vital materials for war industries. Fats are used in making explosives, synthetic rubber, medicines and pharmaceutics, soaps, lubricating gresses, printing ink, and many other industrial products important to civilians and military alike.

The war has brought about a pressing need for more fats of all kinds, and especially for more fats for industrial use. To wage our war successfully has required a vast quantity of products made from fats. At the same time the need for food fats has increased due to military activity, the extra food requirements of the hard-working millions employed in industry, and the necessity to export food fats from our country to our allies. The real pinch, however, has been in industrial fats because large areas, China, the Phillipines, Malaysia, from which more than a billion pounds of such fats were imported annually are in Japanese hands or under their control.

Household fat salvage has been of tremendous help in replacing fats and oils that formerly were imported. American kitchen fats have gone a long way to provide glycerine for explosives, medicines and many other war and civilian products.

The fat salvage campaign was first tried out in Chicago on a plan conceived by Thomas E. Wilson, President of Wilson & Co., with the cooperation of Mayor Edward J. Kelly, who put the authority of the city government behind the project. The success of this pilot operation in Chicago aroused national interest and led to the adoption of the national household fat salvage plan which has produced 108,000,000 pounds from American kitchens during last twelve months.

But, even one hundred million pounds is too little to make up the deficit in the fats and oils supply and over twice that much must be made available during the next twelve months if we are to maintain our present levels of production, which in the case of all but the most essential and necessary munitions and materials of war have been reduced as far as had been considered prudent.

We of this Committee, are deeply grateful for the public support we have received, for the constructive and progressive attitude and cooperation of governmental officials, for the magnificient support of the Press, and for the cooperation of the meat packers, retail meat dealers, renderers, and for the assistance of the numerous industrial and commercial organizations who have publicized fat salvage on the radio and through their advertising and sales forces.

State Farm Bureau Director To Speak At Burlington

J. E. Stanford, State Secretary of the Kentucky Farm Bureau Federation will address Boone County farmers in a meeting at Burlington Courthouse, Monday January 3rd according to Lloyd Siekman, president of the County Organization.

Sixty farmers have paid membership into the new county Farm Bureau organized the past year. The goal for 1944 is 100 members.

The county organization the past year threw its full support to the State and National organizations. These organization's have been the most powerful workers toward a more satisfactory agriculture.

There has been much adverse publicity to the farmer in our National war program according to Siekman. The Farm Bureau, the Grange and National organization of cooperatives have been attempting to correct this situation. Most of this adverse publicity has been due to lack of understanding of the actual farm situation. It is hoped that every farmer who possibly can will attend the next meeting of his county Farm Bureau and lend his support for the coming year.

Kiger's Widow And Joan Indicted By Grand Jury

After hearing a score of witnesses in an all-day session Monday at Burlington, Ky., the Boone County Grand Jury voted at 4:25 o'clock in the afternoon to indict the widow and daughter of Covington's Vice Mayor, Carl C. Kiger, on charges of murdering him and his son, Jerry, 6.

The case has been called for trial at 9 a. m. today (Thursday), Raymond L. Vincent, commonwealth attorney, announced.

When the trial date was set, it was annouced also by the court that Mrs. Kiger and Joan would remain free under $25000 bond each until the case begins.

Sawyer Smith, counsel for Mrs. Kiger and Joan, indicated in a formal statement that he would hammer hard at the weak point in the commonwealth's case—that no motive has been proven.

Indictments

Text of the indictments follows:

"The grand jury of the county of Boone, in the name and by the authority of the commonwealth of Kentucky, accuse Joan Kiger and Jennie Kiger of the crime of willful murder, committed in manner and form as follows, to-wit:

"The said Joan Kiger and Jennie Kiger, in the said county of Boone, on a day in August, 1943 and before the finding of this indictment, did unlawfully, willfully, maliciously, feloniously and of malice aforethought, kill, slay and murder Carl Kiger, by one or the other, the said Joan Kiger or Jennie Kiger, with a pistol loaded with gun powder and bullets and other hard and combustible substances, a deadly weapon, shooting and wounding said Carl Kiger on and upon the head, body, arms, limbs and person, from which said shooting and wounding the said Carl Kiger did then and there die, the other of said defendants being then and there present, aiding, abetting and counselling and advising the same, the exact manner whereof is unknown to the grand jurors, and which did the shooting, said Joan Kiger or Jennie Kiger, or which aided, abetted, counselled and advised the same is unknown to the grand jurors.

Also Daughter

"The said defendent, Joan Kiger, at the time of the commission of the crime and felony hereinset out, being a female under 18 years of age, and she having been brought thereafter before Hon. C. L. Cropper, county judge of Boone County, Ky., and judge of the Juvenile Court of said county, and by said Juvenile Court judge, duly ordered to be proceeded against in accordance with the criminal laws of this state, and the charge against said defendant, Joan Kiger, being referred by said Juvenile Court judge, to the Boone Circuit Court and the grand jury thereof, for prosecution by indictment, as is more fully set out in the certified orders of said Juvenile Court attached here to and made a part hereof, said crime and felony here in charged being contrary to the form of the statutes in such cases made and provided and against the peace and dignity, of the commonwealth of Kentucky.

(Signed) "R. L. Vincent, Commonwealth Attorney, 15th Circuit Court District of Kentucky."

Judge Ward Yager, in receiving the indictments, followed statute requirements by asking E. A. Martin, jury foreman, if "in open court you are presenting two indictments;" that they were "voted upon by the grand jury in full session" . . . "all 12 members voting on the indictments" . . . with "nine or more members concurring in the indictments."

Mr. Martin answered in the affirmative.

Timely Food And Home Notes

Methods of Saving on food and clothes will take a lot of the busy house wives time for the duration.

A new meat canning bulletin written by Miss Florence Imlay and Pearl J. Haak, Foods specialist, University of Kentucky has just been received in the Home Agent's office in Burlington according to Mary Hood Gillaspie, Home Demonstration Agent. Anyone desiring a copy may call Burlington 412 or write Miss Gillaspie.

Following are some food and home notes given by U. S. Dept. of Agriculture, Washington.

Cure for Shine

Sandpapering and sponging are two of the treatments for shine on wool clothes found successfully by clothing specialists. A smooth, shiny place on the seat of trousers or back or sleeves of a coat can make the garment look shabby, but cleaning and then gently roughing up the nap is often all that is necessary to extinguish that shine and give the garment a new lease on life. Soil combined with wearing and matting of the wool fiber produces the shine. Sponging with cleaning fluid will remove much of the soil; sponging with water containing a few drops of ammonia or vinegar may help brighten the color. The nap may then be lifted by brisk brushing or even by fine sandpapering.

Leftover Vegetables are Good Mixers

Here are a few of the ways to put vegetables leftovers to good use: 1. Reheat mixed vegetables, such as peas, turnips, carrots, corn, and serve with hot white sauce. Or, for added flavor dress up a plain white sauce with bits of meat, fish, or grated cheese. Or give pep to the sauce with a dash of Worcestershire sauce or horseradish. 2. Combine leftover vegetables with cooked or canned tomatoes and bring to a boil. Then pour into a baking dish and cover with biscuit rounds. Bake in a hot oven until biscuits are nicely brown. 3. Make a vegetable scallop by mixing vegetables with

Miss Mary Ella Bedinger Returns Home.

Miss Mary Ella Bedinger returned home last Saturday after five happy years of service in the Archdeaconry of the Blue Ridge Mountains of Va.

Before returning home she enjoyed a weeks' pleasure trip to New York City, a christmas gift from her aunt, Mrs. Geston Garner and Mr. Garner of that City. Then spent two days at her Mission with Adieus, to her duties, people and friends she has loved. Miss Bedinger expected to spend a season at home, intending to go into defense work later, but may join the faculty at the New Haven School.

R. V. Lents Writes Personal Message

R. V. Lents, Executive Secretary of the Boone County Tuberculosis Association writes a personal message to the readers of this paper. Mr. Lents' message follows:

I have been asked many times why I am willing to spend so much of my time selling and promoting the sale of Tuberculosis Christmas Seals. I do devote a lot of time to this great cause and without a cent of compensation, but it gives me a great pleasure to help those who have tuberculosis.

I know how tuberculars suffer and linger, because I had a grandfather, grandmother, uncle, aunt, and sister to die of tuberculosis and another sister who was confined to a sanatorium for three years. I do not have the disease myself, and I am so thankful that I do not have it that I am willing to help those who have it and prevent others from taking the plague.

Surely it is not asking too much of the people to purchase all the Christmas Seals they can afford to buy, because the net proceeds of the sale will be used to help those who have tuberculosis and need aid. Heretofore we have not been sufficiently financed to pay for all the needs of any tubercular patient, but we have aided as many as we could and as much as our finances would permit. The more seals you buy the more we can aid others. We could spend as much as $300 now on one patient in the county, but our finances will not permit it. We want to help all patients as much as we can, and not spend all the money on one or two patients and have nothing at all for the others. Buy Christmas Seals Today.

R. V. Lents, Exec. Secy.

Shoulder Cape That Gives Bit of Warmth

CROCHET it now and have it ready to wear when the chilly fall days make their appearance—make one for a gift to a friend who appreciates a "bit of warmth" about the shoulders! The delightfully pretty, soft pink cape is 17 inches in depth, requires only 4 1-ounce balls of yarn and is very easily crocheted. Make it in a pastel shade or in dark colors for about-the-house wear.

What is the most welcome gift you can send to a man in the service? Well, surveys among service men themselves show that one of the favorite packages from home are cigarettes. And first choice among men in all the services is Camel, based on the actual sales records in Post Exchanges and Canteens. Though there are now Post Office restrictions on packages to overseas Army men, you can still send Camels to soldiers in the U. Combined Strength of All Allied Power Concentrated for 3-Pronged Thrust On Hitler's Jittery German Stronghold; New Plan Devised for Pacific Strategy

"Big Three" map sledge hammer blows vs. Axis from north, south and east, as illustrated on map. (See: Statesmen Confer.)

STATESMEN CONFER:
Map War Strategy

With the Big Four pledged to the destruction of Germany and Japan, all eyes turned to Cairo's historic Mena house where Turkey's Ismet Inonu met with President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill to discuss his country's role in the war.

Even as the statesmen met in the shadow of Egypt's massive pyramids, Germany played her hand, massing mechanized forces against Turkey's Balkan border in an obvious effort to influence the Turks' position.

F.D.R. and Churchill met with Inonu following their three-day conference with Premier Stalin of Russia in Teheran, Persia, where the Big Three pledged a finish fight against Germany from the east, west and south, and established the basis for a democratic community of nations.

Meeting previously with China's Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, F.D.R. and Churchill had vowed to force unconditional surrender on the Japs, and restore all territory the Nipponese have overrun since 1894.

Hurry Invasion Barges

Twenty thousand manufacturing firms have been given a special priority for the production of invasion craft and ordered to speed up deliveries during the fore part of 1944.

As was the case prior to the U. S. invasion of North Africa, shipbuilders have been given precedence over planes, high-octane gasoline and other urgency production programs, and the navy has curtailed orders for destroyer-escorts to provide additional facilities for constructing the self-propelled landing barges, amphibious trucks, tank landing vessels, etc.

After being given the go-ahead before the North African operations, shipbuilders turned out 750 million dollars worth of invasion craft in five months.

ITALY:
Nazis' Line Sags

Fighting over muddy slopes, U. S. troops gained foggy mountain heights overlooking the road to Rome, and along the Adriatic to the east, Gen. Bernard Montgomery's Eighth army punched its way up a coastal strip toward the highway hub of Pescara.

Although the Nazis' winter line sagged in some sectors under the steady pressure of Allied infantry and artillery, it recoiled in others, and on the U. S. front, the Germans clung to the pass at Mignano affording access to the road to Rome, while on the British front, the enemy massed to check the Tommies farther inland.

Fighting bravely in the rain, U. S. Doughboys with packs clambered up rocky slopes even too steep for mule supply teams.

WAR MANPOWER:
Cut Needs

Against the 2,000,000 new workers which the War Manpower commission estimated would be needed in the munitions industries by July, 1944, only 1,100,000 actually will be required, but military demands remain unchanged.

Because of changes in munitions requirements and the high rate of production achieved, WMC said 10,700,000 workers will be sufficient to meet schedules. Of the 1,100,000 new workers, most will be recruited from 3,500,000 women under 45.

To achieve their goal of 11,300,000 men by next July, the army and navy will actually call more than 2,000,000 during the year, as first planned, WMC said. Discharges and casualties will create a bigger drain to keep the ranks at full strength. Draft calls during January and February will continue at the current rate of 300,000 to 350,000 per month.

SOLDIERS' VOTE:
States' Control

Killing the Lucas (Ill.) - Green (R. I.) bill allowing soldiers overseas to vote under federal supervision, the senate adopted and sent to the bouse a measure inspired by Senator James Eastland (Miss.) leaving election rules up to the states.

Senator James Eastland

Under Eastland's proposal, states were asked to pass legislation allowing vets abroad to vote in local, state and federal elections by establishing a system of postcard applications for absentee ballots to be distributed by air mail free.

Included in the measure was an amendment by Senator Robert Taft (Ohio), assuring all parties of equal shares of campaign publicity.

SOUTHWEST PACIFIC:
MacArthur's New Plan

While U. S. and Australian troops slowly hacked their way through Southwest Pacific jungles, Gen. Douglas MacArthur's representative at the Cairo conference revealed the general's new master plan for defeating the Japanese.

MacArthur's plan calls for capture of the rich East Indies, cutting off the Japs' principal source of oil for their mechanized forces, and otherwise slashing their long supply lines to the home islands.

To achieve this objective, MacArthur has sought to lure the big Jap fleet out into the open for a finish fight, but the wily Nipponese have evaded battle, preferring to remain close to bases under air cover or behind reefy coral barriers.

HIGHLIGHTS . . . in the week's news

STEEL: The nation's steelworkers have better filled pay envelopes than ever before, the American Iron and Steel Institute reports. October's payroll totaled nearly 145 million dollars, compared with 143 million in September, and 128 million in October of last year. Average hourly wage is now just under $1.16. It was $1.08 a year ago. There are 615,000 on the payrolls now.

BLOCK-BUSTING: The English village of Deenthorpe has been completely wrecked by the crash of a Flying Fortress loaded with 6,000 pounds of bombs. Neither fliers nor villagers were injured, however, as the crew parachuted to safety, and then ran about arousing the townspeople, who fled to the fields. Ten minutes later, the plane exploded to bits.

SUPPLY OF U. S. PLANES

WASHINGTON.—Army Air Chief General "Hap" Arnold was called before a closed-door meeting of the senate Truman committee the other day to explain, among other things, why more planes weren't reaching the fighting fronts.

Arnold, while being cross-examined by the committee's number one aviation expert, Sen. Mon Wallgren of Washington, admitted one significant fact:

That the number of planes of all descriptions on our Pacific and European fighting fronts is lower than most people realize and lower than he desires, despite the fact that we are producing combat planes—bombers and fighters—at the rate of 8,000 a montb.

For a while, the cross-examination of Arnold made the sparks fly.

"I'm amazed to learn that the British have more combat planes in action than we have," grilled Senator Wallgren, "though we are producing more planes than the British. Why is that?"

"We're doing the best we can," retorted Arnold angrily. "You can't expect us to send planes to combat areas unless we bave trained crews to operate them. However, I can tell you that we have many more planes on the way, and ready for shipment, that will soon give us a great numerical advantage."

"That's fine," said Wallgren, "but why has it taken so long? It seems to me that we should have more than the number of planes you mention on the battle fronts when we are producing at the rate of 96,000 a year."

Arnold replied that some planes had been cracked up or damaged in training accidents in the United States, though trainer crashes were being reduced considerably. Also, many planes coming off assembly lines have to undergo "modification." For instance, planes slated for Alaskan duty have to be "winterized." Also, it takes longer than most people realize to deliver planes to combat areas.

"I'm not trying to interfere in your business, general," said the Washington senator, "but it seems to me that a pitifully small number of planes have been delivered to the fronts, considering our rate of production."

"I don't agree with you," responded Arnold hotly. "I think we've done very well under the circumstances."

The air chief went on to explain that most American pilots have a training course of 500 flying hours, compared to 150 hours for German pilots. One reason the Nazis have shortened their pilot-training courses is because they are running low on aviation gas reserves, Arnold said.

However, he did not entirely convince the committee that the ratio of planes delivered to the fighting fronts could not be considerably increased.

SYNTHETIC TIRES

Early next year, the American public will get its first real test of synthetic tires. These will not be passenger, but bus and truck tires, which will begin to come out of tire factories some time in January.

They will be hurried to the wheels of buses and trucks, now limping along on sharply reduced rations. Even in September, the allocation of 550,000 civilian bus and truck tires was inadequate. But now the figure has been reduced still further to 335,000 for November and December.

Operators of trucks and buses are worried about the new tires, knowing that early tests have shown they do not stand up under heavy loads. This in spite of the fact that they are only 70 per cent synthetic, with an admixture of 30 per cent natural rubber.

Result will be that truck and bus loads will have to be reduced all over the country. Since they are already operating above normal capacity, reduction of loads will mean reduction in the total performance of trucks and buses.

Of course, the synthetics may prove to be better than tests bave shown, but the trucking industry bas its fingers crossed.

BLOOD DONORS

Red Cross officials estimate that Americans are giving their blood for transfusions at the rate of one every two seconds. "We are bleeding 100,000 people a week."

But donations might be much larger if donors could be reached all over the country. Actually, there are only 33 cities where centers have been established.

CHRIST THE FULFILLMENT OF THE LAW

LESSON TEXT—Hebrews 1:1-9; Romans 10:4-10.

GOLDEN TEXT—God . . . hath in these last days spoken unto us by his Son.—Hebrews 1:1, 2.

The center of all Christian thinking is the fact that God has revealed Himself to man. This revelation is found in the Bible, for it is the Word of God. That is why the commandments which we have studied in recent weeks speak to us with such authority. They are not the expression of human opinion of how we should live. They are God's command which we are to obey.

The great and final revelation of God and His love was not the written Word—the Bible—but the Living Word—His Son. The coming of Christ is our lesson for next week, on Christmas Sunday. But this week we want to learn a little more of what His coming into the world meant. He was—

I. God's Last Word (Heb. 1:1-3). Through the ages God had been speaking through the prophets, constantly revealing Himself as a God of power, justice, holiness, truth and mercy.

In different ways and at various times (v. 1) He spoke through them, but always there was a pointing forward to the One who should come. Abraham was called out to found the nation (Gen. 12), and Jacob the family or tribe (Gen. 49), in which He should come. He was to be a prophet like Moses (Deut. 18) and of the kingly house of David (II Sam. 7). All the offerings of Leviticus spoke of His priestly service. Isaiah saw Him as both the reigning and the suffering Messiah (Isa. 53).

All this was incomplete until He came; and when He did, He revealed all the glory of God. He made perfect and final sacrifice for sin, and sat down (His work was finished) at God's right band (the place of power).

Let us be clear about this: In Christ God's revelation is perfect and complete. We need look for nothing more. The claims of those who appear with a "new light" or some mysterious hidden power are so obviously untrue that we ought not be at all interested.

But not only is Christ God's final Word, He is—

II. God's Best Word (Heb. 1:4-9). The prophets and their messages thrill our souls and move us to more earnest living. But the Christ is our very life as well as our Redeemer.

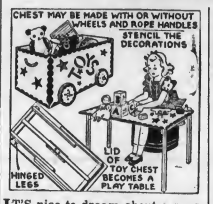
The angels are God's messengers—mighty and magnificent beings, superior in their way to man (Ps. 8:5). The early church made too much of angels (as do some groups today), but Protestantism of our day has made too little of them. They are great and powerful beings who minister on our behalf and who are honored in the loyal service they do for God.

But when they stand beside the Son of God, it becomes evident that He holds a place of incomparable glory and majesty. He is the highest revelation of God, the best Word that God could bave spoken to needy and sinful humanity.

We do well to think of who Christ is and what He has done. Just in this passage from Hebrews we find that He is the express image of all of God's glory; He is the upholder of all creation; He has the place of bonor and power at God's right hand; He is the begotten of the Father; His throne bas been established forever, and so on.

How well nigh unbelievable that this glorious One is also our Saviour. This is stated in verse 3, but is developed in our next point.

III. God's Saving Word (Rom. 10:4-10).



If sinful man were only permitted to look on His glory it would be a great privilege, but it would not help him in his desire for boliness and eternal joy. There was a "great gulf fixed" between sinful man and a boly God until the Son of Glory became the God-man, when the eternal Word became "flesh and dwelt among us" (Luke 2:14).

Christ as our Saviour is the "end of the law" to the believer (v. 4), not in the sense that He terminates the law by setting it aside, but by completing or fulfilling all of its requirements.

Just so the Christian is set free from the law, not in order that he may disobey it, but that he may keep it in the power and grace which Christ gives him. The Ten Commandments are the law of life for the Christian because he loves the Lord Jesus Christ and wants to obey Him. We do the things which the Decalogue require not to be saved thereby, but because we thereby honor the name of our Saviour.

The unbeliever, struggling under the burden of sin, says, "How can I come to know Him?" and we find the answer to verses 8-10. It is "by faith."

ON THE HOME FRONT
With RUTH WYETH SPEARS

IT'S nice to dream about a nursery where children have all their clutter and playthings but this winter we will be thinking about ways and means for everyone to have their special interests, hobbies and pleasure right in whichever cozy room that may be heated easily. That is the way it was done in the "good old days"; and there is certainly no reason that we can't do it now with a few special ideas of our own in the way of efficiency and comfort. Why not make a gay toy chest that may be wheeled into the room? And why can't the lid be used for a play table?

You may have scraps of plywood or composition board that may be used for the chest. Even the wheels of this chest are cut out of wood, and here is a good chance to use some of those odds and ends of bright paint that you have saved from time to time.

NOTE—Mrs. Spears has prepared directions for making this chest with wooden wheels, folding table top, with full size patterns and color guide for the stenciled decorations for the sides, ends, top and wheels. Price of pattern which is No. 352 is 15 cents. Address:

CONSERVATION NEWS
J. Casper Acre

Diversion ditches were constructed on the Geo. Walton farm near Rabbit Hash; the V. D. Gaines farm Bullittsburg; and C. C. Ransom farm at Verona recently. The diversion terraces built on the Walton farm will stop the flow of water from running the long way of the field. By using these ditches as guide rows the corn rows next year can be laid off on the contour. Mr. Walton has built several other ditches on this farm this fall. Next week he plans on building a diversion, that will carry the runoff water from four acres empting in into a large pond which up to the present time hasn't had enough drainage area. Other improvements that Mr. Walton plans on doing is putting a pipe thru the pond dam running it under the road supplying water to two other fields. Concreate troughts will be built in each of the fields for stock to drink from. Altho it might not have returned dollars and cents to Mr. Walton for doing such a good job cleaning out his fence rows, it no doubt makes him have more pride in his farming operations. Then too, who knows, this work might have prevented several wrecks.

The ditches built for Mr. Gaines will protect the hill in front of his home. Excess water from the garden had already started erosion. The diversion built on the G. C. Ransom farm will prevent barn water seapage from running into his new pond built last week by the Vest Construction Co.

Two pond sites were located on the Chester Grant farm and the Harper Construction Co. will build them next week.

Soil Survey maps were made on the following farms last week; Rev. W. M. Smith from Belleview, Ware Bros., formerly Williams Brothers farm at Bullittsville, John Crigler farm, East Bend Rd., D. J. Mahaney farm, Big Bone Rd., V. D. Gaines farm, Bullittsville, and John Boyers farm, Verona.

Application for complete farm plans were requested by Mr. Mahaney and Mr. Ware.

a white sauce or tomato sauce onion flavored. Top with bread crumbs and bake until bubbling and brown. 4. Make colorful salads of cold vegetables such as green peas, beans, yellow or white turnips, red beets and orange carrots. Mix with French dressing about half an hour before serving and keep cold for crispness, add pickle or chopped green pepper.

Nuts to Scratches

Small scratches on furniture often disappear if they are rubbed with nut meats, according to wood experts of U. S. Dept. of Agriculture. The oil in the nuts darkens and conceals the scratches. An oily nut like a pecan or butternut is best. Cut kernel with knife and rub cut side into scratch. A mixture of two thirds linsed oil and one-third turpentine is also good for rubbing scratches out of sight.

Care According to Container

Now that cooking fats, salad oils, coffee, shelled nuts and other fatty foods are selling in glass instead of tin, they need to be kept in a place that is dark as well as cool to hold their good flavor. Very often foods in paper containers will keep better if hey are removed from paper packages and put in tightly covered tins or glass jars.

LADY'S STOMACH WAS LIKE A GAS FACTORY; MEALS TURNED TO GAS

One lady said recently that her stomach used to be like a "gas factory!" That is, when she ate a meal it seemed to turn right into gas. She was always bloated, had awful stomach gas pains, daily headaches and constant irregular bowel action. Now, however, this lady says she is FREE of STOMACH GAS and she says the change is due to taking ERB-HELP. Her meals agree with her. No gas or bloat after eating. Headaches and constipation are gone. "Oh! what relief!" states this lady. "Why don't other gas and constipation suffers get ERB-HELP?"

UNITED NATIONS AT WAR

Prepared by the Rural Press Section

To see representatives of 44 nations representing 80 percent of the peoples of the world get together and discuss one big fundamental problem, was an inspiration to one veteran reporter who covered recent meetings of the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration (UNRRA) in Atlantic City. "It was democracy at work," he declared. A prevading thought seemed to be "no dole but help every country to help itself," he said. It was striking and possibly significant, he pointed out, that representatives were able to use a common language—English.

Sees Exchange With Russians

Commenting upon post-war possibilities of trade with Russia, William L. Batt, vice-chairman of the War Production Board, said that Russia could furnish platinum and iridium, of which the United States has "virtually none . . . manganese which a fully operative steel industry may need . . . hides to supplement the world's supply," certain grades of wood, and Russian furs. He cited mining machinery as an example of American-made goods which the Russians need and for which he said he expected an increased demand at the end of the war.

Foods For Russia and Britain

Grain is the main food the U. S. is sending to Russia, according to the War Food Administration, while meat, primarily pork, will be the largest item among foods to be shipped to Great Britain in the next 10 months. In Great Britain, supplies from the U. S. will be shared by civilians and the armed forces; in Russia, nearly all will go direct to the army.

Brazilian Cadets Train In U. S.

Brazilian cadets are receiving intensive instruction at 11 U. S. Army Air Force training schools and air fields. They received the same training as U. S. cadets, study the same courses, and receive the same privileges. Most of the Brazilian cadets will return to their country upon graduation, to serve as second lieutenants in their nation's air force. Others will remain in the U. S. to take advanced training.

Germans Are Learning

A joke currently making the rounds among German soldiers, according to a report from overseas reaching the Office of War Information recently, runs as follows: "It is very easy to recognize Allied planes. If you see more than three planes at a time, you know they are Allied planes."

Poles Damage Engines

Nine hundred damaged railway engines recently passed through Warsaw en route to a German repair shop. Large numbers of these were damaged as a result of action by Polish underground bands which are severely hampering the transport of supplies to the Russian front.

New Paper Uses Ex-Nazi Presses

Mexico City's new English newspaper, the Mexico City Herald, is being printed on presses which once belonged to the defunct Nuevo Dia, a pro-Nazi paper. With "Good-Will Makes Neighbors" as its slogan, the new paper will attempt to interpret Mexico to English-speaking visitors and residents and show them "what Mexico is and what the Mexican people are thinking."

Subtle Resistance

A Dutch underground newspaper urges Dutchmen to write on every wall, on every tree, every fence, and every cafe table such names as Tunis, Libya, Catania, Orel, Hamburg, Cologne. The exhorts: "Never let them forget that the tide has turned and we are on the road to victory . . ."

Take Up Life In Australia

On the outskirts of Melbourne, Australia, Indonesians and Chinese from the Netherlands East Indies now have set up a replica of the life as it was in their native islands before they escaped ahead of the Japanese. Women still wear the traditional sarong and prepare their own native foods in community kitchens, but men dress western style and work as skilled craftsmen in factories that turn out allied aircraft. Men belong to the labor union, sharing the duties and privileges of Australian workers.

Little Meat In Holland

Meat consumption of the people of Holland has been reduced from an average of a pound and three quarters a week before the war to two and a quarter ounces and, at time, even nothing under the German occupation. This was reported to Aneta, official Netherlands news agency, by a former employee of the Netherlands meat rationing service who recently escaped to England. Not only are quantities small, but quality is much poorer, and pork is no longer available at all.

Bread Ration In Slovakia Low

Slovakia has the third lowest ration of bread in Europe, according to a newspaper issued and edited by the Czechoslovak army in Great Britain. Only Greece and Finland have lower bread rations, the paper said.

Destroy Threashing Machines

Saboteurs in France destroy, not crops, but threashing machines, because the Germans can only take grain to Germany, they cannot take sheaves. Peasants thus keep their grain and can thresh it by other methods.

Chinese Hail Cairo Declaration

"The Cairo Declaration is the first happy fulfillment of what China has been fighting and shedding blood for all these 12 years," Dr. C. L. Hsia, director of Chinese News Service, said recently. "The promised return of Manchuria, Formosa, and the Pescadores to China will be regarded by the Chinese people as the greatest news of this war . . . China rejoices with the people of Korea in their promised independence.

Quezon Praises Congress

President Manuel L. Quezon of the Philippines recently expressed his gratification over the action of the United States Congress in repealing the Chinese Exclusion laws. "I hope," he said, "that the right to acquire American citizenship . . . will also be granted my countrymen.

NICHOLSON

"Fight the good fight of faith, and lay hold of eternal life". The christian life is a spiritual warfare, as the Army uses only strong men, all are urged to put on the whole armour of God that they may be enabled to withstand the evil days. "Faith is the key that unlocks the door of God's hidden riches."

Deeply appreciated was the recent kindness of Mrs Ida Stephens and Mrs. Addie Chambers.

Mr. and Mrs. Forest Popp entertained with a lovely children's party Tuesday evening, Dec. 7th, in honor of the sixth birthday anniversary of their darling daughter, and grandaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Fisk, little Miss Peggy Jo. The little hosess received numerous tokens of affection and delightful refreshments of ice cream and cake were served to the interesting group. At a late hour they reluctantly departed, wishing for her many more Happy Birthdays. Enjoying the festivities were: Jackie Morgan, Bessie Morgan, Allen Butler, Johnny Butler, Nellie Fisk, Janet Fisk, Betty Jo Weldon, Kirtley Weldon, Shirley Collins, Phyllis Williams, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Fisk, Mrs Helen Collins, Mrs. Harry Fisk and others.

Can You Picture KENTUCKY without Newspapers?

Every hour of the day headline news of overwhelming interest to every person in Kentucky is being made all over the world. But without our modern communication systems and particularly our newspapers it would be next to impossible to find out what's going on.

Getting even closer to home, we wouldn't know what local boys are back on furlough—what the ball scores are—who's getting married and when—what's happening in the comic-strip world—what events are taking place all over town.

All of us should feel proud of the fine job newspapers are doing to keep Kentucky in touch with the times. It's a strong and free press, serving free people—one of the first things the dictators would suppress if they had the chance! And it would be hard to overestimate the part played by Kentucky's great dailies and weekly newspapers in furthering the war effort. Nearly a million people buy these papers—far greater numbers read them—the whole State relies upon them for information and inspiration.

For this reason Greyhound depends upon such newspapers as this one to carry its information on bus service to those Kentuckians who travel. Greyhound, in turn, carries many newspapers to rural areas not served by any other transportation system.

As fellow citizens of this State, the Greyhound Lines take much pleasure in helping to make near neighbors and good neighbors of all the communities we serve in Kentucky—linking them to each other and to the rest of the country, as newspapers do.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

The war and the crude rubber shortage have given emphasis to synthetic rubber, but for more than 70 years prominent chemists in Europe, Russia and the United States have been working on the development of this substitute for natural rubber.

One tapper can collect about six gallons of latex from a morning's tapping on a rubber plantation. This yields about 20 pounds of rubber.

The first scientific or commercial interest taken in rubber was evidenced in 1745, when Charles Marie de la Condamine made a report on this substance to the Paris Academy of Sciences.

McCLURE SYNDICATE - W.N.U. FEATURES

Jan Payson sings in the floor show at the Devon Arms. She used to sell magazines there, and support her invalid sister, Dora, but Paul Harris, the manager, discharged her when she was late for work on Thanksgiving. He gave her the floor show when he found that the rich William Anthony Deverest knew her, thinking Deverest's influence would bring patronage. Jan, however, thinks Deverest is his own chauffeur, Tony Williams; and he does not dare enlighten her because she tells him she hates Deverest because of his wealth. The show is not a success—Deverest does not bring his friends. Harris blames Jan and she tells Tony her predicament—that Harris thinks she knows Deverest.

CHAPTER IV

The sunny morning wore on. Jan returned to the room after rehearsal, glowing after a bit of unexpected praise from Zambrini. A new verse had been added to her Jingle Bells song, and the orchestra leader declared she had learned it perfectly. Dora was napping, so Jan retired to the bedroom and busied herself with the little details of mending which kept her show costumes in good condition. The muted ring of the house telephone interrupted her and wakened Dora. The clerk was announcing the arrival of Dr. Curtis.

Jan stood watching the doctor's deft movements, her amber eyes glowing with the gratitude she felt for him. How wonderful it must be to have spent a lifetime bringing happiness to others! Of course Dr. Curtis had not really spent a lifetime yet, Jan reminded herself; Tony had revealed that the doctor was only a little over thirty-five. Then suddenly Dr. Curtis looked at her above Dora's fair head and said quietly:

"I think this young lady is about ready for our experiment."

Jan could only stand and stare at him. He had always refused to admit that the operation would be anything more than experimental in nature, although Jan suspected he hoped it would give Dora a new life.

"Oh, Jan, isn't this wonderful?"

"Of course, dear," Jan swallowed the lump in her throat and tried to be casual as she answered her sister. But she could not overcome the horrible fear that Dr. Curtis' simple statement had aroused. Dora—her helpless little sister—lying on an operating table! The smell of ether—those dreadful hours of waiting without being able to help. She heard Dr. Curtis' voice as from a great distance.

"Your sister is going to be fine, Jan. She's been one of my best patients so far, and I know she isn't going to disappoint me now." He patted the pale slender hand lying on the coverlet and rose briskly. Only then did Jan remember that the question of paying for the operation had not been discussed.

"But—but Dr. Curtis! The money—"

His warm hand rested reassuringly on her shoulder a moment. "I haven't mentioned it, have I?" he asked, smiling.

The morning after Dora's operation, Jan returned to the hotel with feet that fairly danced across the lobby.

"Dr. Curtis said she would surely be home in time for New Year's," Jan said breathlessly to Paul Harris. For once his iron reserve seemed broken and he had to clear his throat before he spoke.

"I—I'm delighted to hear it, Jan. Dora has become very—very firmly established in my—in all our affections. Last night when you came back from the hospital I was afraid . . ."

Jan looked up and remembered that she had heard Paul's wife had died in a hospital following an operation. For the first time he seemed to her not a stern and worldly hotel manager, but a sympathetic friend.

Later, when she answered a ring at the door, Jan was surprised to see her former landlady, Mrs. Mallord, framed in the doorway.

"I would have taken them to the hospital to your sister, only I couldn't get there during visiting hours . . ." she began. "I'm taking a chance being away as long as this, anyhow. How is the poor darling?"

"She's just fine, Mrs. Mallord. Everybody says she couldn't be better." Jan pulled forward an easy chair and settled her visitor comfortably. "Let me help you off with your coat."

"I don't know as that's necessary," the woman replied, smoothing the plaid design over her knee. "It's new, isn't it? And I do like your hat, Mrs. Mallord."

"I'm after having myself a complete new outfit."

"Really, Mrs. Mallord! Don't tell me someone's left you a fortune?"

"Well, now—and that's just what happened," began Mrs. Mallord. "You mean your uncle had money?" Jan interrupted.

"He did that. And he's after leaving it all to me.

"Oh, Mrs. Mallord—I'm more glad about it than I can tell you," Jan cried. "Now you won't have to work any more."

"Listen to the child!" scoffed Mrs. Mallord. "And what should I be doing if not working, as I've done all my life? No, four hundred and eighty-seven dollars is what I had left after I bought some new clothes for myself and Jack, as the lawyer advised me to do. Imagine, if you can, me taking advice from a lawyer! But I put the rest of the money away and now I can die easy."

In the back of her mind Jan was going over what Mrs. Mallord had said about her legacy and Jack's club. It was all wonderfully good fortune for the Mallord family. Kind of Tony, too, to take such an interest in the boy. He must be spending quite a lot of money on him.

Suddenly, Jan was struck by another thought. That legacy of Mrs. Mallord's—it was rather funny that this uncle should turn out to have money only after Tony Williams had called at Jan's old home!

Jan picked up her purse and went down to the lobby. In another week it would be hung with evergreens; Paul had already told her that the huge wreaths of balsam which were especially made for the Devon Arms every year had been ordered and were even then, probably, getting dressed up in red satin bows.

"Jan!"

"Why, Dr. Curtis!" exclaimed Jan.

"Dora couldn't be better, nor in better hands," said the doctor, "but I've been wondering if somebody shouldn't look after you. In fact, I was coming up to prescribe luncheon for you with me."

"Oh!"

Jan could not repress an exclamation that was half pleasure at the thought that such a busy doctor should find time to think of her—and yet dismay at the recollection that she was even then on her way to meet Tony. She explained as well as she could that the luncheon date was out of the question; she was meeting a friend within a few minutes.

"Imitation!" cried the now wide-awake and astonished Clem.

"A girl friend? I'll take you both to lunch."

Jan's color rose a shade higher, as she explained haltingly that it was not a girl she was meeting. As Dr. Curtis still stood looking at her, with that very intent and friendly glance, she grew more embarrassed.

"My date is with Tony Williams," she said at last, and Bradford Curtis thought he had never seen a more charming confusion. He grinned as he thought of Tony's face when he should appear, and promised himself that he would see to it that his friend acted perfectly the role of chauffeur he had picked out for himself.

"Why, that's just fine!" he beamed. "I know Tony well. I'd rather have lunch with you alone, but since we must have Tony with us, I don't mind a bit."

Tony had parked the car around the corner, the usual parking place, out of sight of the hotel. And there was Tony behind the wheel of the car. He had caught sight of them, and his face was alive with welcome.

"Oh, dear," thought Jan to herself, "wait 'til he hears!"

"Hello, Tony," she began as they stopped beside the car and Tony leaped to the ground. "Dr. Curtis met me as I was leaving the hotel . . ." she stopped awkwardly.

"How are you, Tony?" said Dr. Curtis, looking, Jan thought, unnecessarily patronizing. This was going to be worse than she had imagined.

"Very well, thank you—sir," Tony added, apparently as an afterthought.

There was a big crowd at the show that night. The young people were home from school and college for the holidays, and pre-Christmas festivity filled the air. Jan's song was applauded with gusto, and she had to give two encores after the Jingle Bells number. Later Paul Harris sent word to her that a group of prominent business men had taken a table and were anxious to have her and some of the other girls share it with them.

Jan found herself between a man who introduced himself as "Mr. Frazier, a right smart lawyer to you," and Clem Hallack, the big "brooch and bracelet man" introduced to her by Mickey.

Jan smiled a little wanly, and shook her head in response to the insistent, "What'll it be?"

"Oh, no. Please. Nothing to drink," murmured Jan hastily, and pushed away the card the waiter offered her.

With a pudgy forefinger Clem Hallack reached out and touched the bracelet gleaming on Jan's wrist. "Nice liddle junk y'lle there."

"It is pretty, isn't it?" agreed Jan, "I think it's wonderful the way they can imitate diamonds nowadays."

"Imitation!" cried the now wide-awake and astonished Clem. "That's no imitation, sister. Looks to me like something out of the Rajah's jewel chest!"

By this time their talk had attracted the attention of the rest of the table.

"If I were in the mood I could tell you where that shining bauble came from," observed the grinning Mickey. "If you look closely you will probably find the initials W. A. D." She broke off suddenly, and a look of pain crossed her face.

The rest of the evening was a nightmare to Jan. Sick with horror, she had no idea how she finally managed to get away from the others and escape to her apartment.

Mickey's reference to supposed initials inside her bracelet had not disturbed her. She had steeled herself to such references, feeling that it was part of the role that, for Dora's sake, she had to play. It was the knowledge that the bracelet Tony had given her was valuable that frightened her.

"Some party last night."

Molly, the telephone operator, turned eyes full of eager curiosity toward Jan, stopping her as she tried to pass her switchboard. Jan smiled, but refused to be drawn into conversation.

"Sorry, Molly, I have to rush," apologized Jan, and fled up the lobby.

Her mind was so full of Brad Curtis that she had forgotten Tony and the problem that confronted her as she entered the hospital reception room. Tony, standing by the window, whirled at the sound of the opening door and was puzzled as he saw the light go out of Jan's face.

"Hello, Tony," Jan said lifelessly, in answer to the "Hi!" that was his habitual greeting accompanied by a hand snapped upward in salute. "Let's get going. Dora's probably waiting."

The uneasiness that had gripped her earlier in the day enveloped Jan again like a cloak as she stepped into the car. Tony used this car as if it were his own. The thought stabbed her consciousness, so that she spoke sharply before Tony pressed the starter.

"I've decided not to go shopping." They had planned that this was to be a shopping day.

"You haven't time?" Tony asked.

"I have to do something else." She fished around in her bag and drew out the bracelet that the odious Clem had admired the night before. "Take it back, Tony. I can't bear to think that you—"

"That I what?" said Tony, mystified, making no move to take the bracelet. She slipped it into his overcoat pocket.

"Let's not talk about it," said Jan. "Only—only don't give me anything like that again. Please, Tony."

That wasn't what she had meant to say. She had meant to be stern, and at the same time pleading. She would coax him to check the truth about the bracelet, make him promise to return it however he had managed to come by it. Now, with Tony beside her, Jan found it hard to speak at all.

There was a silence. "Okay," said Tony finally. "If that's the way you want it."

"If you don't want to go shopping, maybe you have time for a ride?" Tony asked.

"I think not," said Jan. "You've run up a lot of mileage on my account. I think that had better stop, too."

"Oh, there you are, Jan!"

Paul Harris, stepping from behind a screen, set down the Christmas wreath he was carrying close to a pile of evergreens on the table.

Jan's face paled. Paul had given her suite to someone else! A wave of anger swept over her suddenly.

"Somebody else taking these rooms?" she asked, trying to keep the quiver out of her voice.

Paul, to her astonishment, moved across the room and pinched her cheek.

"Always the little worrier," he commented. "I'll have to begin giving you lessons, Jan, in looking on the bright side of things. We have to have the place looking nice for our Dora when she comes home, and of course we want you to be pleased too, Jan."

There Must Have Been Politicos at the Beginning

Over a cup of coffee at the club a doctor claimed that his was the oldest profession. "For," he said, "Adam's rib couldn't have been removed without a surgeon to perform the operation."

"Yes," said the architect, "but before that the world had to be created out of chaos. And, you will admit, creation implies an architect."

There was a politician in their midst.

"Hold on, gentlemen," he said. "You must carry it back still further—to chaos. And where there is chaos there must be a politician."

Watch Your Kidneys!

Help Them Cleanse the Blood of Harmful Body Waste

Your kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as Nature intended—fail to remove impurities that, if retained, may poison the system and upset the whole body machinery.

Symptoms may be nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—a feeling of nervous anxiety and loss of pep and strength. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

There should be no doubt that prompt treatment is wiser than neglect. Use Doan's Pills. Doan's have been winning new friends for more than forty years. They have a nation-wide reputation. Are recommended by grateful people the country over. Ask your neighbor!

The Walton Advertiser,
Walton, Ky.

Dear Friends,

I have been receiving your paper and I do appreciate you sending it to me, for we are always glad to hear some news from home.

Camp life is not near as nice as our happy homes, but we are comfortable here, and there is a war to be won, and we are each glad to do our part, that our homes may remain as they are and Victory may soon be ours and a lasting Peace may prevail over the whole world. Camp Wheeler is a large camp, a regular city itself, located eight miles from Macon, Georgia.

Thanks again for sending the paper for I do look forward to getting it.

Sincerely,
Pvt. Albert A. Hunt

Sgt. James O. Dudgeon writes from somewhere in England that it is a beautiful country and the English people are very nice to the American boys. He said he only wished that the American people could see what the English people are doing to win this war, he said they wouldn't find so much to complain about if they only knew. J. O. says that dear old Walton would look good to him, but they had a job to do before they come back and he didn't think it would be long before that time comes. He says to tell everyone hello and to write, for it sure makes them feel good to get news from home even if it was old, it would be new to them.

A Friend.

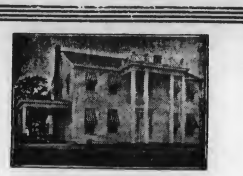
Brown Points For Waste Fats

For every pound of fat a housewife turns in to her meat dealer or other fat salvager, she will receive two brown points, beginning December 13. "But most important," Herbert M. Faust, Director of WPB's Salvage Division said, "Within a month the fat will be transformed into war materials and on the way to the fighting fronts." He reminded housewives to save grease from turkeys, geese, ducks, and chickens, for the manufacture of war products.

Suspend Slaughter Quotas

To facilitate marketing and slaughter of record numbers of livestock produced by U. S. farmers, slaughter quotas (for civilian consumption) until further notice have been suspended by the War Food Administration.

Must Collect Points For Pork



Although WFA has temporarily lifted all its restrictions on the amount of pork a farmer may deliver to persons living off his farm, he must continue to collect ration points for all rationed meats, OPA said recently. If pork is transferred point-free, it means that a great deal of this food will find its way into the black market and will be unavailable to legitimate consumers.

Approximately 18,000 pounds of pork, valued at $16,535 were produced by 325 4-H club members in Logan county.

More Farm Machinery In '44

An improved outlook for new farm machinery in 1944 is forseen by the War Food Administration. Raw materials authorized by WPB to make planting, tillage, and harvesting equipment during the year provide for about twice the quantity produced in 1943, or almost 80 per cent of the production in 1940—a year in which manufacture was relatively large. The manufacture of repair parts will be unrestricted.

In Christian county, members of colored homemakers' clubs have doubled the usual amount canned to make 45,967 quarts.

WAR BONDS

Remember when you could walk into our office at this time of the year and see row on row of gleaming appliances on display . . . ready to bring joy and happiness to many a home on Christmas Day?

It's a different story now. Our sales floor is empty because electrical appliances have gone to war. But they'll be back some day—better than ever—to again occupy the spotlight of favor at Christmastime.

Until then, buy War Bonds—the most timely and thoughtful gift of all. Help speed Victory and the return of our fighting men to their homes. The more bonds you buy, the sooner the war will end and the sooner you can enjoy the better electrical appliances and better electrical living to come.

Association Sets Quota For Local Xmas Seal Sale

The Boone County Tuberculosis Association has set the 1943 Christmas Seal Sale at $725 for Boone County according to figures released by R. V. Lents, Executive Secretary of the Association. Mr. Lents also stated that only 30% of the quota has been reached. The quota for each community as set by the association is as follows:

Belleview	$ 50.00
Burlington	100.00
Constance	50.00
Florence	125.00
Hamilton	30.00
Hebron	125.00
Petersburg	40.00
Union	50.00
Verona	30.00
Walton	125.00

Help your community to reach its quota by purchasing as many Christmas Seals as you can afford to buy. Fight Hitler with Christmas Seals, and help to wipe out tuberculosis one of our greatest enemies.

Attorney's Mother Dies in Maysville.

Mrs. Maria Walton, 70, lifelong resident of Mason County and mother of E. H. Walton, Covington and Crittenden, Ky. attorney, and Merrill Walton, Mason County deputy sheriff, died Tuesday at her home, 315 Plum Street, Maysville.

She also leaves another son, Pvt. John James Walton, Camp Lee, Va.; two daughters, Mrs. Mary Ann Collis, teacher at Maysick High School, and Mrs. Catherine Reisser, Maysville; two brothers, William and Pat Ryan, and two sisters, Mrs. Nan Belfry and Mrs. Kate Guilfoyle, all of Maysick, and four grandchildren.

Services were held at Maysville.

Happy Helpers Class Hold Annual Dinner.

The Happy Helpers Class of the Methodist Church School held its annual dinner at the Stephen's Resturant on Thursday evening, December 16th. It has been the custom of the group to have a Turkey Dinner in the dining room of the church and bring toys for the Methodist Orphan's Home, but this year due to so many of the women of the class working it was decided to hold the dinner and meeting at the Resturant and since toys are scarce and inferior it was agreed to take a cash offering for the Home instead of sending toys. After the delicious dinner served by Mrs. Stephens and her assistants a business meeting was held at which time was the annual election of class officers.

The results of the election were: President, C. C. Pruitt; Vice-president, Mrs. C. O. Carlisle; Secretary, Emma Jane Miller, and Treasurer, Mrs. Mary Stephenson.

Members and their families attending were: Rev. and Mrs. D. E. Bedinger; Mr. and Mrs. Dan Bedinger; Rev. and Mrs. C. G. Dearing, Ella Mae, Ruth, and Louise Dearing; Mr and Mrs. C. O. Crlisle and Guy Olen Carlisle; Mr and Mrs. Howard Stephenson; Mr and Mrs. Scott Lancaser; Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Wllace; Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Fooks and Althea Fooks; Mrs. Geo. Hamilton; Miss Emma Jane Miller and Mrs Sam Hudson.

Kidd—Wallace

Barnett L. Kidd, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Kidd of Erlanger and Miss Hilda Wallace the attractive daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Wallace of Verona were united in marrage Saturday evening, Dec. 18th at the home of the Rev. R. F. DeMoisey who performed the ceremony.

They were accompanied by Miss Virgina Rose Clemons, a friend of the bride.

Mr. Kidd is employed as a welder in defense work. The happy young couple expect to make their home in Erlanger for awhile.

There is Hope

OUR OWN community, like the rest of the world, has been shaken by the thunder of guns. This thunder echoes in our ears as we once more celebrate the birth of the Prince of Peace.

Yet this newspaper sees no irony in the scars of war and the message of hope that is Christmas.

For it is the everlasting hope of Christmas that makes it such a vital force in our lives. That hope is one of a never ending period of "Peace on Earth."

While it is true that the columns of this paper since last Christmas have been dominated by the effects of the war lords on our normal way of living—we know that the peace-loving "little" men of goodwill far outnumber the evil.

These "little" people are the citizens of this community and other communities like it. And it was for these same "little" people that Christ came into this world 1943 years ago.

So Christmas belongs to them and not to those who plunge the world into darkness.

Let this true spirit of Christmas dominate your thinking and you can say to all your friends as we now say to you—

A Merry Christmas

There'll always be a Christmas

To have served you in 1943 has been a pleasure and a privilege. We hope we have served you well enough to merit your patronage in 1944. Right now we want to say

Happy New Year To You and Yours

Black—Lovelace

Ella Ruth Black, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Claude Black of Union and Ernest Wayne Lovelace son of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Lovelace of Covington were united in marriage at the home of the bride at 12 o'clock Friday, December 10th by Rev. S. B. Godbey.

The couple were attended by Miss Catherine Carroll and Wm. T. Woods.

The bride was attired in blue and white and the bridesmaid wore green with brown.

Miss Dorothy Shields rendered the wedding march and Miss Shields and Miss Mary Lou Jones sang, "I Love You Truly". Other guests included Mrs. Harry Huff and children, Rev. and Mrs. S. B. Godbey, Mr. and Mrs. Tom Ross and the brides parents.

A lovely dinner was served by Mrs. Black.

Much happiness is extended to this couple for a long and prosperous life together.

Union Christmas Service Held

A very beautiful and impressive Union Christmas Service was held at the Methodist Church Sunday night, December 19th. Twenty-four individuals had a part in the service, (the number being equally divided from each church) and everyone did his or her part in a fine way. The large crowd that attend the service expressed their appreciation of the splendid singing and music and also of the beautiful way that the auditorium was decorated with those things that gives one the Christmas spirit.

The subject was based on the Advent and Nativity, and most certainly everyone must have gone home feeling the need of Peace On Earth Good Will Toward Men.

No Advertiser To Be Published Next Week.

As has been the custom for the past few years, we will suspend publication next week, for a short vacation, and to get things in order after the Christmas rush.

To our faithful correspondents, subscribers, advertisers and friends we want to express our appreciation for your co-operation during the past year.

We have done our best to serve you and hope that we may be of greater service to you and your community in the coming year.

May each of you have a pleasant Christmas Season. We'll be seeing you again on Jan 6th.

Pvt. and Mrs. Allen Boss of Cummersville, Ind. visited their parents, Mrs. Alda Boss of Crittenden and Mr. and Mrs. Conner Littrell of near Walton last Wednesday. He was inducted in the U. S. Navy at Indianapolis, Ind. last Friday and expect to be sent elsewhere soon.

Aerial Engineer Returns To Camp.

M-Sgt. C. M. Howe returned to Dyersburg, Tenn. Sunday nite after a twenty day furlough with relatives and friends. M-Sgt. Howe is a holder of the Destinguished Flying Cross, Silver Star, Purple Heart, Citated by the President four times for Gallantry, and other decorations won by feats while flying in various theaters of war. He suffered wounds while serving in the South Pacific. M-Sgt. Howe has been on two missions over Berlin. He has one more mission across then his 4000 hours in the air is complete. Howe is an Aerial Engineer and turrit gunner on a 4-motor bomber.

This was his first visit home in seven years. M-Sgt. Howe is a brother to Mrs. Thelma H. Smith of South Walton.

Willing Workers Class

The Willing Workers Class met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Ransler on Friday, December 17. Mr. Ransler has been the teacher of the class for more than twenty five years and each year at this time he and Mrs. Ransler have the class for its Christmas Party and turkey dinner.

After the delecious turkey dinner with all its trimmings was served the business session was conducted by Mrs. Clayton Jones, the new president. Then followed the distribution of Christmas presents and the selection of new silent friends for the coming year.

This class is and has been supporting two orphans in the home at Louisville, Ky. for the past 18 years. A box of gifts that would make glad the heart of any boy or girl was displayed to the members before being sent to the boys and girls. The class owes its thanks to Mrs. Wendell Rouse and Mrs. John Campbell for getting together these things.

Those present were: Rev. and Mrs. George Caroland, Mr. and Mrs. Cloyd Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. Powers Conrad, Mr. and Mrs. Russell Hall, Mr. and Mrs. Otto Watson, Mr. and Mrs. Wendell Rouse, Mr. and Mrs. C. Rev. R. F. DeMoisey was called to Cincinnati Monday morning on account of the serious illness of his brother, Eugene DeMoisey who was operated upon at Bethesda Hospital.

Sales To Close For Holiday

The average price paid at the Kenton County Loose Leaf Tobacco Warehouse, Covington, Monday was $44.74, with the day's receipts totaling $51,765.95, Herbert Whitley, general manager, reported. Monday's sales were the largest this season.

The high basket price for the day was $60 with low basket going for $13.

Sales at the Kenton Warehouse ended Wednesday for the holiday season, it was reported, though the warehouse will remain open to receive tobacco during that time. Sales will be resumed Jan. 3.

The Covington market is one of the five in the state with averages of better than $47 per hundred pounds for the season, the War Food Administration of Louisville reported.

Joan Kiger Found Not Guilty; Other Charges Dismissed

Joan Kiger was found not guilty of murdering her brother, Jerry Kiger, at 10:45 o'clock Tuesday night, after a jury of 12 Boone County men had deliberated for over four hours in Circut Court at Burlington.

The 16-year-old high school girl who had awaited the verdict after a trial lasting five days, said "I'm very glad., after A. D. Yelton, Circuit Clerk read the verdict.

Her relatives immediately showered her with hugs and kisses as she smiled, and her girl friends wept in the first row of seats in the courtroom. Joan had sat with these friends during most of the time she waited for the answer to her fate.

After the verdict was announced the state moved for dismissal of all other indictments against the girl and her mother, who was accused with her but was not on trial. It was explained that the prosecution had considered the case against Joan in the slaying of her brother its best case; so if a conviction couldn't be obtained there, it would be useless to try again. The motion was granted by Judge Ward Yager, who ordered the release of Joan's bondsmen.

The case of the girl who says she shot her brother and her father when suffering from a nightmare, went to the jury after an impassioned plea for dismissal by Sawyer A. Smith, defense attorney, and a demand for death in the electric chair by Raymond L. Vincent, Commonwealth Attorney.

These followed almost a whole day of testimony in which the Kiger family physiciari and a psychiatrist said that it was entirely possible for the girl to have been having a nightmare when she killed her brother, Jerry, who was 6 years old, and her father, Carl C. Kiger, 49.

Former Walton Lady Passes

Mrs. Emma Menefee, wife of the late Dr. B. K. Menefee and former resident of Walton, passed away Tuesday night at the home of her daughter, Mrs. John Allison in Gardner, Ill.

Mrs. Menefee suffered a stroke about two weeks ago. She had been in ill health for some time, spending the summer with her daughter, Mrs. Rod Hughes and was expecting to be with Mrs. Allison during the winter.

She was brought to the Chambers and Grubbs funeral home Wednesday, where the Grand Chapter of the Eastern Star of Kentucky will hold services (today), Thursday evening, Dec. 23rd at 8 p. m. and the funeral services will be held Friday afternoon at 1:30 with Rev. Keneth Bowen, of the Madison Avenue Christian Church, Covington, having charge of the services with burial in the Gardnersville Cemetery.

Mrs. Menefee and family lived in Walton many years before moving to Covington.

She was a member of the Christian Church, being Superintendent of the Sunday School of the Walton Christian Church at one time, also Worthy Matron of the Walton Eastern Star and Grand Worthy Matron of the Eastern Star of Kentucky. A lovely Christian character who will long be remembered for her many acts of kindness.

She leaves two devoted daughters, Mrs. John Allison of Gardiner, Ill. and Mrs. Rod Hughes of Crittenden, and three grandchildren, Mrs. Dorothy Gardiner and Perry and Jack Hughes, other relatives and a host of friends.

Chambers and Grubbs were in charge of the funeral arrangements.

UNITED NATIONS at War

Prepared by the Rural Press Section

New Resources For Allied Cause

Colombia's entrance into the war November 27 makes it the fourteenth American republic to join actively in the struggle against the Nazis. The importance of Colombia's action to the Allies, and to the United States in particular, lies in Colombia's long coastline, which gives it access to the approaches to the Panama Canal from two oceans. Colombia also is an important source of gold, platinum, silver, copper, lead, manganese, and precious stones.

Americans Extend Health Work

Eighteen American republics, with the cooperation of the U. S., are participating in the inter-American health and sanitation program to support the wartime mobilization of hemisphere resources. Many of the production projects, such as rubber and fibers are in tropical and semi-tropical areas where malaria and other ills hinder development work. In some of the highland mining countries the chief problem is tuberculosis. Health projects are organized accordingly.

Plant Explorers Speak Spanish

Plant scientists of the U. S. Department of Agriculture now speak Spanish. They have learned the language because many war-important products—rubber, fiber crops, cinchona for quinine—are found in Latin America.

Mexico Grows Strategic Plants

Eight important new types of vegetation have been introduced into Mexico to furnish medicine and insecticides for the United Nations and provide agricultural diversification which is expected to continue after the war. The plants under cultivation include red squill, a powerful rat-killer that does not harm human beings or domestic animals; pyrethrum, an insecticide; bella dona, used for heart ailments and corn plasters; senna, which provides a cathartic; derris, from which rotenone, an insecticide, is obtained; peppermint, for menthol; and henbane and stramonium, both heart medicines.

Grows More Food For Home Use

Cuba is increasing production of food crops and making wartime strides toward diversification of agriculture. Sugar remains the great cash crop, but the growing of peanuts and food crops such as corn and rice for local consumption is increasing. The shortage of shipping, which raised serious food supply problems in the Carribbean islands after Pearl Harbor, gave impetus to this trend.

To Keep Farm Workers Busy

Canada is endeavoring to direct 150,000 agricultural workers to essential industries during the slack period on the farm, according to the Department of Commerce. Persons whose induction has been postponed because of their status as agricultural workers will be allowed to accept approved essential employment.

Yanks Aid Bomb Victims

The recent birthday party of 4-year-old John Whiting was interrupted when German bombers raided his home village in England. When the siren sounded, the guests entered the home-made shelter in the garden. A few minutes later John, his sister Betty, 5, his grandmother, both his grandfathers, and two cousins, 5 and 6 were all dead—killed by a direct hit on the shelter. American soldiers worked with the villagers through the night to extricate John's father, mother, and two sisters, all critically injured, but alive. "They wouldn't give their names," said a local inhabitant speaking of the Americans, "but if we could find out we would like to send a letter of appreciation to American Army Headquarters."

Orphans Aid Famine Sufferers

War orphans near Chungking, China, recently sent $1,100 to their famine-stricken friends in India. The money was sent along with a letter written by the orphans expressing sympathy for their friends in distress.

Canteen In Australian War Plants

Canteen service is now being supplied in many Australian factories. Typical is the schedule followed in a large munition plant. On the early morning shift there is a "tea break" at 8:15. Food carts-which serve sandwiches, rolls, cakes, tea, and other light refreshments—are sent to the benches. At 10:25 the workers get their main, three-course meal. At 12:30 the carts come around again with tea or milk and fruit. Two night shifts get similar service. Hot meals have paid big dividends in the improved health of workers and more efficient work.

Soviet Women Cut Timber

Tens of thousands of Soviet women are busy getting in stocks of firewood for the winter. During the summer one team of women cut down twice as much timber as a team of skilled men lumberjacks. Their leader received the Order of Lenin. At one lumber camp 27 women's teams are at work. The women have opened clubs, stores, restaurants, and laundries in the settlements, and have built fine highways through the forest, enabling the lumber to be removed much more quickly than was formerly possible.

Soldiers Make Toys

Six American Negro soldiers, all privates, have formed a "toy-makers' guild" and are devoting their spare time to making toys for British children living in the vicinity of their station in England. A goal of at least 100 toys has been set. These toys will be distributed to the children at a Christmas party. Most of the toys are of a military nature—tanks, bombers, fighter planes, and half-tracks—but there are also locomotives and dolls' furniture.

Students Await Deportation

At concentration camps in Norway some 1356 University of Oslo students have been awaiting deportation to Germany where they are to be interned, perhaps until the end of the war. The students, and almost all members of the faculties, were arrested November 30 in a large-scale raid. About 1,300 additional students are still at large and it is believed they are fleeing for the Swedish border, for some have already arrived in Sweden.

Germans Confiscate Church Bells

In many Belgian towns relays of volunteers guard the churches night and day to give warning of the impending removal of any church bells by the Germans. In some places workmen who come to remove the church bells have been stoned and Germans have been obligated to force open belfry doors amid loud and angry protests from the populations, who gather in great demonstrations.

'twas the night before Christmas

And all through America, little sleepyheads lay tumbled in their cribs dreaming of the morrow. Here and there a mother bends over her child, her hands still holding bits of half-forgotten tinsel, her eyes straying to the silver-framed picture of a soldier.

"This is the Christmas we planned, your daddy and I, not so long ago. And we planned to make is star-bright and shining the way a baby's first Christmas should be—with an orange in the toe of your stocking, and an angel on top of the tree.

I am gladder than you know, my darling, that it will come true to you in a few short hours. And even though daddy is far away, he'll be with us in a hundred different ways. People who love each other much are always together.

He'll be here when you first see the Teddy Bear he is giving you—here when we sing the carols h loved best—here when we drink his health and safe return in bumpers of milk—here when we sit in front of the fire and watch the flame pictures until it gets dark.

And when daddy comes home, your brave, handsome, wonderful daddy—there'll be the rest of our lives together, a whole host of glorious Christmases in the braver, brighter, better world he is fighting for!"

Nothing we can say or do can make this a normal Christmas. But we can make it a Merry Christmas—with a glittering tree, a walloping turkey and a whole host of holiday-wrapped surprises. Let's keep the spirit alive for those whose own make-believe worlds are so small and fragil. Let's keep faith with our children this Christmas and every Christmas!

"Let Us Keep Christmas"

Let us keep Christmas says Mrs. Emi lStein, president of the Staffordsburg Homemakers in her message to the club December 16th at the home of Mrs. Lee Faulkner, where the Annual Christmas Party was held. She asks all Homemakers to renew faith in each other. Christmas is believing! It is sharing, giving and loving, but mostly it's believeing in the sweetest story ever told, of Mary and Joseph and their Babe in the manger. Christmas is remembering too this year the Christmas candles will still burn brightly in the U. S. A. but their light falls short in a darkened world.

Conquered nations, cloaked in blackness,, await their for light to shine again, for the true meaning of Christmas is possible only where men are free. Our boys will be coming back some day from the war, back to home and Christmas, and what a day it will be, come when it will, that day will wear its own special air of Christmas, of life and hope, and good things yet to be, of peace on earth and answered prayers. So let us keep Christmas a glad day still, let him find on his return that the old loved ways of home have not been lost. Christmas U. S. A., 1943 is one more Christmas nearer that day when peace and freedom and the dignity of man return to this world, and all men again walk together in good will. So let us all keep Christmas.

Wheat and Pasture Produce Good Hogs.

That feeding feed wheat to hogs on good legume pasture is profitable is shown by the records of E. A. Adkisson of Breckinridge county. Mr. Adkisson started feeding seven registered Poland China pigs the latter part of April. Each weighed 28 pounds and was valued at $5. When six months old, they averaged 219 pounds and sold for $14.75 per hundredweight. The pigs were self-fed 4,8000 pounds of ground wheat, 60 pounds of hog supplement and 40 pounds of soybean oil, and were pastured on a 12-acre field containing red clover, timothy, alfalfa and redtop. Mr. Adkisson stated that the feed costs, exclusive of pasture, was $95, leaving him a margain of approximately $88 above the feed and original cost of the pigs. Farm Agent Kenneth A. Brabant reports that 37 carloads of wheat have been ordered in Breckinridge county this year.

Economists Study Ways To Speed Up Work On The Farm.

Taking a cue from industry, where ways have been found to speed up work and do more per worker, economists at the Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station are investigating possibilities in cutting corners in farming.

Particular attention is being given to tobacco production, with all operations from burning beds to selling the leaf coming under consideration. Fast setting was found to be more accurate in many instances where the speed of travel was steady and the two men setting were of equal ability. The setters reported that easier and more regular movements were obtained at fairly fast speeds.

In studying methods used by farmers, one man was found to be walking about 45 miles in getting 10 acres of tobacco from bulking to stripping and the stalks out again. Some farmers were found pllling stalks directly on wagons or sleds at the stripping room door for spreading on the land, thus saving time and work in handling the stalks.

Haymaking is another farm job which the economists think can be speeded up and more work done per man and more hay saved.

How much machinery may increase farm efficiency, the economists are unable to predict. There now are 2,500 combine harvesters in Kentucky and corn pickers appeared in several counties this season. The number of tractors, pick-up hay balers and other labor saving machinery is increasing.

1943 Merry Christmas

TIMES HAVE CHANGED, but Christmas remains unchanged—the year's outstanding holiday in the timeless cycle of love and good fellowship. In the same old familiar way it gives us pleasure to wish for you in this season of 1943 the most in Christmas cheer and enjoyment.

WALTON -:- KENTUCKY

WHILE destructive battles rage in large areas of the world, a different story is being written in our Southland . . . a story of new industrial achievement, of things yet to come in the stirring world of tomorrow.

The South stands hopefully on the threshold of a new era . . . dreaming of vaster industrial and agricultural expansion. From its fabulous raw resources the laboratories of private industry have in late years wrought miracles of production. Agricultural products have blossomed into new kinds of fabrics, building materials and amazingly useful plastics. New markets and new wealth have been created for southern farmers, commerce and labor. Even now the South boasts many of the largest plants in their respective fields in the world!

Already a major factor in America's arsenal of war production, the South looks forward to a better tomorrow . . . a tomorrow filled with peace, security and happiness . . . a tomorrow when the American Spirit of Free Enterprise will build a Greater Industrial South for the betterment of all mankind.

In War or Peace "The Old Reliable" Aids Southern Progress

Today the L&N's big job is to help Uncle Sam win the war. When "V" day comes, the L&N will again serve the South with modern and dependable transportation — and cooperate in every other way toward making it greater industrially and otherwise. The railroads ask only fair treatment by the public and its lawmakers — that no unequal advantages or subsidies be given their competitors.

Complete information pertaining to plant sites, raw material, power and water supply, or assistance in planning efficient track layouts and service routes, may be obtained by writing the Industrial Development Department of the L&N at Louisville, Ky.

Pvt. Chas. Lebus Stephenson, who is stationed at Camp Wheeler, Ga. writes that he is feeling fine and likes army life fine. He said to tell all his friends "hello" and a Merry Christmas and A Happy New Year.

—v—

Tech. Cpl. Harley Littrell has returned back to camp after spending a ten-day furlough with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Conner Littrell of near Walton and his sisters and brother of Richwood, Cresent Spring, and Covington. Cpl. Littrell is in the 12th Armored Division and received his basic training at Camp Campbell, Ky. He is now stationed at Camp Blankley, Texas. He is well satisfied with army life and after his furlough was quite anxious to return to camp.

—v—

Seaman 2-c Nathan E. Northcutt Jr. who recently returned to Great Lakes after a visit home with his parents has been ill for the past eleven days, but is now able to resume his studies for a pharmacy's mate rating.

—v—

Mr. and Mrs. Conner Littrell have received a letter from their son-in-law, Pvt. Jesse McMillian who is stationed at Camp Blanching, Fla.. He states that he likes army life alright, but he would prefer his cozy home. He is in the Infantry Division.

—v—

Pft. William Roberts, son of Rev. and Mrs. John Roberts, who is stationed at Shreveport, La. was married November 15th to Miss Nella Brown of Boonesville, Ark. Mrs. Roberts returned to her home, they anticipate living in Kentucky after the close of the war.

—v—

Mrs. Conner Littrell has received word that her nephew, Pfc. George Anderson has graduated from Radio School with a percentage of 99 from a station in Wisconsim. He expects to be sent to England soon.

—v—

A new recruit at the U. S. Naval Training Station, Great Lakes, Illinois, is Samuel Jones Hudson, 34, husband of Mrs. Mary Lucille Hudson, Loreco Avenue, Walton, Kentucky.

Now undergoing "boot" training, he is being indoctrinated into Navy Life, and is being instructed in Seamanship, military drill, and naval procedure. Soon, he will be given a series of aptitude tests to determine whether he will be selected to attend one of the Navy's service schools, or will be assigned to active duty at sea.

Upon completion of his recruit training, he will be granted a nine-day leave.

The funeral service was held Wednesday afternoon at 2 p. m. at the home in Owenton, Ky. The many friends of Mrs. Crouse and family extend sympathy to them in this sad hour.

"PEACE"

Our boys are leaving us, one by one
Away from their homes and their life of fun,
But they faced their duty with a serious heart
For each one is willing to do his part;
They are ready to fight for you and for me
On the land, in the air, or even at sea.
They are anxious for this terrible war to be won
That each Dad and Mother may have back their son;
But what are we doing at home today?
We should live close to God and not cease to pray;
We all are anxious for the war to cease
But the only way is a lasting Peace.

God has taught us to love one another
To treat each soul as a loving brother,
But some have hatred in their hearts today
And are not very careful of what they say.
We're partly to blame for being in this war
When we as a Nation have wandered so far;
If we give a little, we feel we've done our bit
But God expects us to live lives that are fit.
If we think our boys can do it all
I'm afraid our Nation is sure to fall,
They need our prayers and a willing heart
And an unselfish will to do our part.

An Armistice is not all we want from this war
But a lasting Peace that will reach near and far;
If our Nation had lived like it should, years ago
We would not be suffering from this terrible woe,
But we've gone pleasure mad and neglected our God
And have been very careless on the road we have trod;
We are not too thankful for our blessings galore
But are always expecting our God to send more,
There is much we must do before this war can be won
When our own beloved Nation may have back each son;
So let's try to make it what it should have been
That we may have Peace and Good Will toward men.

LIVESTOCK NOTES
By County Agent's Office

Sheep

Sheepmen are treating this month large numbers of flocks with Phenothiazine for control of worms. This recommendation is receiving the most widespread adoption of any new livestock practices in recent years according to H. R. Forkner county agent. Research results and local farmers reports indicate most satisfactory results are being secured. The two treatments, one now, or during early December and the other soon after lambing time are most important. Dr. K. W. Ryle, Veterinarian of Burlington has been using this treatment for the past two or three years and reports excellent results.

Horses

Now is the time to treat horses for Bots and intestinal worms. The services of a good veterinarian should be employed in this work. Considerable saving in feed and condition of work stock will result. Act now and save feed.

Farm Meat Supply

Breakfast bacon of high quality can be cured on the farm thru use of bacon box for putting the sides under pressure. Franklin Maurer of Burlington used one of these boxes last year and reports fine bacon produced. Plans are available at the County Agent's Office.

Diseases

Hog Cholera and Black Leg in cattle have caused considerable losses in the County the past two months. A few farmers have lost large parts of their herds. These two diseases can easily be controlled thru immunization of vaccination. The loss of one animal will often pay for several years treatment of herds. Farmers who are in doubt should contact their veterinarin.

Lack of feed and bad quality feed are the most serious causes of livestock diseases. We are now faced with the four most expensive feeding months of the year. Good management will do much to lower costs of production.

NICHOLSON

"Peace on earth good will toward men." The sweet story of angles announcing the Saviuors birth to a little group of walking shepherds is ever new, and causes a flood of sympathy and charity to sweep over the world.

If you want crops of happiness, you must sow seeds of kind thoughtfulness.

The many friends of Rev. Courtland Weldon are pleased to learn that he has recovered from his recent illness.

Mr. Clifford Weldon, noble young son of Rev. and Mrs. Courtland Weldon recently joined the ranks of gallant defenders who would rather die for freedom than live without it.

Deeply appreciated was the kindness of Mrs. John Hume.

AMONG THE COUNTY AGENTS

Ten thousand tons of limestone have been delivered in Breckinridge county in the soil building program.

The Attilla 4-H club of Laure county bought and sold more than enough war bonds and stamps to buy a jeep.

Homemakers' clubs in Garrard county made 15 lap robes for the Red Cross, and gave 10 Reader's Digest subscriptions to boys in the Service.

Approximately 1,700 farm families in Jackson county produced 75 percent or more of their food on the farm this year.

Logan county 4-H'ers produced 58,000 pounds of live pork, beef and chickens, sold $5,400 worth of war bonds and worked 4,000 man hours on farm other than their own.

An average of more than a pound of fat was salvaged in a month by each homemakers' club member in Anderson county, making a total of 1,843 pounds.

Twelve 4-H clubs in Whitley county reported buying $2,713 worth of war bonds and stamps in the recent drive.

Approximately 1,060,134 quarts of food were put up by homemakers in Calloway county.

In Jessamine county, 5,280 acres of hemp for seed were harvested.

Anna Gene Searcy, Carroll county 4-H club member, did an outstanding labor project by helping plow, doing all types of tobacco work, and helping garden and can.

In Ballard county, an estimated 1,800 acres of soybeans were harvested, the straw being for winter roughage.

Four times as much lime was ordered in one month in Lewis county as is generally ordered in the course of a year.

In Warren county, 513 girls and boys are enrolled in 4-H clubs. There is a club in every rural school.

More than 150 pounds of edible soybean seed was sold by one firm in Nelson county, and a condiserable amount by other sources.

Can You Picture KENTUCKY without Farms?

It would take quite a stretch of the imagination to conceive of Kentucky without its rich farmlands. Indeed, if all the food, textiles, and other basic war materials produced on the farms of our State were suddenly lost to America's war effort, it would be as disastrous as the loss of many major battles.

252,894 Kentucky farms today are producing the things needed desperately by the fighting men and war workers of the United Nations. Many thousands of Kentucky's population are "in there pitching"—to set new records for farm output.

The top ranking product in value from Kentucky's fine farms is corn, followed by tobacco and wheat. And these are just a few of the crops and products that our farms are yielding—under a far-sighted policy established by successive legislatures that has given agriculture its rightful place in the State's economy.

Members of the Greyhound organization (a large number of whom grew up on Kentucky farms) have a particular interest in our Kentucky neighbors who live and work on farms and in rural communities. Our buses are, in many cases, their only means of public transportation.

We feel we're helping them to do their big job better—by giving them easy access to nearby towns and cities for marketing crops, buying farm supplies and for seeking relaxation. Our buses have also aided them by bringing farm workers right to their gates. It's all part of the job in which Greyhound takes the greatest pleasure — making near neighbors and good neighbors of all the communities that our buses serve in Kentucky.

2 Kentucky Girls Win Scholarships.

Two canning championships were awarded to Kentucky at the recent National 4-H Club Congress in Chicago.

Mayme Olene Joseph, 17 years old, of Keck, Brethitt county, has done most of the canning for two years in her family of five. In 10 years she canned 7,450 quarts, using mostly products from her own two-acre garden. Lacking equipment, she made a hot-water canner out of a lard can and some wire. She is a senior in high school and is planning to study home economics at the University of Kentucky.

Carolyn Hall, 19, of Crestwood, Oldham county, canned 4,689 quarts of fruits, vegetables and meats in six years. She is a freshman in the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture and Home Economics.

The canning excellence of these two girls won them $200 scholarships given by the National Committee on Boys and Girls Club Work and the Kerr Class Corporation.

Approximately 20,000 girls canned 1,493,493 quarts of food in Kentucky this year. Members of 4-H clubs grew almost 35,000 gardens, as a part of their contribution to the war effort. Production and preservation of food by Kentucky 4-H club members in 1943 was between three and four times greater than in 1942.

GOOD HENS PAY BEST

Good hens pay best according to O. D. Perkinson assistant County Agent. High production per bird is a war time Must.

Every Poultryman during December should carefully carry out the following practices:

1. Rigid culling of non layers and poor producers. Feed is to high to feed poor producers.
2. Provide adequate housing with from 3½ to 4 square feet per bird free from drafts or dampness.
3. Full feed, good laying mash and grain.
4. Provide a "Noon Lunch" in the form of wet mash. Use skim milk if available.
5. Provide plenty of fresh water, prevent freezing of water.
6. Confine birds close to plenty of feed and water until noon.
7. Feed legume hay or give good range.
8. Use a deep litter on floor.
9. Examine birds regularly for lice and the house for mites.

Laying birds should pay a profit now. Cull birds are wasting valuable feed.

Season's Greetings

We've been thinking, folks, that you've been very good to us during 1943, and right now is the most appropriate time to thank you. So thanks, everybody, and a very happy Christmas!

Town and Country Shop

Mrs. Bruce Franks

Dixie Bank Bldg., Walton, Ky.

AS one hands down a good name, Christmas each year hands down its traditions, and all are good. It has been a tradition here to regard the good will of our customers as our most precious asset. In this holiday season of 1943 we extend to you, not as a customer alone, but as a friend, our very best wishes for a . . . Merry Christmas.
